Mrs. Antoni Jacobsen, 67, died at her home on High street, early Friday morning. Besides her husband she is survived by four sons, Andrew, Edward A. and Charles Jacobsen of Stafford Springs, and Anthoni Jacobsen of Norwich. The funeral was held on Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock. Rev. John W. Wilkins officiated and burial was in the Springs cemetery.

Work is progressing rapidly on the new sidewalk on Westford avenue. This will be a big improvement and will add greatly to the appearance of the property on that street.

Human life will be at least 20 years longer within the next 50 years, says the American Public Health Association.

POETRY FOR THE WIDEAWAKES.

PERSPECTIVE.

When you were my little brother,
Not this giant six feet two,
You and I would play together
In the pleasant summer weather
By the spreading old elm tree
Where the birds' nests used to be.

And the way that huge tree towered
To the arching skies of blue!
I am sure you will remember
How from April to September
You and I played hide and seek
'Round the elm tree by the creek!

Why, its very roots were mighty,
And it spread out at the base
So we used to hide around it!
With what happiness we found it!
It was lots of fun to play
By the massive tree each day.

Yesterday I went, dear brother,
Down to visit the old place.
And I saw what I at seven
Thought was surely touching heaven,
And it really seemed to me
Just a small-sized elm tree!

HIS ROOM.

Do you ever slip into his room,
So quiet now, so clean, so cool,
And through the shades of twilight gloom
Glimpse skates and boxing gloves, each tool,
Piles on a shelf—a bat, a ball,
A tennis racket; over all
The scent of shaving soaps and creams.
The goal of early boyhood dreams—
To think of him, your boy at school!

And if a mother's heart you bear,
His room becomes a hallowed place,
And are you think of leaving there
You kneel beside his bed; your face
Is pillowed where so oft his own
Has lain, your boy so lately grown
Into a man; and from your soul
There throbs a prayer; in calm control
You plead before the Throne of Grace.

O God of mother hearts, whose boys
Have gone from home to school or shop,
Where once their whistling, romping noise—
A silence, as if life would stop!
Be with them, God of tenderness;
As they are thine, their young lives bless.
And in temptation's trying hour
Give them of thine all-conquering power;
O God of love, be with our boys.

UNCLE JED'S TALK TO WIDE-AWAKES.

Probably you have noticed how much more girls are engaging in contests and games the same as the boys. It is of course a good thing. Girls have not been considered good sports. Even trained workers, who come in contact with a great many of them in games of various kinds, declare that they don't play a "clean game." Recently a woman coach in a large city said that girls are not fitted to play boys' games. They don't play in a sportsmanlike way, she explained. They do not know how to work for the good of the team. Then she gave an instance of the personal way in which the girls take everything. In one team, she said, she had tried to replace a girl in the last quarter of a game by her substitute in order to give the substitute some practice. The first girl refused to go on playing her part when she heard of it, and all her friends joined in and refused to play, besides.

It isn't the girls' fault, the coach admitted. Boys have been playing good games for generations; all their lives they are trained to be good sports, but it is only in the last few years that the girls have been encouraged to play with anything except dolls. But of course there are girls who play as boys do, though these are exceptions.

It is up to the girls themselves to remove this shadow on their record in athletics. The Wide-Awakes belong to a generation which does not have to encounter as many of the obstacles as befell their mothers and older sisters, who were pioneers in the sports-for-women field. The value of athletics for girls is getting greater and greater recognition, and out of it will come in time a tradition in clean sports and the right team spirit.

LETTERS WRITTEN BY WIDE-AWAKES.

In a Copper Mine.

Dear Uncle Jed: Last year in school we talked about a copper mine. A visit to a copper mine is very interesting. It is best to wear a rubber coat and hat and if possible wear rubber boots. We wear them because water gets into the mine.

A shaft is a very deep hole in the earth. There is a man car that the men use to go to their work and buckets or skips that take the ore to the surface.

We step into the car and it begins to descend. Deeper and deeper it goes into the mine. As we go we catch glimpses of lights through the tunnels. When we get out our guide points out to us the ore. At a distance we can hear the men at work. In order to loosen the ore you have to drill holes to put dynamite in. When it explodes it falls in tons to the floor. It is so much broken up that it is only necessary to shovel it into the cars. Then it is taken in buckets to the smelter.

At busy times they have day shifts and night shifts.

Most of the mines are lighted with electricity. This mine is lighted with lamps and candles.

To our surprise we find that there is fresh air in this mine. Our guide tells us that it is forced in by machinery through pipes. Water gets in the mine and it is very damp so they have to remove it by machinery.

Books

Dear Uncle Jed: We had a teacher who used to rap our knuckles if he saw us use any book improperly. If we dropped one on the floor we would receive a look of scorn.

Oftentimes our teacher would not let us take a book home if it was raining. To overcome this difficulty, several pupils' parents purchased discarded knapsacks.

In our school library we have about two hundred well worn books, and it is from this store together with the books Miss Marsh kindly supplies us we obtain our outside reading.

When we consider such men as Benjamin Franklin and Abraham Lincoln and how rare books were in their days, and yet what great marks they left on the ever moving sands of time, ought we not to be proud to know we have access to books the knowledge of whose contents they could not attain?

Books today may easily be added to a common store or library from which members have the privilege to borrow. Yet how distasteful it is to pick up a book borrowed in this manner and find a smudge on this page, an ink blot on another and just when one is interested, alas, the next page is missing, the leaf is lost and so the meat of the book is gone forever; perhaps we cannot obtain another volume of it and finally, we forget what we have read about because, just where the principal theme opened the page was lost.

Then again, oftentimes books are the property of a community, and it is the preserving of these books with which we should be most interested. In case of any contagious diseases in the home books should be kept away from the patient.

The town now furnishes text books for our school and the longer we can make them last the more economical can the town's money be used such as drawing interest in the bank, and in due time this may lighten the burden of the taxpayers.

Our town gives liberally every year for the purchase of books for our benefit and it's our duty to prize these books by using them with care and diligence as if they came from our own pocketbook.

Naughty Dorothy

Dear Uncle Jed: Dorothy was a little girl about 6 years old. She was not a mean girl, but she liked to have her own way. Dorothy had a nurse who used to take her out every day, and with her dog Buster used to romp and play. Buster seemed almost human. Dorothy often used to pull Buster by the tail and poke her finger in his eyes. She did this all for fun, never stopping to think whether it hurt Buster. Her mother used to say, "Dorothy, your father will have to take your dog away from you if you are not kinder to him."

One bright, sunny day as Dorothy was ready to go out to the park she called Buster as loud as she could, but he was not to be found. Dorothy never spent such a restless morning in the park. She spent many more restless days, too. She now realized how much she loved Buster. She often would say, "Oh! only if Buster would come back to me I would never be unkind to him again." Her father gave her a new little dog, which she called Buster II. But this dog did not know her as Buster did and was not used to her disposition. She soon grew very tired of this puppy.

One day as she sat on the grass, resting her head on her arm, she felt something licking her forehead. Looking up, she saw her long lost Buster. This little lesson did Dorothy good, for she loved Buster after this. Dorothy learned to appreciate what she had.

Little Marmaduke

Dear Uncle Jed: Once there lived a little rabbit by the name of Cotton tail, and he was very fond of a little rabbit named Fluffy.

One day Cottontail and Fluffy were out for a walk and Cottontail asked her to marry him. This she agreed to do, and the next day they were married and went to live in a little hut in the woods. It was not very long before a little son arrived who made them very happy, and they named him Marmaduke.

Marmaduke grew up to be a strong little rabbit and nothing pleased him more than to run away and play by himself.

One day as he was walking through the woods he came before a very large cave and being a very brave little bunny he hopped inside. He was not in very long when he heard a great roar and before him stood a big lion, who asked what he was doing in his house, and before little Marmaduke could answer him he roared "I am going to eat you up" and pouncing on the poor little bunny he swallowed him. It was not very long before a hunter came and shot the lion. He took him home and cut him open and there saw poor little Marmaduke inside the lion. The hunter was so surprised that he ran in the house to get the children to come and see what was in the lion. Marmaduke did not wait for the children to come and see him, he crawled out, and after a tiresome journey he arrived home. His parents were very glad to see him and after hearing his story they gave him a good meal and put him to bed. He soon became well and strong again, and they lived very happily every after.

How Helen Cooked the Rice

Dear Uncle Jed: Helen was living with her grandmother because her father and mother were dead. She had a brother whose name was Jack. He was ten years and Helen was nearly nine.

One day Helen's grandmother told Helen and Jack she was going away to visit a sick lady she knew for a few days. She said to Helen:

"Now Helen, you must let me show you before I go how to cook a few things."

One of them was rice. Helen said, "I guess I can make that and bigger."

Very soon the car came to take the grandmother away.

The grandmother had cooked some things but they did not last long. So Helen began to cook rice. She thought to herself I will leave Jack to look after the rice and I will weed my flower garden. She told Jack to tell her when he thought it was cooked.

Very soon after she reached the garden she heard Jack call, "Helen, oh, come quick," and Helen did.

When she saw the rice all boiling over because she had used two pounds of rice she just screamed. Then she filled all the pans, bowls and cups she could get. At last it stopped.

About that time in came the Uncle Albert, who was followed by the grandmother. She said to the children, "Now, listen, you have saved me from cooking, but never again use that much rice." No every night that week they had rice.

The Canary Bird's Home

Dear Uncle Jed: "Ah, poor me!" thought a little canary bird in the show case of a bird store. "How soon it will be before I have to leave my dear home and go with, I don't know who!" Just then a gruff-looking stranger came in who said he wanted to buy a small canary bird, and pointed to me. I was so stunned for the moment I didn't know what was happening, until I found myself being taken home in a strong, rough arm. I could not help wondering whether or not I would be happy in my new home. I then saw my new master enter a small blacksmith shop, where I saw a dog, whom I at once made friends with. I daily saw horses and ponies come in to be shod. I also made friends with many people. I guess you know what happened next, and I may as well tell you I have had many happy days ever since.

Ten Minutes Too Late.

Dear Uncle Jed: Hark! The clock was striking! I awoke with a sudden jump and counting the strokes found it was seven o'clock. It was half an hour too late. I hustled out of bed as there was only a little while left to dress and eat my breakfast before catching the early car to school.

I kept fooling around the house playing and laughing with the family until, all of a sudden I noticed that there were only ten minutes to get the car, which was about a quarter of a mile distant. I picked up my books and ran and as it was slippery and snowy I reached with difficulty the cross roads which was about five steps from the car track. In my haste I stepped on a piece of ice and slipped, falling into a puddle of water which had been concealed by this slippery ice.

Oh, dear! I was soaked, and above all as I sat there muttering words underneath my breath, the car whizzed by. Of course, this made me angrier. I had to turn back and change my clothes, before the next car.

When I reached home my folks began teasing me. You can imagine my feelings but as I was on the next car speeding on my way to school, I determined that the old saying, "Better late then never," was rather cheerful to recall in such a case.

A Picnic.

Dear Uncle Jed: It has been a long time since I wrote you last. I will now tell you about a picnic.

On June 20 the boys of the B. S. A were invited to a picnic. The girls were to furnish lunch and the boys the place and transportation. We were taken to the appointed place in cars, two of them Fords owned by the leader and assistant of the B. S. A.s.

I was in the first load. There were only eight in besides the driver—what you call a Ford packin.

Soon we arrived at our destination a camp on Aspinook lake.

When we girls in the first load (each car made several trips) got there we put on our bathing suits in the bushes like "regular fellers." We put on our skirts and blouses over them so the rest wouldn't know we were to go in bathing.

The boys soon arrived and started to play ball.

We girls went in swimming.

Then about half past four we ate our lunch and after lunch we all played games.

About eight o'clock we came home. Out of the car most all the way came the strains of "Barney Google."

Most all of the party went to see "The Third Alarm." Everyone said they had a swell time.

A Thief and His Mother.

Dear Uncle Jed: This is the first time I have written to you. I would like to tell you about a thief and his mother. A boy stole a lesson book from one of his school fellows and took it home to his mother. She not only abstained from beating him but encouraged him. The youth advanced to man's estate and stole things of greater value. At last his hands were bound behind him and he was led to the place of public execution. His mother followed the crowd. Then the young man said: "I wish to say something in my mother's ear." She came close to him, when he quickly seized her ear with his teeth and bit it off, and then replied: "If you had beaten me when I first stole that lesson book I would not come to such a disgraceful death."

My Fourth of July Picnic

Dear Uncle Jed: This is my first letter to the Wide-a-Wakes. I will write about my Fourth of July. In the morning when I got up I dressed and had my breakfast. After breakfast we went to Norwich. My uncle met us and took us up to his house, where there a picnic at a lake just this side of Harford. We had the chowder all ready were three autos ready to take us on and it started to rain. There was an empty house near by with a porch on it. We moved our things on to that and had a picnics. While we were eating two more came. There were fourteen of us. It stopped raining so we got home dry.

The Crippled Girl's Act.

Dear Uncle Jed: Once upon a time there was a little crippled girl who wished she were a boy so she could go and fight for her country.

One day a soldier came to her house and asked her for a drink. She gave it to him and then limped out by the track where the train was coming.

She noticed that there was some dynamite on the track. She leaned over and pushed it into a pool of water with her crutch. The men on the train cheered her. When her father heard about it he said it was just as well that she was a girl for no boy would have done that.

The Uses of Wheat

Dear Uncle Jed: Last week I told about the harvesting of wheat. Now I will tell about the uses of it.

The most important use is white flour in the shape of bread. Whole wheat flour is the grain with the husks left on. Whole wheat bread is thought to be very healthful.

When wheat is threshed the hulls are taken off. These are made into a grain called bran. It is used to feed cattle, also a mash for hens. The straw is used for bedding for cattle.

Raising Chickens.

Dear Uncle Jed: I have a hen with 20 chicks. One night my mother counted them and there were 18 chicks. We thought the cats ate them. One morning at 9 o'clock we saw a chick outside. I caught the chick and put it in, and the next morning my father saw another one outside. My father caught it and put that one in.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Strand Theatre.

How hard must a cultured and refined society girl of the "cold-blooded" type be shocked to take the prudishness out of her? How much of the primitive he-man do women in general like to find in their mates?

It's an interesting question that would involve hours of discussion, but the time would be wasted since a clear picturization of the whole question comes to the Strand theatre starting today, when the Universal-Jewel special production, The Abysmal Brute, will be shown.

The Abysmal Brute is Jack London's famous novel of the squared circle, in which Reginald Denny stars for the screen, with Mabel Julienne Scott as his leading lady. It is a Hobart Henley production, which promises a good deal in view of Henley's filming of The Flirt, Booth Tarkington's family classic, which is a remarkable screen success.

Denny is the man, a prize fighter without "the girl" knowing that. Mabel Julienne Scott is cast opposite him as the girl who falls in love with him but is utterly unprepared for the disclosure of his prize fighting activities, which shocks her sensitive, "hot house" feelings.

Would the average girl, raised in a quiet atmosphere of wealth and luxury and unaccustomed to such things as prize fighting, be so rudely shocked by this disclosure as to completely "drop" the man? Or would she, after a time, realize that her viewpoint was narrow and that there were things she didn't understand—one of them that the boxing sport today is one of the cleanest games in the world? The Abysmal Brute clearly illustrates these things.

Well known players who have supporting roles in The Abysmal Brute include Charles French, David Torrence, Hayden Stevenson, Crauford Kent, Buddy Messenger, Neil Craig, Irene Haisman, Dorothea Wolbert, George Stewart, Harry Mann, Kid Wagner, Tom McGuire and others.

In addition to this eight-reel special there will be a comedy and news weekly.

Note: Vaudeville Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

Bread Theatre.

The millions of readers of Frances Hodgson Burnetts world-loved novel, Little Lord Fauntleroy, will be delighted to know that Mary Pickford in reproducing the story for the screen has preserved all its quaintness and charm, and has been especially faithful to the costumes and manners of the period depicted so vividly by the author.

As a vehicle for the lovely Mary, the story is ideal, running as it does the entire gamut of emotional drama, pathos and riotous comedy. It gives her the greatest opportunity she ever has had for the display of that brilliant genius which has so endeared her to the hearts of Mr. World and his Wife. In this play, which is the feature at the Brede theatre today and Tuesday, she has a chance to let the public see her as a mature woman and also as a boy of seven. In the world of dramatic art what could be more difficult? Not only in the same play but in the same play but in the same scenes, will this greatest of all screen artists be seen in these two difficult roles.

Through the medium of double exposure, that most baffling of photographic methods, Miss Pickford is able to appear as two different characters in the same scene, thus producing the most perfect illusion possible.

The Victorian dresses with their puff sleeves, bustles and long trains; the thatched houses and the magnificent castle shown in this film tend to make it an achievement in pictureland.

CHAMPION IS SLIGHT FAVORITE TO BEAT TENDLER IN TONIGHT'S BOUT

New York, July 23.—(By the A. P.)—Benny Leonard, lightweight king, will battle his logical and most dangerous contender, in the opinion of ring critics, when he meets Lew Tendler, Philadelphia southpaw, in a 12-round utlematch tomorrow night at the Yankee stadium.

The Leonard-Tendler go is one of the few "natural matches" for a championship that have been arranged in any boxing division this year. Leading contenders in other classes have been forced for the most part to remain in the background. Tendler, however, is getting his second chance within a year at the 135-pound crown.

Leonard, who has held the lightweight throne against all comers for the past six years, will face his rival with the backing of a majority of experts but there is no less confidence of victory in the challenger's camp. According to their handlers, both will enter the ring at the top of their form. Leonard, despite his comparative inactivity for the past year, has displayed old-time form in training. Tendler, with the knowledge that he gave the titleholder one of the hardest fights of his career when they met in a 12-round engagement at Jersey City last summer, believes that he will turn the tables in decisive fashion this time.

Both boxers rested today at their homes after several weeks of preparation. They will weigh in tomorrow afternoon. Weight forfeits of 10,000 have been deposited by each pugilist.

Arrangements have been made by Jimmy Johnston, matchmaker of the Cromwell A. C., which is promoting the fight to handle a throng of 50,000. With the advance sale nearing the $400,000 mark in receipts, a new record for a lightweight title match was assured, Johnston said. The previous high mark was set at Boyle's Thirty Acres last July when Tendler and Leonard attracted a "gate" of nearly $375,000 and an attendance of about 60,000.

Four other bouts are on the card, the first starting at 5 o'clock, eastern daylight time, with the main contest scheduled to begin at 10 o'clock. In the two principal preliminaries, Babe Herman, San Francisco lightweight, is matched with Joey Fox of England, for eight rounds, while Jack Zivic, Pittsburgh lightweight, is matched with Johnny Darcy, local pugilist, in the 10-round semi-final.

ALBANY BREAKS EVEN WITH SPRINGFIELD

Albany, N. Y., July 23.—Albany and Springfield broke even in today's double header which was marked by terrific hitting. Albany won the first game 12 to 9, and Springfield took the second, 13 to 6. The two teams made 71 hits for a total of 118 bases in the two games, 8 home runs being made. Three of the home runs were inside the park, the first made in this manner in the history of Eastern league ball at Chadwick park. Score by innings:

"JOE" CRANKER HAS JINX ON THE THREADMAKERS

Willimantic, July 23.—"Joe" Cranker, pitcher for the New London Independents has without a doubt beaten the baseball teams that have represented the Thread City more times in the past decade than any team in captivity. He had his jinx working overtime yesterday at Recreation park while his team mates were slaughtering the offerings of "Pete" Daoust and Mathewson, the local boxmen. The Independents breezed under the wire in easy fashion by the score of 12 to 3. It was a free hitting contest, the Independents collecting fifteen safe blows while the local batsmen helped themselves to twelve including a brace of doubles. The Independents made their blows count and took every advantage of the errors of omission and commission by the local players who looked terribly bad. Cranker tightened up when the Threadmakers got on the sacks and forced them to pop up or hit into double plays.

Willimantic scored first in the opening inning when Nichols got a life on an error by Sylvia, stole second and scored when John McInnins threw wide to first to get Hamel. The visitors were blanked in their first half of the opener but piled up four runs on as many hits and two bases on balls that were sandwiched in between. They kept up their slugging tactics in the second which saw the end of Daoust in the box for the locals, scoring two runs in this inning and the same number in the fifth and three in the seventh, errors by Matherson himself helping largely in the production of the latter three.

The locals flashed for a moment in the sixth, hits by Nichols, Hamel, Donahue and Adams with an error by Smith giving them a brace of tallies. This was all they could do in the scoring line, however, double killings snuffing out their chances in the eighth and ninth. Altogether it was a pretty unsatisfactory afternoon for the local fans who turned out in no large numbers than at the previous games, although the admission price had been reduced. The threatening weather probably had something to do with this.

Every man on the New London team secured at least one hit while the topnotchers were John McInnis and Frank Sylvia with three apiece. Lathrop led the American Thread at bat with a double and two singles while Nichols, Hamel, Donohue and Adams each secured two safe blows.

There were a number of good fielding plays, Smith, Sylvia, the McInnis brothers, Ryan Coyle and Foster excelling for the visitors and Lathrop Nichols and Hamel for the losing side. The score:

VELVETMEN OVERWHELM NORWICH A. A. TEAM

The J. B. Martin team took a loose and one-sided game from the Norwich A. A., 15 to 4, Sunday afternoon at the J. B. Martin diamond. The large crowd of fans that attended the game felt keenly disappointed at the showing that the Norwich club put up. One of the primary causes of the defeat of the Norwich team was the accident to Gene Fuller when he threw his arm out. Fuller was in such pain that he fainted. Ellsworth relieved him and pitched very well. Costly errors also gave the Velvetmen plenty of opportunity to score. The score:

MAJOR LEAGUE INTEREST ABOUT REDS' PURSUIT OF GIANTS FOR FLAG

New York, July 22.—Major league interest has centered in the pursuit of the New York Giants in the National league race by the Cincinnati Reds, who, as a result of the past week's play, loom as the world's champions' most dangerous rival.

The Reds today lost part of their recently gained advantage when they lost to St. Louis while the Giants were nosing out Philadelphia, but with the benefit of a long home stay their fine twirling staff is expected to keep the team well in the running. Pat Moran's men are now trailing the McGraw tribe by three and a half games. Pittsburgh, a game behind Cincinnati, also [illegible] with, though the Pirate mound staff is not as well balanced as that of the Reds.

The New York Yankees continued to make a runaway race of the American pennant hunt, stretching their margin over Cleveland today to twelve and a half games by defeating Detroit, while the Indians lost to Washington. After breaking even with the champions earlier in the week, Tris Speaker's men dropped three out of five to the Senators, while the Yankees were taking three out of four from Ty Cobb's drifting Tigers.

The St. Louis Browns, with the best record of any team in the junior circuit for the week, tightened their hold on third place. Chicago, Philadelphia and Detroit are bunched close behind.

Unusually loose play afield marked the week's games, the Boston Red Sox being the worst offenders with a total of 28 errors in ten games.

CHAPPELL WINS PITCHING DUEL FOR TAFTVILLE

Taftville's lone tally came in the first inning, when Jim Murphy clouted the first ball pitched for two bases and then scored on Jarvis' single. REVIVING THE TROLLEYS.

Trolleys have come and trolleys have gone and some of them have come back. Those that have gone never to return will greatly outnumber those that have been revived.

Just at the present time attention is being directed to the reopening of the old Shore Line railway between New Haven and Guilford. This along with the line which continued from that point to Niantic and New London has long been out of service and even the equipment of the section east of Guilford is out of existence to a point in Waterford. The large outlay that was made in the building of that trolley line connecting the many places along the shore was never recovered. It was impossible to get the business to maintain it with the heavy costs that were imposed by the war, and there were sections which never received the patronage that was necessary or needed. Those that might have been interested in the maintenance of such a line had turned their attention to the automobile.

Whether that portion of the line between New Haven and Guilford will prove a paying venture should be soon demonstrated. Much will depend upon the experiment as to whether anything further is done in the way of extending the line to the other communities lying west of the Connecticut river. There are many people to be served along the shore if they are willing to accept the trolley service, and there are more and more who are being brought to a real appreciation of trolley service by having it taken away from them.

Conditions have changed to a bit more favorable since the day when the abandonment of the line through the shore towns was found necessary. Economies in operation are possible and the outlook at this time is for lower rather than higher fares. The revived trolley lines clearly show that there is yet a public demand for such service. Its success and continuance must depend entirely upon the patronage which such service attracts. The Shore Line is making the test.

HOLDING THE NEGROES.

Even if they wanted to, southern states have not been able to disguise the fact that they have suffered and been displeased by the movement of the colored families to the north. It has greatly changed the employment situation and presents a serious problem. States that have depended upon Negro labor for agricultural work are much concerned. Some have taken steps to exclude those who scour the commonwealth for labor to go elsewhere by imposing penalties or exacting exorbitant license fees, while legislation is being sought in the state of Georgia which would make it a felony to seek Negro labor for other states.

It is of course a curious situation. The south is the best place for the Negro. He is accustomed to it and climatic conditions there agree with him the best. Removed to the north he is away from conditions with which he is familiar and invariably endeavors to seek employment in lines which are either overcrowded or entirely unsuited to him.

But it seems to have been a movement which has brought the south to a realization of the value and need of the Negro. States which are doing the most in their efforts to prevent any more from leaving have in the past been offering the greatest encouragement for the migration. Georgia, for instance, by its lynchings, has done its best to drive them out and now that they are going it wants to keep them.

How long is it going to be before the south comes to a full realization of the situation and faces the fact that by its conduct toward the Negro can it make him a better citizen and keep him in the south? It cannot be expected that it is going to keep them there, work them, beat them and kill them just to suit their needs. It is time for the south to come to the realization, while it is being moved to special legislative action, that its best method of keeping the Negro in the southern states is to make a better man of him and make the southern treatment more considerate.

THE END OF VILLA.

There were days when the doings of Francisco Villa were especially conspicuous. For a considerable period of time he threatened to get control of affairs in Mexico, but when he also undertook to disturb the peace and display his defiance of the United States his prestige in Mexico waned. He managed to elude the effort of this government to capture him but it was not long after that General Obregon brought him to terms and since that time he has been leading the life of a rancher and devoting his efforts to peaceful pursuits.

When Villa's career as an outlaw was brought to an end it was a happy day for Mexico. Villa was not an educated military leader but with his natural aptitude in that direction assisted by those who had had a military training he conducted a reign of terror in Mexico and along the border that was bound to worry a weak government.

Obregon did a great thing when he brought about the retirement of Villa as a bandit chief. It meant great relief for Mexico and it was of inestimable benefit to the government. From that time on conditions there have improved. Pacification has made commendable progress and a far more stable government prevails today.

But for the kind of career that he entered Villa would probably never have been heard from. That would have been to the benefit of Mexico and the prolongation of many lives, while the services of such a clever leader would have been of great benefit to that country at times. Villa was the outgrowth of conditions that prevailed in Mexico. He did only what others have done although he did it more effectively than some others. His end is however in keeping with his career.

A strong Mexican government is required to prevent just such outlawry as Villa indulged in. It is necessary for peace and constructive conditions at home and for the support and good will of other nations.

CONFIDENCE IN GENERAL WOOD.

Inasmuch as those who have been contending for the independence of the Philippines have not been able to impress this government with the wisdom of complying with their request at this time, it is difficult to see how they can expect that they will be able to convince the government that they are right and Governor General Wood is wrong in the present trouble in the islands.

It was because of confidence in him that the administration sent General Wood to deal with the conditions in the islands. There has been no reason to believe that that confidence has in any way been shaken. Cuba is a glowing example of what his good judgment has brought about and evidence of what can be expected in the Philippines if his advice is followed.

General Wood has put a stop to conditions which existed before he got there and which were revealed either through his report or otherwise. He has found it necessary to carry out the purposes of this government in rendering its duty to the Philippines. It can be imagined that there are those who have not liked this. It may have interfered with their plans and activities, and because it has they are ready to decry the governor general.

Such isn't going to get far. Until they can present the best kind of evidence that General Wood has been dealing improperly with them they can expect that he will be strongly supported in the position he has taken. The same welfare of the islands that has been sought in the past is still uppermost in the thoughts of this country, and there are reasons for believing that it will be secured through the policies of Governor General Wood rather than through the activities of those who are trying to block him.

INSISTING ON PROTECTION.

Full credit must be given to the judge in Holyoke who announces that inasmuch as fines and sentences in jail of two weeks have not succeeded in reducing the number of drunken auto drivers he will hereafter impose sentences of two months and increase the stay in jail again if that is not sufficient.

That indicates a recognition of the responsibility that rests upon the courts as well as other authorities in bringing about greater safety on the highways. The idea of taking a tolerant attitude against a law-breaking offense which may also be the means of smashing up the property of others or taking the lives of road users has apparently been tried by that judge with unfavorable results. No longer can he consider that he is justly administering the duties of his office and contribute to the growing menace of the highways.

When the time comes that more or all judges take that view of the matter and determine to do full justice to the public as well as the lawbreaker then there will be provided the protection which the people have a right to expect under the laws.

It is important in such cases that the penalty should not only act as a deterrent for the person involved but that it should serve as a warning to others. The idea that driving while intoxicated will be winked at is a dangerous one. It can be removed by letting it be understood that the law means something and that the courts can be expected to uphold the laws and impose sentences in keeping with the seriousness of the offense.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The man on the corner says: For some life is one blunder after another.

There are vaccination marks and there are vacation marks. But they are easily distinguished.

Is there any chance that Mr. Bok's $100,000 prize will be awarded before it has a chance to double itself at compound interest?

New York bricklayers are to make a sacrifice and work on schoolhouses for $12 a day. Many would consider that an opportunity.

A new serum has been discovered that will absolutely prevent the measles. But who would think of skipping the fun having the measles?

There would be interest in the fact that wholesale prices are declining if it were so that retail prices were showing the effects of it.

That defiance of government that is being displayed by the leaders of the miners in Nova Scotia has reached the stage of being dangerous.

WOMAN IN LIFE AND IN THE KITCHEN

SUGGESTIONS FOR THE HOUSEWIFE

When making a pie of juicy fruit, always dust a little flour with the sugar. This thickens the fruit juice and leaves a rich and delicious flavor.

The fruit in solid cake will sink to the bottom if baked in a slow oven. Heavy streaks through a cake will undoubtedly appear if the butter and sugar are not thoroughly beaten, or if the butter is not properly rubbed into the flour.

Morocco leather can be freshened after washing with warm water and a mild soap by rubbing with a cloth dipped in the white of egg.

Mineral wool is splendid for cleaning the kitchen range and also aluminum utensils.

Keep a lump of camphor in a drawer or cupboard where silver is stored and it will not need cleaning so often.

Don't cook too much at a time, particularly in the summer when food is not easily kept.

A teaspoonful of water added to the white of an egg will help to make it whip quickly and increase the apparent quality.

Moisten grease spots with cold water and soda before scrubbing, as this will cause them to be more easily removed.

Soak new brooms in strong hot salt water before using. This toughens the bristles and makes the broom last longer.

If some of your fruit jars are old and you have any doubt about their being perfectly airtight, dip the tops in melted paraffin.

Paraffin which has been used over jelly may usually be cleaned and used again. Many times all that is necessary is to hold it under the faucet and clean with a brush. If necessary it can be melted and strained through cheese cloth.

When cooking apples, never touch them with a steel fork or knife. A silvered knife should be used and a wooden spoon or fork in stirring or pulping the food. Otherwise it will have a sharp and acrid taste.

If hot-water bottles and other articles made of india rubber are washed every two months with water to which a little soda or ammonia has been added, it will prevent them from getting hard.

In scrubbing tables or floors the easiest plan is to cover only a small surface at once, thoroughly cleaning and drying that portion of wood that is easily within reach. In this way the work will be found less tiring.

MADE AT HOME

One housewife makes a substantial saving each year by preparing her own baking powder. The importance is stressed of obtaining pure ingredients and sifting these together four or five times until they are thoroughly incorporated. A quantity is done at once and stored in perfectly clean and dry fruit cans, a smaller amount being dipped out into an air-tight container for everyday use. The rule is:

Pure bicarbonate of soda or regular baking soda, eight ounces; rice flour, four ounces; pure cream of tartar, sixteen ounces; cornstarch four ounces.

If the rice flour is not at hand wheat flour may be used, or eight ounces of cornstarch. This makes two full pounds and is used in the regular manner.

WASHING STAINED BOTTLES

To wash bottles that have become stained put in newspaper torn into shreds, then half fill with hot, soapy water in which has been dissolved a little washing soda. Let it stand for about half an hour, shaking occasionally. Rinse with clear water, drain and dry.

HEALTH AND BEAUTY

Washing your hands in milk or buttermilk each evening is one way to keep the devastating effects of housework from showing on them.

Milk is a valuable food and should have a place in every diet. Those who do not care to drink it should take it in soups or other cooked forms.

If you have spent the day doing fine sewing or any work that required close observation, bathe your eyes in hot water and then in cold before retiring. It will ease any congestion and calm the nerves.

Before going on the beach rub the skin full of heavy cold cream, then cover thickly with powder, but that doesn't matter. It won't wash off much of the cream.

PROTECT HAIR AGAINST SALT WATER

Swims are within the reach of some fortunate people all year round. Whether you follow the warm weather or not, have the summer for swimming.

Do you remember to protect your hair from the ravages of salt water by the proper kinds of chamois bands and rubber caps? Do you remember to put the cream on your face and neck and arms that will kept them from burning disgracefully and making you wretched? The women who tan becomingly do it so gradually that one is hardly conscious of it

STOPS SEASICKNESS

The following formula is said to be a preventive against seasickness: Take a bromide of soda, three drams; bromide of ammonia, two drams; peppermint water, three ounces; mix thoroughly and take a teaspoonful in a wineglassful of cold water before each meal and before bedtime.

Take for three days before your journey begins and thereafter it will not be needed. Lemons are very helpful also in preventing and alleviating seasickness.

EVERYTHING YARN TRIMMED

From the sport dress to the morning costume, worsted yarn is used as trimming. The yarn is frequently braided and used as a braid. Even the chiffon evening dress, the silk dress and wash materials are trimmed with crushed yarn this year.

DICTATES OF FASHION

Charming paletots are fur trimmed and embroidered.

White linen frocks are very cool and very smart now when made sleeveless and bound with some color. Drawn-work is also a popular adornment.

The summer suit of silk is more popular this year than it has been for many seasons. Striped crepe and figured lightweight brocades are seen.

Many of the newest hats show the feathers or ribbon bows directly in front. The poke shape is very stylish.

A novelty in Paris is the coat dress made of tapestry. It is a wrap around model, showing a lining of green that harmonizes with the green in the dress fabric.

One of the pretty ideas for summer wear is the white linen skirt, which is worn with a pleated over-blouse of India print. With this is worn a little bolero jacket of the linen, made on very plain and simple lines.

Hats today often match the sash for an afternoon costume. Thus, a frock of white organdie trimmed with lace has a sash of apricot moire. The hat is of apricot moire trimmed with the white organdie.

Dimity so sheer as to be almost transparent is being used today for summer frocks. It is embroidered lightly in a contrasting color and decorated further with rows of narrow lace. Sometimes two or three panels of a contrasting color are sewn on the underskirt, to show more prettily through the color of the frock itself.

An evening frock at present some times imitates the tone of a summer night. One such frock is of starry silver tissue touched here and there with deep soft blue. The train and a long streamer ribbon hanging from one hip are lined with black plush.

LUNCHEON SETS

Extremely pretty is a luncheon set of linen bordered with lavender checked gingham. Each corner has a pansy motif made of lavender chambray and lavender and white checked gingham.

DENTED WOODWORK

If a dent occurs in your woodwork or furniture, apply a cloth moistened with very hot water as soon as possible and keep it there until the dent is raised. Then the surface must be refinished.

SUIT FOR YOUNG GIRL

A most attractive suit for a young girl has a skirt of blue plaited crepe de chine, a cavalier blouse of red with white organdie collar and cuffs and a plaited blue cape reaching just to the hips. Other models show effective combinations of gray and white blue and white and Lanvin green and white.

MODISH TASSELS

A smart finish for sashes and panels is a tassel made of narrow ribbon ends. Number 1 satin ribbon is desirable and should be cut into six inch lengths for large heavy tassels and into three-inch lengths for small tassels. Clover and sweet pea shades may be combined with artistic effect for sashes and panels on organdie and light summer silks. Black ribbon make attractive tassels for dark georgette and silk crepes. A combination of many rich colors is exceedingly effective on frocks of neutral tints.

THE SWEATER SASH

Summer sweaters have sport sashes of wide satin or faille ribbon, which are bordered with many rows of narrow ribbon. The crocheted ribbon sash is likewise popular on sweaters and sport clothes. The narrowest ribbon is used for crochet purposes. The ends fly loose as fringe or are fashioned into tassels.

COCARDES ON FELT HATS

The sole trimming on many of the new felt hats is an immense cocarde of grosgrain ribbon, placed on the crown so that it covers one half of the circumference and two-thirds of the surface of the crown, while a fringe of ribbon ends hangs over the edge of the brim. Black and white novelty ribbon is very good for this purpose.

LAUNDRY HINTS

It is an excellent idea to cover both sides of your ironing board instead of just one—then use one side for dark, serge materials that discolor and stain and the other for white articles. Keep the board in a bag made just to fit it.

To stop a leak until you have the services of a plumber, mix whiting, yellow soap and a little water to a paste and cover the hole.

Write your name in indelible ink on linen tapes and sew on in an inconspicuous place to your linens if you do not care to mark the material itself.

When pressing trousers or other articles of clothing where creases are necessary, add a teaspoon of sugar to a cup of water and sponge crease with it. You will find the crease will stay in twice as long.

QUAINT BEDSPREADS

Bedspreads that are exceedingly good looking are also of unbleached muslin, but have two broad insertions, a foot wide, lengthwise of Tuscan lace. This spread would be attractive in a room curtained with Tuscany net with its coarse meshes.

NOVELTIES FOR FALL HATS

A novelty which is being shown is seen in the combination of bright red poppies with pussy willows; large drooping body shapes in natural color as well as in the bright red are trimmed with the combination laid around the crown or just across the brim front.

Small felt pokes are popular in white or in yellow, and in many cases in a combination of the two colors, especially the white felt draped in yellow crepe or in a very tight draping of yellow velvet. Quantities of brown felts are shown as well, and these are trimmed almost entirely with self color crepe or velvet drapes, as just a single flower on the side brim, the yellow pond lily having the preference as a trim for the brown hat.

BROWN LACES TIGHTLY DRAPED

Brown laces are now being used as a very tight drape over natural straw bodies. A new model is a large, short back shape of natural leghorn with a cocoa brown, very fine lace veil draped over the entire hat and trailing off on one side very slightly. The lace is drawn so tightly over the entire shape that it seems to be the fabric of which the hat is made.

It is noticed that kiddies' hats give the preference of the straw hat, in particular the natural leghorn shape in drooping lines, with either one large flat cocarde of cream Valenciennes lace at one side, or both. This is keeping the hat practically in the same tone and as a summer item is one which is liked very well, it is said.

CONCERNING WOMEN

Mrs. Florence Davenport, of San Francisco, earns her living as a painter and as a guide to parties of tourists visiting Paris.

English women candidates for public office have the advantage, as compared with American women, of being able to choose their constituencies!

To Great Britain is due the credit of having the first organization which bore the name Young Women's Christian Association, being first founded in 1884.

The Pike's Peak Turkey Growers' Association is an organization of women which embraces El Paso County, Colorado. The association meets once a month and studies breeds, raising, marketing, and is purely cooperative.

FOR THE OILCLOTH

Oilcloth should be washed with warm water to which a little starch (made with boiling water) has been added. Soap should on no account be used.

GINGHAM FOR SHADES

A charming effect is given the summer porch or boudoir, or even the living room, by the pleated gingham shade on the lamp. In fine check and in blue, pink, green, red or yellow, these shades have a seasonable, airy appearance, in addition to softening the light.

RECIPES

Ginger Punch—Finely chop Canton preserved ginger; there should be one and one half cups of cold water and one cup of sugar, place over a low fire and let boil twenty minutes; add one cup of orange juice and three-fourths cup of lemon juice. Cool and strain through a double fold of cheese cloth or a jelly bag and squeeze out all the juice possible. Add three tablespoons of the ginger syrup drained from the jar. Chill and dilute with cracked ice and sparkling water. This punch may be diluted with ginger ale; if this is done then omit the ginger sirup. After squeezing out the juice the sirup may be put into fruit jars and stored in the refrigerator. Use as directed.

Rhubarb Punch—Wash, drain and cut four pounds of rhubarb in one-inch pieces, without peeling Add one quart of water, one small bay leaf and cook twenty minutes, or until the rhubarb is soft. Strain through a double fold of cheesecloth; do not squeeze the pulp, as it will cloud the juice. Add two cups of orange juice, one cup of lemon juice and one half cup of ginger sirup taken from a jar of preserved Canton ginger. Add sugar to sweeten to taste (about two and one-half cups). Cook five minutes after the boiling point is reached. Strain again. Chill and color a deep pink, using fruit red color paste, and dilute with sparkling water or ginger ale and crushed ice. If ginger ale is used the ginger sirup may be omitted. The recipe will serve thirty people, one sherbet glass each. This punch may be stored in glass fruit jars and diluted as needed. It should be kept in the refrigerator after turning into the jars.

IN THE PUBLIC EYE

In September, 1870, a little Dutch boy, with his parents and an elder brother landed at New York. The father, a professional man, who had lost a fortune in unwise speculation, had decided to make a fresh start. Now that little boy, Edward W. Bok, has offered a prize of $100,000 for the American who brings forward the best practicable plan for the co-operation of the United States with other nations in attaining and preserving world peace. Mr. Bok was six years old when he arrived in America. He had to go to school, but he had also to earn money to help the family exchequer, so he washed windows, sold cakes in the afternoon, and delivered weekly papers on Saturday mornings. The publishing business attracted him as he grew up, and at the youthful age of 19 he established a successful magazine in Brooklyn. At 25 he became editor of one of the foremost periodicals in America, and when he retired from this position several years ago the journal had a sale of two million copies monthly and carried advertisements worth a million dollars in each issue.

Stories That Recall Others

Not a Silver Lining.

Just before the children, four in number, were to go away to school, their uncle, who was paying the tuition, called them to him. Visions of a bountiful allowance danced before their eyes, especially the boys.

They walked the hot dusty mile, up hill to their uncle's house. Dutifully they listened to a lecture of "do's" and "don't's." Finally uncle reached into his money pocket.

He pulled out some stamps. To each one he gave enough stamps to last all the term. The boys looked chagrined. The girls giggled at the boys. All thanked him and trudged the mile to their home.

Embarrassing Situation.

The youngest of a family of several children was recently hurt. A doctor was called to attend him. After the child's wounds had been dressed, with the assistance of his assembled brothers and sisters, the doctor turned to the child's mother and said:

"That little fellow must be kept quiet, and the best thing to do is for you to send half of these children home."

"I don't know how I'll do it, unless I lock them in the kitchen, as they all belong here," she said.

Wilder Than the Animals.

"With all our so-called wisdom and civilization, we have not learned much about dress," said one park bench philosopher to another, wiping the perspiration from his brow and from beneath a wilted collar.

"You're right," said the other, his roving eye catching a glimpse of a feminine apparition as it flitted by "Some of the styles in women's dress I've seen would make Mark Anthony weep."

"What I was about to say," the other continued, "was that a sweltering day like this is not time for a coat." He began to shed that part of his raiment. "Speaking of extremes, I just passed a woman wearing a heavy cape and furs about her neck. Even wild animals shed their fur in summer time."

"The trouble is," said the other, "some women are wilder than the animals."

Wives of Famous Men

Jane Baillie Welsh, Wife of Thomas Carlyle

Seldom has a marriage been the center of so much discussion as that of Thomas Carlyle, British essayist, philosopher and historian, and Jane Baillie Welsh, brilliant and beautiful daughter of a learned man. The two met through Edward Irving, an intimate friend of Carlyle's, to whom Miss Welsh was at the time practically engaged. They were intellectually attracted at once, and soon were engaged upon a correspondence which has been published in several forms.

Because of the strongly mental character of their love affair, it has been asserted by some biographers that their marriage was a platonic one. This however, has been denied in other biographics, notably in the one written by the essayist's brother, Alexander Carlyle.

Miss Welsh was strongly attached to Carlyle, and had a deep reverance for his intellectual attainments. She was, however, intensely practical, and refused to marry him until he should be able to provide for her in a satisfactory manner. He, on the other hand, did not wish to injure his art by taking the more remunerative paths to success, and expected her to share his hardships. Ultimately, after many discussions and much argument, they were married on Oct. 17, 1826.

The Carlyles lived an interesting if irregular life at Comely Bank, Edinburgh, after rejecting in turn life with Mrs. Carlyle's mother and the use of a dreary and remote farm belonging to the same lady. Soon their brilliance and achievements made their house a magnet for the best minds of the day, notably Lord Francis Jeffery, editor of the Edinburgh Review, who published much of Carlyle's work and became deeply attached to Mrs. Carlyle.

Later, they went to live on Mrs. Welsh's farm, and Mrs. Carlyle, whose devotion to her husband's work was transcendant, sacrificed her happiness and her health in order that he might write undisturbed. Then, reduced to dire circumstances, the Carlyles went to London, where he searched for work, but found little to do or none. They returned to Edinburgh and later went back to London. Through all these vicissitudes Mrs. Carlyle followed her brilliant, erratic husband faithfully.

Success

Comes to him who serves the best. He serves best who serves most efficiently—and most economically.

Frankly, we are after the tire business of Norwich. If we are to be successful in securing it, we realize that we must SERVE THE BEST. We must give the greatest value, the most mileage and least tire trouble—or our competitors will give us a proper licking.

We never did like to take a licking—so we decided that we must sell the best tire to be had. We have sold five or six different brands of tires—and stopped selling them. They either gave too much trouble or were just average good tires.

We made up our minds that we must watch our step in picking our next tire. We searched the country over, investigated carefully, bought the wholesale agency, and offer you, with our personal recommendation and endorsement

THE MONTFORD CORD TIRES

It is the best tire we ever saw. 35x5 cords on Reo trucks carrying heavy loads are giving exceptional mileage. 30x3½ cords will lick any tire ever put on a flivver. It doesn't know how to rim-cut, wears like iron and gives almost unbelievable mileage.

INJURED ON HARTFORD-NEW LONDON TURNPIKE

The injured were taken to a New London hospital.

WHIRLWIND RIPS UP TREES, FLATTENS CROPS AND MOVES SMALL BUILDINGS

Houses were damaged, sheds blown to kindling wood and trees ripped up by the roots, limbs in some cases being carried for long distances, and crops were beaten flat to the ground by a terrific electrical storm and whirlwind that swept over the country around Norwich Saturday afternoon about 5 o'clock.

The storm seemed to divide into two sections as it struck in at the head of the Thames river, coming up the east side along the Military highway below the Submarine base, uprooting trees by the score and hurling them across the roadway, blocking traffic until the wreckage could be cleared away.

In Colchester, Bozrahville and Franklin the wind swept down with a forces estimated at over 75 miles an hour and swirling about it picked up everything in its path, doing damage to apple crops that mean great losses to farmers everywhere in that section.

Sweeping up from the west almost without warning, came the worst electrical storm ever seen in these parts, lightning striking often and great hail stones battering down the standing crops in the field. Accompanying the storm was a gale of wind described by those who saw it as shaped like a huge black funnel.

Descending on Bozrahville, the wind picked up huge maple and elm trees and whirled them down, blocking the Norwich-Colchester highway for several hours before the road could be cleared by gangs out chopping away the trees. At the farm of John Starr Sullivan a huge tree was torn up by the roots and swirled against the house, tearing a great hole in the rear corner of the building. At the farm of Samuel Becker even worse damage was done, the orchard here being left a tangled mass of broken trees and limbs, the apple crop almost completely destroyed. Striking the buildings, the wind ripped the silo away and hurled it to the ground, felled a great tree against the back of the house, blew out the windows and ripped off the corner of the roof of the house.

At the home of Mr. Kofkoff a small building used for sleeping quarters was torn from its foundations by the gale and left lying on one side, trees in the yard and orchard uprooted, and the apple crop destroyed.

The home of David Schwartz was also visited by the twisting wind and three large trees were blown down, the roof of a summer kitchen carried off and a small building blown down and the boards scattered about the yard.

Carried Building 200 Feet.

Heading east from Bozrahville, the wind descended on Franklin and again left a mass of wreckage in its wake. The farm of C. W. Frink on the Norwich-Willimantic highway suffered a heavy loss. A large chicken house, 20x25, and a scratch feed house were picked up as though match boxes and the side walls twisted, the boards being scattered about the yard. The scratch feed house was picked from its foundation and parts of it whirled into the air and deposited in a lot nearly 200 feet away. Five great apple trees were blown to the ground and in the orchard nearly every tree suffered damage from broken limbs, while the apple crop was seriously damaged, much of the green crop being beaten to the ground by great hailstones, or snapped off during the rampage of the whirlwind, which first came from the west then turned and came in a semi-circle from the east. The front yard of the home was piled deep with trees and branches and the fields nearby were flattened to the earth.

The Lewis Smith place was also badly damaged, great trees being uprooted most all being damaged by the gale.

Three Miles Wide

The storm seemed to be about three miles in width in Franklin and swept an area reaching from the railroad crossing in Yantic to Smith's corner on the state highway, along all this distance the trees being broken off short or high from the ground were they snapped under the tarriffic pressure.

Above the Yantic bridge was a huge oak tree that had been twisted in the gale until it fell, ripping up the roots which stood out into the highway, blocking half the road.

At the intersection of the roads at Franklin a huge elm tree, one of the old landmarks of the Norwich-Willimantic highway, was down blocking the highway, another was down in the yard of Joseph D. Pfeiffer at Yantic, three or four in the yard at the Ladd place, in fact along the highway for nearly two miles the sides were strewn with wreckage of trees, traffic being blocked for some time before the trees could be cleared away.

Damage in Thousands

The storm evidently lasted but fifteen to twenty minutes but the damage done will take weeks to clear away and will run into the thousands of dollars. Indications are that the apple crop of farmers in the storm-hit area is practically a loss, and in many cases it is feared that the corn and standing crops have been damaged beyond repair.

Reports similar to those at the Frink farm were heard from families living on the back road to Lebanon, now under repair, and when attempts were made to send traffic around the tie up, by this route many routes became held up when huge trees were found lying across the highway.

A Norwich man who came down from Hartford via Colchester Saturday night said that similar scenes were common along the Hartford-New London highway, where over twenty great trees tied up the highway for over an hour shortly after 5 o'clock.

No Persons Injured

As far as could be learned there were no injuries to persons Saturday because of the storm, a remarkable thing considering the heavy traffic on roads at that hour.

From outlying sections stories come in of freaks played by the storm, one from New London being about a Ford car that had been parked on the street which was hit by the wind and sent, rolling down the center of the street at a fast clip, making the whole journey without striking a passing automobile.

Another comes from Bozrah where a family is said to be minus a small outhouse. This case is described as peculiar for all that is left to prove that a shed stood in the yard is the foundation, the boards being scattered along the lots for several hundred feet.

Rain and Wind In Norwich

Norwich fortunately did not feel the effects of the storm, simply getting a short but heavy downpour of rain and a stiff wind.

The telephone people suffered heavy damages to wires and poles in the areas hit by the gale and all day Sunday working crews were out replacing poles and stringing wires to repair the crippled service. Further out gangs from Bridgeport and New Haven were reported at work on the telegraph wires that had been ripped from the poles that had been snapped off and blown to the ground during the storm.

That the storm evidently picked scattered areas for its devastating work is shown by the fact that Salem, Baltic, Lisbon, Preston, Lebanon, Yantic and upper Norwich Town escaped the damaging winds, although in several of these places hail wrecked crops to great extent and a strong wind accompanied the thunder and lightning.

CRASHED INTO POLE AT QUAKER HILL CURVE

Early Saturday morning a Hudson touring car driven by Ralph Valentine of Norwich was totally wrecked on the curve in front of the Eldridge home at Quaker Hill when it crashed into a telephone pole at the side of the road. Valentine with his father was on his way to New London to meet relatives who were coming in on the New London line steamer. He was making fast time along the straight cement stretch just before the curve and had gained such speed that he was unable to make the turn.

His car shot across the road, across the car tracks, the left front wheel crashing the pole demolishing the wheel, ripping off the mudguards, running board, spare tire, and rear wheel. The force of the impact whirled the car completely around and in so doing demolished the right rear wheel, the car coming to a stop directly across the car tracks.

Valentine was uninjured but his father received a small cut on his chin and severe bruises about the body. He was taken to Norwich in a passing automobile.

The crash awakened residents in the vicinity who notified the state police barracks at Groton and an officer was sent to the wreck. Valentine was ordered to appear before Justice Thomas F. Morton in Waterford this (Monday) evening to answer to a charge of reckless driving.

The car was later towed to Perry's garage at Montville. A peculiar incident of the accident is that the spare tire which was carried on the running board of the car has not been found. No automobiles passed the wreck between the time of the accident and the time it was removed to the garage, therefore the tire could not have been taken away. The first trolley to New London from Norwich was held up for a half hour while the wrecked car was being removed from the rails.

NORWICH NAVAL RESERVES GAIN CREDIT ON CRUISE

With the Norwich and New London Unit of United States Naval Reserves on board the Eagle 27 at Nantucket all is well. The boys are enjoying their sailor life to the full after the usual touches of shakey stomachs due to unsteady decks.

Norwich has some very creditable sailor-men, and their orderly conduct and cheerful readiness to obey any order or perform any duty has found ready praise from everyone. With them are officers and men from other units located in the cities of New Haven, Hartford and Waterbury and as they have come into contact with units from other states they have established high records for the state of Connecticut. The Eagle 27 and sub-chasers 102 and 171 form the squadron from Connecticut.

The boats arrived in Nantucket after the trip from Provincetown, Mass., and every night finds the squadron anchored off some new port, and the men enjoy liberty each night, and everywhere find a welcome from the citizens.

Lieutenant-Commander Smith of Hartford is squadron commander, and he as well as every other officer on board, makes it a point to consider the welfare of every man on board before his own.

The Norwich boys are sorry that more of the home town boys are not along on the cruise because they realize others are missing a good time. Officers from other cities have stated that they would like to see more boys of the type Norwich has sent on the cruise and it is certain that the Norwich boys have won a warm place in the hearts of the other Connecticut units.

Everyone on board is looking forward to the grand finals of the cruise, which will be New York City where the Assistant Secretary of the Navy to review the Reserve Fleet in the North River.

In telling of the trip Lieutenant F. R. Craven of this city, says that from now on, one may be able to listen in on a sea yarn whenever he visits the reserve unit for the Norwich boys have added more than one yarn to the pages of their book of experience.

With the success of the trip the Norwich unit expects to come home and enroll many new members, feeling sure that the trip has proven it to be a great life. They are also anxious to see the numbers swell for the Norwich boys look forward to receiving an Eagle boat for themselves, this to come when sufficient numbers have been enrolled in the Norwich unit.

DEPORTING ALIENS WHO HAVE BEEN PUBLIC CHARGES

Deportation of 198 aliens by the state of Connecticut in the fiscal year ended June 30 has been reported to State Treasurer Gilpatric by Raymond F. Gates, head of the department of state agencies and institutions. All of them would have been public charges on the state for an indefinite period but for their repatriation, according to Mr. Gates.

Vigorous steps further to restrict immigration and to obviate government "red tape" which seriously hampers the state in its deportation work were recommended. "As the department views the situation, numbers of immigrants are not what the state desires," said a statement laid before the treasurer, and his attention was called to the fact that the percentage of aliens and aliens' children in the already overcrowded state institutions is so high that strictly Connecticut cases are forced to wait.

Only 322 of 2,765 inmates at the Connecticut state hospital for the insane at Middletown last month were found to be the children of native-born parents. One thousand and eighty-eight, or 39.34 per cent., were alien born and 1,345, or 48.65 per cent., were children of foreign-born parents. The situation was characterized by the report as "astounding." Approximately the same ratio was found to exist at the Norwich state hospital for the insane, while 651 of the 695 beds at the five state tuberculosis sanatoria were occupied by aliens or persons of foreign extraction. With 322 defective children awaiting admission to the Mansfield state training school and hospital, 56 per cent. of the accommodations of the institution are given up to aliens or foreign-born children. The institutions themselves are not responsible for the situation.

It was maintained in the statement that economic problems which far outweigh any present shortage of labor" are presented by the present system of immigration. "Institutional care for certain cases of mental disease, feeble-mindedness and tuberculosis is unknown in many parts of Europe," it continued. "Unrestricted immigration is bound to increase the demand upon American institutional treatment as well as presenting enormously enlarged problems for social adjustment and attention." Vigorous restrictions on quantity with a careful sifting of the qualities was suggested on the ground that while, biologically, immigration may be assimilated and Americanized in one generation sociologically this cannot be done for many generations, if ever.

The Immigration Menace.

The immigration menace was considered by the department to be more serious in Connecticut than in most other states, as the state is not only "a direct pathway between the great ports of New York and Boston," but has large industries which contain "a roving class of laborers" who are "far from being stabilizers of society or industry." Individuals and families having absolutely no claim upon this state were represented as "continually appearing here and seeking public aid for various reasons." When this class, "after a few weeks, and in many instances, days, come, through one cause or another, in need of assistance from the public treasury," it becomes the duty of the department of state agencies and institutions to take up their cases, and deportation is frequently resorted to.

"As they have no settlement within any town of the state, municipalities are relieved from serious financial obligations," according to the statement. "While the period of dependency is not great in any one particular case, the number of the cases is large, thus demanding constant investigation and expenses. The total number of applications during the year was 1,334, involving thirty-eight nationalities, and the aggregate number of persons aided for all causes was 1,672. Workers of the department made 4,150 investigations and visits during the year on these cases.

Few Out of Work.

"The number of applications received during the year strictly because of unemployment numbered only eighteen, involving fifty-one persons. The number of unemployment applications for the previous year totalled 1,208.

"It is necessary that this division continually assist persons to return from this state to their natural place of residence or settlement, and, in cases of aliens, to carry out deportation and repatriation, thus relieving Connecticut from long periods of expense for many institutional cases. During the year this department conducted 136 transfers aggregating 277 persons and there were conducted by the department deportations involving 198 individuals.

"Seemingly unnecessary delays on account of federal "red taps" were deplored and it was stated that "it is weeks and sometimes months before final action is consummated in these strictly federal cases and, in the interim, the state is meeting the expense incurred."

GUARDS SLAY INMATE OF ILLINOIS HOSPITAL

Chester, Ills., July 22.—(By The A. P.)—One inmate of the Illinois hospital for criminal insane was slain by guards when thirty-one inmates battled their way through the bars of the institution and made a break for freedom. The delivery was effected after the inmates had stabbed two guards. Four of the inmates were recaptured, twenty-six being at large.

The inmate killed, named Jackson, was sentenced from Chicago for murder. Until recently he has been confined in the Illinois state penitentiary at Joliet.

Physicians said the wounded guards had little chance for recovery. Residents of Chester and surrounding towns are terrorized.

The insane criminals made their escape from an iron cage known as the "bull pen." About seventy-five inmates were in the pen when the break was made. They had been brought there under the surveillance of two guards to get an "airing" before being confined to their cells for the night.

Several of the inmates who had secretly armed themselves with knives, fell upon the two guards. As the Illinois law forbids the guards carrying weapons inside the "bull pen" they were easy victims for their assailants.

A moment later more than a score of the inmates seized chairs and benches and began an assault upon the iron bars of their prison. The bars, which are three-fourths of an inch thick, did not long resist the terrific battering and before guards could arrive from other parts of the building a passageway had been created.

Thirty-one men poured through the aperture and scattered in all directions. The arrival of guards prevented further escape.

Jackson, who was the last to leave the "bull pen" was shot to death in a fight with the guard.

Within a few minutes after the escape forty guards from the hospital from the Southern Illinois state penitentiary, which also is located near Chester, had taken up pursuit of the fugitives. Local police and citizens posses joined in the chase.

DANIELSON AND PUTNAM NEWS

DANIELSON

Peter Ennis of Morris avenue was languishing in a cell at the police station during Sunday awaiting his appearance in the town court this morning to face a charge alleging violation of the liquor laws. Ennis was arrested Saturday night after Deputy Sheriff Charles E. Dyer and Chief John McFarland raided his home, seized a quantity of beer, a bottle of white mule and another bottle partly filled with wine and broke up a drinking party numbering half a dozen or more men.

Empty bottles were about the kitchen and the cases of beer that were seized were taken from under a bed. The raid followed complaints the officials have had relative to alleged going on at the Ennis home.

Being held for violation of the liquor laws is no novelty for Ennis. Since the advent of prohibition he has been more or less in the limelight and, after raids and arrests made while he was living in Putnam, has been presented in the Putnam city court and before the federal court at New Haven. He was being held Sunday in default of bail.

There will be general local interest in the fact that the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Company, with a subsidiary—the Goodyear Cotton Mills, Inc., in this town—is to observe its 25th anniversary at Akron, home of the parent company, on Labor day. The following announcement relative to the event outlines what is to be done in observing the birthday of the great corporation.

Labor Day, Sept. 3, has been set for the celebration of the completion of the first quarter century of the existence of the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Co., and the company is arranging a program to celebrate the event.

The preliminary plans provide for entertainment for 30,00 persons, chiefly employees of the company and their families and friends. The parade program will begin with a parade in the morning, in which many hundreds of persons will march through down town streets. The growth of Goodyear and its history and the development of Akron will be depicted in a series of floats. Robert Goodall, Fred Colley, Coach Ed Connor, Jack Kidney and B. Landerfield, are the members of the parade committee, it is announced.

An elaborate program of sports is being outlined. The center of athletic interest will be a conflict between the Goodyear baseball team and the Canadian Goodyear All-Stars. Divisional contests, including all sorts of athletic competitions, will also be held in the afternoon.

The day's programme will culminate in the evening with an entertainment and dance at Goodyear University hall. William Lang is in charge of the entertainment for the evening.

Although the anniversary program will be held on Labor Day, the true date of the founding of the company is August 29, 1898, but officials believed that it would be advisable to postpone the celebration to coincide with the state holiday several days later. The greater part of the expenses of the program will be borne by the Goodyear Company.

There seems good ground for believing that Frank Weeden, escaped inmate of the Rhode Island State Hospital for Mental Diseases, is or has been in hiding in the town of Killingly. All of southern New England is engaged in a hunt for this man, who is suspected of having committed a murder since his escape from an institution where he has been confined for the past 26 years.

Attention of local and state police has been called by E. G. Shauffleur, who has a farm in the lonely section of Killingly between Ballouville and East Killingly, to incidents that occurred at his place during the past week. Tuesday, just before sundown, a man who answers the description of Weeden called at the farm and demanded Mrs. Shauffleur, who was alone at the time, prepare supper for him. She was frightened at the man's appearance, but being capable of protecting herself, as she is a good shot and had a gun handy, she refused to serve the man, and in the meantime a big and capable watchdog at the farm took a part in the proceedings and drove the unwelcome visitor away from the house.

The Shauffleur family at that time did not know about Weeden's escape, nor anything of his history. However, when Mrs. Shauffleur heard a man running through the brush bordering a garden where she was working during Friday, when the Weeden case had become more or less familiar to her, the matter was reported to the police by her husband.

Search for Weeden was being continued Saturday afternoon by state officers from the local barracks. Weeden is reported as hiding in the territory near the Sanford Pratt farm, or in the territory just west of the Chase reservoir.

Weeden is believed to be guilty of the murder, since his escape, of a boy who was killed near Randall's pond early Tuesday. Weeden is minus his left eye, a fact that will aid in easy identification of him, if he is discovered hereabouts.

Mrs. Lelia Louise Dean, 59, widow of Edmund Dean, died Saturday at the Day Kimball hospital in Putnam, where she had been a patient for several weeks. Mrs. Dean had been in poor health for nearly two years and had been a great sufferer during recent months. She was a native of the town of Killingly and a daughter of William and Ellen Bennett Keach and had lived her life here. Her husband has been dead several years. She leaves a brother, Edwin, who is in Indiana.

At the home of her sister, Mrs. Oscar D. Jencks, in Foster, Saturday afternoon, funeral services for Miss Elizabeth Hamilton, 27, were conducted by Rev. Harry St. John Filmer of Rice City and attended by relatives and friends. Burial was in the Dorlance cemetery. The bearers were Oscar D. Jencks and John Turner, James Turner and Robert Turner, Boston, the three last named uncles of the deceased. A. F. Wood was the funeral director. Miss Hamilton was a native of Glasgo, Scotland, and come to this country about two years ago, she had been in poor health during all of her residence in this country.

Relatives and many friends were at St. James' church, Saturday morning, to attend the funeral of Pierre Gazen, held from his home at 9 o'clock. Rev. John Roux, M. S., Rev. Joseph Mousgier, M. S., and Rev. Joseph Deschaud, M. S., were officers of the solemn high mass of requiem. Burial was in Holy Cross cemetery. The bearers were Pierre Gentilhomme, Sr., Pierre Gentilhomme, Jr., Henry Allerie, Herbert Socquet, Jean Baroh and Edmund Garnier. Louis E. Kennedy was in charge of the funeral arrangements.

The stay of one Miss Grace Patco, 16, in Danielson was brief. Her parents came here Sunday seeking her out and with the assistance of Chief John McFarland located her in a home at Connecticut Mills avenue. The parents represented that she had left their home in Easthampton, Mass., Saturday without telling them anything about her intentions. They had reasons to believe she would come to Danielson and were right, in their surmise. The romantic miss represented that she had come here to board and would seek employment.

An elaborate lawn fete in planned by Killingly Woman's club in aid of the Nurses' Home fund of the Day Kimball hospital. The event is to be at the residence of Timothy E. Hopkins. The grounds will be given over to the various special features that assure unusual success for the affair. Various novelties are planned. Those who like may play auction bridge with a pack of living cards. There will be a woman in attendance with 100 pockets in her costume. There will be a tea garden and strolling musicians and numerous other attractions.

Mrs. John Eben Young is chairman of the general committee, which includes Miss Emma F. Pilling, Mrs. John Paine, Mrs. James M. Paine, Mrs. Alfred L. Reed, Mrs. Needham Brown, Miss Samuel Duggan, Mrs. Nutter, Miss Louise Danielson, Miss Ethel Tillinghast, Mrs. Walter Jacobs and Mrs. Richard D. Bannigan. The radio fans will be at their instruments this evening to get the returns from the Leonard-Tendler bout in New York. Fine success was experienced here in getting returns from the recent Firpo-Willard match.

In the town court Saturday morning Rosario Beausoliel of Putnam was acquitted of a charge of violation of the liquor laws made against him by Adelard Lasnier, the youth who was sent to jail last week after he had pleaded guilty to selling intoxicants in this town. Mr. Beausoliel was ably represented as counsel by Attorney Irving H. Miron of Putnam. Lasnier had represented that he was an agent for Beausoliel, a claim that was not substantiated in court.

Huckleberry and blueberry pies are to be a scarce article of dessert in the homes of Putnam. People going to the pastures where these berries grow find that on account of the long period of sunshine the berries are drying up. While usually at this time of years berry pickers go about the city selling the product of their day's efforts not a berry is to be had at present and none are seen in the market.

Brooks and ponds are getting low the water soaking into the ground so that only small streams remain where there were ponds of greater or less area. Unless there is a rainfall many fish will be killed.

Two drunks added to the week's quota before the city court, Saturday morning, were taken to Brooklyn jail in default of the payment of fines of 20 and costs each.

Frank William Gordon, 81, Civil war veteran, died suddenly at his home in West Woodstock, Friday evening. Although he had been in ill health for some time he was able to be up and about. Friday afternoon he suffered what he thought was an attack of acute indigestion. Since his wife's death in 1914, he had lived alone. He crawled to the home of the nearest neighbors, Moses Wilcox, who summoned a doctor. No one being able to care for him the doctor ordered his removal to the Day Kimball hospital. He died before the automobile in which he was placed had left the farm.

Mr. Gordon was born in Palmer, Mass., May 10th, 1842. He removed to Monson, Mass., where he enlisted in Company I, M. V. I., in May, 1862. After serving under Hunter, Segal and Sheridan he was discharged from service in May, 1864, returning to Massachusetts. About 1870, he removed to Windham county and resided in the Woodstocks, Eastford, Ashford and Union. He engaged in farming and lumbering and acquired considerable means. He purchased the Judge Oscar Fisher place in West Woodstock less than a year ago.

Putnam's water supply is fit for domestic consumption. There has been a rumor current that the supply is not satisfactory for drinking purposes and this has caused some alarm. Recently a report by the chemist of the state board of health came to hand and in the summary the chemist writes:

"General conclusions: The water contains a small amount of mineral matter and is soft. The sample submitted shows a moderate color and possesses a peaty odor. The figures for organic constituants are about what we would expect to find them, but the chlorine figure is somewhat above the normal for that section.

"The number of bacteria growing on agar at body temperature is low and the colon bacillus was absent from the five 10 c. c. portions of the water.

"This supply at the time of collection of this sample was apparently safe for drinking purposes and met the treasury stand for drinking water on common carriers, in so far as shown by the above results."

The sample of water from which thiareport was made was received by the state chemist June 26th. Since the advent of warm weather samples of water have been sent for analysis at least twice a month and the reports from each sample have been satisfactory.

When the city purchased the plant of the Putnam Water company it soon developed that the filteration plan was not adequate to the needs of the city. With the approval of the common council the water commissioners decided to build a larger and more modern plant at the pumping station in Harrisville. Work was begun last January and it was expected that it would be completed before warm weather. The material and parts have been delayed and the filter plant is not yet finished. The material and parts are however on the ground and it is expected that the filteration system will be in full working order the last of this month or early next month.

In the meantime the water is being chlorinated. This treatment of the water kills all bacilli and makes the water safe for drinking purposes, as evidenced by the chemist's report.

A rumor in connection with the supply that a dead mule had been found in the water was investigated by water department officials and the rumor found to be false. The carcass of a mule had strayed away and died on the bank, some distance away.

Rosario Beausoliel of this city was arrested Friday afternoon by a state policeman from the Danielson barracks charged with selling intoxicating liquor at Wildwood park in the town of Killingly, Thursday evening. Beausoliel was brought before Judge Feuner Woodward in the town court of Killingly, Saturday morning, and entered a plea of not guilty.

Adelard Lasnier testified that he bought a pint of liquor from Beausoliel and paid two dollars for it. Lasnier himself was found guilty of selling liquor the same night and was fined $150 and costs in default of payment was taken to Brooklyn jail, from where he was brought to testify Saturday morning.

Beausoliel denied that he sold the liquor to Lasnier. Miss Angelina Dupre, who went to the park with Beausoliel, testified that she was with him all of the evening except for a period of a few minutes.

Attorney Miron called the attention of the court to the fact that the only witness against his client was a convicted moonshiner and intimated that some persuasion had been brought to bear upon him which caused his testifying against Beausoliel.

Judge Woodward said that it did not seem reasonable to him that a man who was engaged in selling liquor would go to Wildwood park from Putnam, carrying only one pint of liquor with him and taking his girl along. There was a doubt in his mind as to Beausoliel's guilt and he did not think the state had even made out a case in which there was probable cause. Beausoliel was found not guilty.

The evangelistic churches in Westerly continue to feel the influence of the summer vacation time in the attendance. At the Pawcatuck Seventh Day Baptist church, Rev. Claton A. Burdick, pastor, Saturday morning, the subject of the sermon was The Influence of The Prince of Life. The pastor announced that the fresh air children from New York were expected to arrive in Westerly some time during August. THOMAS ADDISON, Secretary.

The Barbers Union

At their meeting held Wednesday Evening, July 18, 1923, voted to endorse and support the Musicians in their labor trouble with the Management of The Strand and Broadway Theatres.

BARBERS' UNION.

Too much meat in summer overheats the blood; too much starchy food often interferes with digestion.

Children must have plenty of energy-producing food, but it must be wisely chosen.

Grape-Nuts is a safe and satisfying summer food. It supplies the energizing nutriment of wheat and barley, together with the natural mineral elements which many foods lack.

Grape-Nuts with milk or cream is a complete food, crisp and delicious, easily digested and quickly assimilated.

Your grocer has interesting details of our offer of over $7500.00 for Grape-Nuts Recipes. Ask him about it TODAY; or write to Recipe Dept., Postum Cereal Co., Inc., Battle Creek, Mich.

Grape-Nuts FOR HEALTH

"There's a Reason"

HOW TO PUT A "KICK" IN IT

—A tip for "wets" and "drys!"

We are all liable to feel "out of sorts" at times—need something with a "kick" in it to clear the brain, brighten the eye, put "pep" in the system.

Best way to do this is to take—with, or without, a "chaser"—that harmless yet thoroughly efficient family medicine, Beecham's Pills.

"Two for adults and one for children" is the phrase of health that has meant good digestion and a clear system to countless healthy, happy people the world over for the past 80 years.

FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL

SATURDAY'S MARKET.

New York, July 21.—Today's stock market gave concrete evidence of the changed speculative sentiment. Prices closed somewhat irregular but losses resulting from a wave of short selling in the oil stocks generally were recovered on last-minute buying and short covering.

Opening prices were somewhat higher than yesterday's closing but the advance did not extend to the usual leaders, which drifted idly. Professional traders concentrated the pressure against oil shares, which were sensitive to selling because of the recent cuts in crude oil prices, and some of the motors and equipments declined sharply.

A strong demand for stocks of the eastern group of railroads, however, frightened the bear traders and turned practically the entire list upward, with the result that most of the early losses were wiped out.

The New York Central closed 1 5-8 higher and Reading was up 2 1-2.

The usual leaders moved in a narrow trading area. U. S. Steel was unchanged on a small turnover, while Studebaker and American Can eased fractionally. American Car preferred was three points higher at the close.

The weekly clearing house statement showed a decrease in loans, discounts and investments of $60,895,000 and a drop of $9,946,000 in the reserve of member banks in the Federal Reserve bank. Net demand deposits declined $39,797,000 and time deposits fell off $3,726,000. Aggregate reserve totalled $720,869,000, leaving excess reserve of $22,259,250, a decrease of $4,533,220 under the previous week.

MADE THREE LIQUOR ARRESTS WITH EVIDENCE OF ALLEGED SALES

Three successful raids and arrests on charges of violation of the liquor law made a night of activity Saturday for the police, along with a number of arrests for intoxication.

The first came about 9.30 at the restaurant of Andrew Zysh on North Main street next to the engine house, where Sergeant Thomas Murphy, Officers Dombroski and P. Murphy arrested Zysh about 9.30 and secured a half pint bottle of alleged liquor as evidence of a sale.

About 10.30 Sergeant Murphy and Officer P. Murphy arrested John Rozanski whom they found tending bar at the American house on Shetucket street. A half pint bottle of liquor was also secured here as evidence of a sale.

The last place visited was the refreshment and soft drink store kept by Urgel La Pre at 38 Thames street. La Pre was found in charge and was arrested after evidence of a sale had been secured and the bottle which it was claimed had been sold was in the hands of the police.

All the arrested men gave bail for their appearance in court Monday morning.

There were nine arrests for intoxication Saturday night, which will make an even dozen cases to come before the police court this (Monday) morning.

The first part of the very impressive moving picture feature, The Chosen Prince, was shown at the local Young Men's Christian Association Sunday afternoon to a company that filled the pleasant parlors of the Y. M. building. After the singing of several hymns, the scripture reading and prayer, and solos by Hugh Kinder which were delightful to the audience, the pictures were shown. They included the early life of David, the shepherd boy; his selection as God's chosen one, his consecration, his slaying of the wild beast while tending his sheep, and his exciting encounter with the great giant Goliath, whom he slew with a stone from his sling. The whole story was filled with interest and made a deep impression.

Between the reels, Secretary Hill made a brief talk, and said among other things, "This picture story is filled with interest; the part today including the consecration of David to be God's annointed one for a special purpose. If we did but know it, God has a definite plan for every life, and he expects that each one shall be set apart for some work in His great kingdom. Some seventy years ago, a young man coming in from the country to the great English city, London, to work in a drapery establishment, felt a deep interest in his fellow clerks, and asked his employer if he could use a vacant room on the upper floor for the purpose of conference and prayer. The request was granted and young George Williams, an Episcopalian, then and there became the founder of the Young Men's Christian association. He was definitely called of God, set apart for that specific purpose. The leader of the American Y. M. C. A., Dr. John R. Mott, when a young man, had little interest in religious matters, in fact he professed to be an unbeliever, but on a certain occasion, God's spirit so touched him that he surrendered his life to Christ, and finally became the leader of the great work for young men. Later President Wilson offered the ambassadorship to a great country, which position he courteously refused, stating that he felt God had called him to work with the young men of the world; still later Mr. Mott was offered an unusual position in business with an exceedingly large salary, but for the same reason he refused. John R. Mott was just as definitely called of God and set apart as was David, the hero of this Bible story. The greatest character of history realized that he had been set apart for a great service, and at the age of twelve put into a single sentence a recognition of his call, when he said to his mother, 'Wist ye not, that I must be about my Father's business.' Let us believe that God has called us to a service; that He has a definite work for us to do. Let us fit into his plan for us."

Emmett J. Fritz operated the moving picture machine. The pictures were unusually clear.

GOD GIVES 168 HOURS WEEKLY; MAN GRUDGES HIM 40 MINUTES

Being late to church was censured Sunday by the rector of St. Patrick's church, Rev. M. H. May, who as is his custom read the 7.30 low mass. Leaving the church in a rush the minute mass is finished was called "a breach of etiquette, as well as contrary to the regulations of the church and the rubrics of the mass."

In this connection Father May reminded the large congregation that God gives man 168 hours weekly to use as he will; hence it is not being generous with God to begrudge Him 30 or 50 minutes of worship and service at least on Sunday. To hurry from the church before the officiating priest has left the sanctuary is certainly an indignity not to him but to God. While such haste in some instances may be attributed to out of town motor or other tourists who stop at the church for an early Sunday mass, Father May expressed the opinion that they were not the only ones to be blamed for what would be a breach of etiquette in such precipitous leaving of the presence of even some mortal of importance. Cutting a minute or two minutes off the time one spends in Sunday worship came in for emphatic censure on the part of Father May.

The day was the ninth Sunday after Pentecost, the epistle read in all the masses throughout the world being I Corinthians 10, 6-13, and the gospel Luke 19, 41-47, the latter relating to the Saviour's tears as He beheld the indifferent city of Jerusalem. Father May preached from the gospel as teaching that, in taking vainglorious pride in the past and in anticipating the future too much, man is apt to let the precious minutes of the present be wasted.

In the large number receiving holy communion at this service was a good proportion of the men composing the Holy Name society of the parish.

POSTPONE CONGREGATIONAL ANNIVERSAY PROGRAM

(Special to The Bulletin.)

Putnam, July 22.—Plans for an observance of the 75th anniversary of the Congregational church of Putnam have been abandoned for the present, but some recognition of the fact may be made later.

It was 75 years ago the 9th of July that men and women, members of other churches, gathered in a little old schoolhouse on an elevation in the rear of what is now the Putnam inn and voted to form themselves into a Congregational church society. The founders of the church and their affiliations at this time were: Rev. E. B. Huntington, Norwich; Nathan Williams, Jr., Catherine Williams, Lydia Burlingame, Luclette Burlingame and Sophie Smith, Thompson; Smith Wilkinson, Mary Tripp, Ebenezer P. Rathbun, Laura W. Rathbun, West Killingly; Huldah Sawyer, Sally Dresser, Caroline G. Perry, Pomfret; Daniel G. Plimpton, Louisa Rouse, Southbridge; David and Maria Mowry, Mary E. Brewster, Brooklyn; E. M. Jackson, Judith Fox, Nancy Bolles, West Woodstock; Abial Smith, Sylvia A. Smith, Muddy Brook; Sallie Sumner, Eastford, and Amherst Robinson, Brimfield.

The action was approved July 19th, 1848, by an ecclesiastical society composed of representatives from all neighboring churches and they proceeded with the public services of recognition. The sermon was preached by Rev. Mr. Dow of Thompson.

Largely through the ministrations of Rev. George Tillotson of Brooklyn Congregational church, definite steps were taken toward the organization of a church. He preached six Sundays and then the people agreed to try to support a lay worker, a young man named Huntington of Norwich. The $125 they pledged for the young man's services for six months seemed a large sum. This sum was supplemented by a gift from the State Missionary society of $100. Mr. Huntington endeared himself to the members and in November of the same year the customary course was pursued by the council of the church and the young brother set apart to the gospel ministry and installed as pastor of the Congregational church at Wilkinsonville (now Putnam). Dr. Alvin Bond of Norwich preaching the sermon and Dr. Dow of Thompson delivering the charge.

Mr. Huntington remained three years. For several years later the church was supplied by different ministers, some serving a few Sundays and some a year. There is little reliable data concerning many of these men. On Jan. 28, 1858, Rev. George J. Tillotson became pastor of the church He held pastorates in Brooklyn, Putnam, Central Village and preached without charge at Rocky Hill and Wethersfield. He died March 29, 1888, aged 53.

The present church edifice was erected during the closing years of Mr. Tillotson's pastorate and the succeeding pastor, Rev. Thomas M. Boss, came at a time when the church was heavily mortgaged. A large part of the debt was paid during his ministry. Mr. Boss remained until 1876.

Nearly a year passed before his successor, Rev. Charles S. Brooks, was called. His ministry was most successful and he remained until 1887, when he was succeeded by Rev. A. L. Love who closed his pastorate in 1890. Rev. F. D. Sargent succeeded Rev. Mr. Love and his pastorate was one of the longest in the history of the church. He remained as pastor until his death, five or six years ago, when Rev. Boynton Merrill, then a chaplain in the U. S. navy, was called. After a short pastorate he resigned to go as assistant at the New Old South church in Boston and was succeeded by the present pastor, Rev. Simeon Cosad.

GAVE SURPRISE SHOWER FOR MRS. MADELINE SHAVER

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Harris of Meyers avenue gave a miscellaneous surprise shower Thursday evening in honor of Mrs. Madeline Way Shaver's recent marriage. There were about 18 present.

Piano selections were rendered by different members and singing, dancing and games were enjoyed, making the evening a very pleasant one.

During the evening a delightful lunch of chicken salad, potato salad, sandwiches, cake, cookies and fruit punch was served by Mrs. Harris, assisted by Miss Catherine Sullivan and Mrs. Jay Shaver. The table was decorated with two beautiful old fashioned bouquets. The centerpiece was a large crepe paper basket filled with gifts from friends of the bride, in which was a delicious angel cake. Much fun was enjoyed when the bride cut the cake. Mr. Harris helped make the evening jolly with his many jokes.

The party broke up at a very late hour, each and every one wishing the bride and groom a long and happy married life. The success of the evening was due to Mrs. Harris, who proved a perfect hostess.

HARD TO CONTROL PEOPLE AND TRAFFIC AT OCEAN BEACH

(Special to The Bulletin.)

New London, July 23.—The police of New London have the biggest contract they have ever had on their hands to control the people and the traffic at Ocean beach. And they admit they are not equal to the task, though they are busy continuously and they exercise every facility at their command. This afternoon the occupant of what is known as the Old Jerome cottage, the property which was so many years occupied by former Sheriff Smith of Hartford, appeared at the police station, head out, and demanded that the parking of cars in front of his property should be stopped. He said that the cars were so numerous and they were parked in double columns so that they shut off all view of the water in the harbor. He also declared that the occupants of the autos undressed in the cars and went from them to the water, and that when they came from the water they donned their street clothing in the machines. He admitted that the occupants of the cars were modest enough to pull down curtains of the machines so that they could not be seen in disrobing, but he believed that the owners or lessees of property had some rights that were being ignored by the autoists. Mrs. Robert Chappell of Ocean avenue called on the telephone to express the same objection to the autoists and the bathers. Her complaint was identical with that of the Smith property occupant, but both were told that there was no ordinance which restricted the autoists in parking on either Ocean avenue or Pequot avenue, and that being the case the police were without authority to interfere unless the autoists should block the entrances to the properties named. At the beach the throng of people and the congestion of autos was tremendous. James Barron and a property owner named Gordon have seen an opportunity to turn a few dollars and they rented parking privileges to autoists at the rate of 50 cents a machine. The autos are parked in on these lands like sardines in a box, and the first fellow who gets in discovers when he wants to leave that he is the last fellow to come out. Then the owners of the machines on the outside of the first parkers go to the police for relief and want to know whether this blanked city does not afford any protection to strangers who come here in autos. They are told that they have made an arrangement with a private land owner and they must see that the terms of the contracts are fulfilled.

The truth is that there is not half the parking space at the beach that is required for the cars there. The police say that applicants have been able to get privileges from someone in authority or at least who assumes authority they do not possess in so many ways that the order and discipline of the city is interfered with. For instance parking signs have been taken from streets where they are an absolute necessity and have been placed at points where they are actually a hindrance to the traffic they are supposed to benefit. Signs have been placed on Pequot avenue at Converse lane and at a point further north on the same avenue that are a menace to motorists. The signs are so dirty that they cannot be read and they have been placed where autoists are liable to run into them. Another source of complaint is the attempts of certain owners or lessees to set up business on the beach front where they have attempted to sell food, etc. They claim they have requested permission from the beach manager and are acting upon their application. Sergeant Smith routed a couple of such venders today and informed them that the only source of such privilege as was sought was the city council. He was specific in conveying to the would-be venders that no one had any right to give the authority sought but the council and that the parties that he would not recognize any other authority. Other merchants at the beach stood about open-mouthed and declared that if the privilege to sell on the beach is granted to anyone they would seek the right and exercise it to sell allnots and other food on the beach. The police are positive in the assertion that there are no signs to mark the toilets and that other signs that are supposed to be in place on the beach and contiguous thereto have never been placed there. Complaint was made again today that Hartford parties were still conveying people to the beach and to New London for hire over the route that the Hartford and New London Transportation company has a legislative grant to operate in the conveyance of passengers. This matter was referred to the state police by the local police authorities, so there is apt to be something doing in the courts to settle this alleged infraction if it continues. Twice the matter has been before the police court, but it seems not to have been settled so that it will stay settled as yet.

The Allen Hook and Ladder company was summoned by a still alarm Saturday afternoon when a section of the bridge of the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad over Shaw's Cove was discovered afire. A quantity of chemicals sufficed to extinguish the blaze, but not until several sections of the planking used for pedestrians had been destroyed. It is believed that the fire originated from a cigar or cigarette butt or a spark from a passing locomotive, dropping in a crevice of a decayed plank.

The members of the city council, in session Friday night, sitting as a committee of the whole, considered an ordinance that will govern the issuance of licenses for amusement places at Ocean beach. The lessees of what is known as Happy Day Island, are more interested in the proposed ordinance than are the councilors.

The management of the Sells-Floto circus, have agreed to have several of their clowns give an exhibition for the amusement of the little inmates of Seaside Home at Niantic, late Monday afternoon.

Fire of an unknown origin was discovered in the Empire bakery, No. 398 Bank street about 6.30 o'clock Saturday morning and an alarm was rung in from Box 42, corner of Howard and Bank streets, summoning practically all of the city's fire fighting apparatus. The blaze was subdued after a half hour's work. Angelo Zerrill, proprietor, estimated the damage at between $150 and $200. The fire was located above the big ovens and it is believed was caused by their being overheated.

Another large seizure of alcohol and whiskey was made about 4 o'clock Saturday morning when Patrolman James McKenna, Frank Philopena and Braxton Hill seized a part of a large cargo of bootleggers' stock at Fort Neck. The liquor, comprising 97 five-gallon containers of alcohol and seventeen cases of whiskey, was secured as was the boat from which it was being transferred to automobiles and a commercial truck. James Romano, owner of the truck was arrested, charged with transporting liquor. He was not presented in the police court, his case being continued until the 28th inst. Romano was held in bonds of $700 for his appearance at that time. The smack, the Bertha E., owned by Andrew Funks, of Willimantic, was taken to the custom house wharf and tied up. The liquor and alcohol is valued at about $3,000, but if it had been landed without detection, it would have brought the owners over $5,000.

The smack put into the wharf in the rear of the United States Experimental Station about 3 o'clock and work was started at once on unloading it. Two automobiles had received loads and had left when shortly before 4 o'clock Patrolmen McKenna, Philopena and Hill on their way home after reporting for duty, observed unusual activity on the dock. The officers quickly determined that liquor was being transferred from the boat to automobiles. Before the officers reached the craft, two automobiles made a get-away. Romano was the only one of the gang of bootleggers who failed to escape, due to trouble experienced in starting his engine. Romano was taken to the police station as was his load of whiskey. Deputy Collector of Customs Jeremiah Dillon was notified, went to where the smack was moored, and took possession of the craft and its contents. Later the liquor and alcohol seized by the police was taken from the police station and transferred to storage in the custom house.

An employe of the New London Fruit & Produce Company, located on Bank street, reported to the police this morning that entrance had been forced to the place and a quantity of fruit stolen. Detective Sergeant Charles Hammond found that the door of the rear entrance was smashed by a truck backing against it and that if any fruit had been stolen it was of a trifling amount.

An automobile operated by Obie Churches of No. 1980 Park avenue, Hartford and a machine driven by Eva Maynard of No. 22 Lee avenue collided Saturday night at the corner of Huntington and Jay streets. Both cars were damaged.

New London experienced its worst electrical storm of the season late Saturday afternoon for half an hour. Not only was the electrical disturbance the most serious of the year, but because of the terrific gale and hail that accompanied it considerable damage resulted. The storm broke about 5 o'clock when a downpour occurred, followed by a sixty-mile gale and a deluge of hailstones, the like of which was never known here. Lights of trees throughout the city were felled and were electrical light wires. The immense plate glass window in the southerly section of the store of the Plaut-Cadden company on Bank street, was smashed as a result of the terrific wind, the glass falling to the sidewalk with a crash that could be heard more than a block away. Lightning struck several trees, one in the yard of the Bellair inn, on Pequot avenue.

The fire department was called out at 1.15 o'clock this afternoon when O'Leary's hotel and restaurant, corner of Green and Golden streets, was threatened with serious damage. The damage resulting from the blaze was slight and did not interfere with the conduct of business. Smoke issued from the roof over the kitchen and an investigation revealed that a fire was making its way between the ceiling and the roof of the building, while one of the chimneys was discovered full of blazing soot. An alarm was rung in summoning four pumpers and one of the Allen Hook and Ladder company. The fire was fought out with chemicals and was quickly extinguished.

Steamer Plymouth, from Fall River, brought the largest crowd of the season here today, reaching port about 2.30 with over 2,000 pleasure seekers aboard.

Romeo J. Broussard of No. 524 Bank street was arrested this afternoon by Motorcycle Officer John Cavanaugh, charged with operating a motor vehicle while intoxicated. He will be presented in the police court tomorrow morning. Broussard and Frank Armstrong, the latter of No. 512 Bank street, went for a ride in Armstrong's automobile. When near Gallows Lane on William street and headed in a southerly direction, the automobile sideswiped a machine, owned and operated by Samuel L. Brenall of No. 256 High street, Hartford. The latter machine was enroute to Hartford and was well on his right side of the road, but before the cars passed, Armstrong's machine went to the left side of the highway and crashed against the Hartford automobile. The front and rear fender and the running board on the left hand side of Brentnall's automobile were ripped away and Armstrong's car was wrecked. None of the occupants of either machine sustained injury. Motorcycle Officer Cavanaugh, who was assigned to investigate the wreck, went to the scene of the accident and placed Broussard, who is employed as a driver by the Standard Oil company, under arrest, in default of a surety on his bond he was held a prisoner to await trial tomorrow.

The Sells-Floto circus came to town today from Webster, Mass., over the road and went direct to the Fort Neck lot.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Epstein and two children, residents of Massachusetts, are patients at Lawrence hospital, the automobile in which they were riding being wrecked in Colchester. None of the victims are known to be seriously injured, but because of the secrecy maintained by the hospital attaches no information would be given out, either as to the identity of the victims, their injuries or the surgeon who is attending them. Epstein, who is understood to have been operating the machine apparently skidded on the highway just outside Colchester and on a grade for the car went across the highway and crashed against a state fence that tends to act as a safety against cars overturning. The victims were given temporary medical attention by a Colchester physician and afterwards were removed to the New London institution. The state police have been notified of the accident and will institute an investigation tomorrow.

Boys Sunday broke out windows in the Harbor school building, but they escaped arrest because of the method taken to notify the police. A woman who saw the mischief perpetrated went to the home of Lieut Beebe, near by and he called the police station to notify of the mischief, but when an officer reached the school grounds the vandals had departed and they could not be found.

Gordon Eldridge of Uncasville was arrested this afternoon by Patrolman John Courtney, charged with violation of the traffic ordinances in parking his automobile on Bank street for a period longer than thirty minutes.

Had Running Board Damaged.

Automobiles driven by Aleck James of 142 Valley street, Willimantic, and John E. Lafferty, 240 Yantic street, this city, were in collision Sunday evening at the corner of Washington and Sachem streets. The James machine had a running board damaged.

SECRETARY HILL SPOKE TO Y. M. C. A. CAMPERS

Sunday evening at the County Y. M. C. A. camp General Secretary Edwin Hill gave a talk to the campers, some fifty in number. His topic was There is a Lad Here. He emphasized the fact that in every single boy there are wrapped up great possibilities; that the average boy failed to realize this. He cited Abraham Lincoln, General Foch and Theodore Roosevelt as illustrating the possibilities. Lincoln under the handicap of being poor, with little chance; Foch, apparently an ordinary lad, and Roosevelt, with a weak body as a child. These all, said the speaker, demonstrated what can be accomplished when one realized that he has great possibilities; each of these recognized Jesus as a great leader, and they faithfully followed Him. The boys were urged to give themselves fully to Christ, and to determine to make the most of their lives.

NORWICH TOWN

A local resident who is passing some time at Quonochontaug Beach, R. I. writes to a Norwich Town friend as follows:

Here we are at the shore again. Shore means East Beach, where waves dash high over huge rocks, pounding incessantly. This season has been wonderfully fine, the cool breezes so strong that when reading or writing one has to have a tight grip on paper.

Wednesday morning, July 16, all rushed from the cottages to see fleets of airplanes going south to Newport, upwards of twenty in all, flying very high, and at this great distance seeming as though moving very slowly. As flocks of birds move when wearied with long flight.

Several families from Norwich Town are passing July at this beach, the cottages here all being occupied. The part of the new state road from Norwich to Westerly and the fine automobile road from Watch Hill to Narragansett Pier attract many motor parties to the beaches.

Last week parties from Norwich and Hanover visited this beach, enjoying surf bathing and in nearby rocks found a fine place to roast frankfurters and eat their lunch.

This beach used to be called Little Pittsfield, for most of the cottages were owned by people from Pittsfield, Mass., but now New York state, New Jersey, Providence, Hartford, Norwich and other places are represented here.

The days are delightful, clear and full of sunshine, free from fogs, with the exception of Sunday, July 15, on which day the fog kept growing denser until the ocean was hidden from sight.

Speaking of Sunday, we have a morning service every Sunday at the little White meeting house, which marks the entrance to the road leading to this beach. Rev. Mr. Davis of Ashaway conducts the service and preaches a most helpful sermon, strong in its presentation of Bible truths. This service is greatly appreciated by those who attend.

The Norwich Morning Bulletin keeps us who come from Norwich in touch with home happenings and you can hardly know how we watch for its coming, putting aside everything else to read it quickly.

BERLIN DERIDES PRESSURE ON PASSIVE RESISTANCE

Believes Action of Inter-Allied Rhineland High Commission Will Only Serve to Stiffen the Resistance in the Ruhr—New Ordinance Provides Extreme Penalties for Interference With the Commission's Activities.

Berlin, July 23 (By the A. P.)—The inter-allied Rhineland high commission has issued a sweeping blanket ordinance, according to press dispatches received here, aiming to throttle the German passive resistance in the Ruhr and Rhineland.

The ordinance apparently leaves no loophole, but the Berlin newspapers declare it will only serve to stiffen the resistance.

It provides extreme penalties for participation in propaganda or written or spoken opposition to the prevailing ordinances, for interference with the commission's activities or otherwise organizing resistance. Punishment is provided even in the case of offering a sack of potatoes as an inducement for holding out against the occupational authorities, according to the dispatches.

BRITAIN AND FRANCE MAINTAINING SECRECY

London, July 23 (By the A. P.)—The secrecy agreed upon by the British and French governments concerning the reparation documents forwarded to the allies is being closely maintained, and it is expected that another ten days will elapse before any reply is received from the French government, owing to the delay in the meeting of Premier Poincare and Premier Theunis to consult over the British draft note to Germany.

It had been arranged to discuss the Ruhr questions in the house of commons Thursday, when the foreign office estimates came up for consideration, but the government, in the belief that such discussion at the present moment would not be helpful to the delicate negotiations has decided to postpone the debate indefinitely.

MINERS AND OPERATORS FAIL TO REACH AGREEMENT

Atlantic City, N. J., July 23 (By the A. P.)—Expecting today to center the bargaining cycle in their efforts to agree on a wage contract and avert a coal strike this fall anthracite miners and operators tonight had failed to reach their objective.

At the end of a four-hour conference the joint committee of eight still considered itself in the preliminary stage of negotiations. The net result of the sessions which have been held intermittently since July 5, was that the miners had outlined to the operators in detail the grounds upon which several of their demands were based.

All of the session today was taken up in discussion of the demand specifying rates for "dead work," blasting rock and removing refuse in getting at the coal vein.

Both sides agree that it probably will be a day or two before the operators get the floor to have their say about the demands and, possibly, to offer a series of counter-proposals.

Heads of the conferring delegations did not reflect the confidence that there would be no suspension on September 1, reported to have been expressed at Boston today by two members of the United States coal commission, John Hays Hammond, and Thomas R. Marshall, vice president under Woodrow Wilson.

"I wouldn't cast doubt upon the value of their udgment," said John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers of America. "But I haven't yet seen anything that would justify their optimism."

S. D. Warriner, spokesman for the operators, assured uestioners that he had "not been in communication with Mr. Hammond or Mr. Marshall," and did not know upon what their predictions were based.

As chairman of the general committees of anthracite operators, Mr. Warriner also issued a statement pleading "not guilty" to allegations reported emanating from the United States coal commission that the operators were "stalling" in the present negotiations.

The statement follows:

"A recent press despatch from Washington quoted a 'spokesman' for the United States coal commission as having accused the anthracite operators of "stalling" in the present wage negotiations.

"Inquiry of the secretary of the coal commission has brought the reply that the commissioners alone are authorised to speak for the commission and that the only commissioners in Washington at the time the despatch in question was sent made no such statement as that quoted."

PRICES ARE AT NEW LOW LEVELS IN COTTON MARKET

New York, July 23.—Unusually heavy trading, traceable to rains in Texas and resulting in the setting of new low levels, with the entire market closing 79 to 197 points net lower, today enlivened the first day's trading of the cotton exchange in its new skyscraper quarters in lower New York.

A rush of activity marked the opening, continuing with some hedge selling, until the market closed at about the lowest figures of the day. A few minutes previous, July contracts touched 24.50, October 22.66 and December 22.36. July lyow represented 197 points decline.

Heavy liquidation, following reports of an easier basis in the southwest caused a drop in old crop months bringing them nearer new crop positions.

Selling was active from the south and from Liverpool where the market was weakened by the improved crop prospects here.

Montreal July 23.—Announcement was made today that Michael Donohue, of Pennsylvania had been elected president of the National Board of the Ancient Order of Hibernians at the close of its convention here and that the delegates had voted to meet in Atantic City, N. J., in 1925.

ALBERTA COAL TO BE SOLD AT $12 IN TORONTO

Edmonton, Alberta, July 23.—As an experiment in competing with coals of anthracite shipped from the United States, 6,000 tons of Alberta coal will be sold in Toronto at $12, it was announced tonight. Premier Greenfield said a freight rate of $7 per ton had been fixed in the experimental shipment to Ontario over the Canadian nation lines.

The Alberta coal price in Toronto compares with $15.50 asked for United States antharcite there or $3.50 less per ton.

ARRESTED FOR THEFT OF $300,000 WORTH OF JEWELS

Princeton, N. J., July 23.—Eugene Moran and Albert Horowitz, wanted by the New York police in connection with the theft of $300,000 worth of jewels from Mrs. C. P. Hugo Schoellkopf, of Buffalo, at a New Year's eve party in the Metropolis, today were arrested and held for the New York authorities.

They were arrested with J. J. Sargent of Philadelphia, in a motorcar alleged to have been stolen in Philadelphia. Police authorities of that city, were notified.

Moran and Horowitz were accused by Matthew Biddulph, sentenced in April to Sing Sing prison for six years for grand larceny for participation in the robbery of the jewels from Mrs. Schoellkopf as she was leaving a party in the West 52nd street apartment of Frank Barrett Carman, al actor, on New Year's morning.

Following investigation of the robbery, indictments charging robbery in the first degree were returned against three men who had occupied the apartment under Carman's and who had given their names as Marshall, McGowan and Lewis.

Biddulph admitted he used the name of Marshall but declared the robbery had been carried out by Moran and Horowitz who he asserted, had used the names of McGowan and Lewis. He declared they had "double-crossed" him and robbed him of his share of the loot.

Moran and Horowitz, it was stated, were arrested after they had been traced by the police to New Orleans, Los Angeles, to the race tracks at Latonia, to Columbus, Ohio, to Philadelphia and thence to Princeton.

Captain Herbert Hartley praised the sea-going and maneuvring qualities of his big charge, declaring that not the slightest trouble had been experienced in handling her in and out of foreign ports.

The longest day's run was 605 miles. On another day 601 miles were covered.

Ten stowaways slipped aboard at Cherbourg and Southampton. They were turned over to Ellis Island authorities.

GRANTED DIVORCE FROM ROBERT NEWSCH DONNER

Paris, July 23.—(By The A. P.)—Mrs. Blanche Susanne Elliot Donner, of Philadelphia, was granted a divorce here today from Robert Newsch Donner, whom she married in Philadelphia in 1910.

Mrs. Margaret Brown Hostetter, of Pittsburgh, obtained a divorce from David Herbert Hostetter, Jr., whom she married at Kittery, Me., in 1912.

In both actions the wife obtained the divorce on the ground of the husband abandoning the home.

In the action for divorce brought by Eaton Cromwell, of Philadelphia, against his wife, Mrs. Hope Truxter Beale Cromwell, the court refused a decree, holding that neither party had been sufficiently domiciled in France.

FUGITIVE FROM PRISON CAMP TO REQUEST AN INVESTIGATION

New York, July 23.—William Morrell, a book salesman arrested in a hotel here last night, who admits that he escaped from a prison road gang in Georgia, announced today that he would ask Governor Smith to investigate his case before honoring extradition papers. He added that he would kill himself rather than return to Georgia where he charges he was cruelly beaten by guards.

Morrell, who will be heard in court tomorrow, was examined today by Dr. Perry M. Litchenstein, physician in the Tombs prison, where the salesman is held as a fugitive from justice. Dr. Lichtenstein said that he did not have the authority to disclose the result of his examination.

Morrell displayed marks on his legs which he asserted were made by shackles and the warden said the marks showed at the piece where the shackles would have clasped the prisoner's legs.

Marks on his back, Morrell said, were the welts left after officials in charge of the gang on which he worked in Jasper county had beaten him. The marks were barely perceptible.

Morrell, who told reporters his father was employed as a paymaster by New York city, claimed he had been particularly roughly treated because he came from the north.

Morrell asserted he had pleaded guilty in Atlanta for forgery under misapprehension and he had received an unusually severe sentence.

He told reporters that he had decided to escape when he could not stand rough treatment any longer. He said he cut the shackles from his leg with a hack-saw and fled. Guards fired buckshot at him as he ran, he added.

The prisoner claimed that several weeks ago he was arrested in Buffalo as a fugitive from justice but that he was freed when an official in Georgia was unable to identify him.

To Make Investigation.

Atlanta, Georgia, July 23. — A "thorough investigation" of the manner in which William McGarrity, escaped convict, now being held in New York was treated while in prisons in this state will be made, according to an announcement by Governor Walker today. McGarrity was arrested in New York under the name of William Morrell.

INVESTIGATING CAUSE OF FUMIGATING GAS EXPLOSION

New York, July 23.—Fifteen witnesses, employes of the Hecker-Jones Jewell Milling company and the Fumigators' Chemical company, were examined today by Assistant District Attorney Jones to fix responsibility for the death of three men yesterday, when deadly gas, intended to rid the warehouse of the milling company, of vermin, poured out from pipes and swept over them.

At the close of the examination, Mr. Jones announced that he would submit the matter to the grand jury Wednesday for determination of any act of personal negligence.

"Section 104 of the sanitary code," Mr. Jones said, "provides that fumigators get permits before their work. This was not done in this instance. The Fumigators' Chemical company did not have a permit and never had one."

During the investigation today the fumigating company contended that the flour company was supposed to be doing its own fumigating and that employes of the fumigating company had simply had been called in to aid.

Shortly after receiving his inheritance, Suydam was adjudged an incompeetnt in the supreme court in an action brought by relatives. The court imposed a bond of $150,000 on the committee, but in 1910 the estate had grown to such large sums that the court ordered a $790,000 bond.

New York, July 23.—Senator Hiram Johnson of California, boomed by his friends for the republican presidential nomination in 1924, returned today from Europe on the Leviathan and tonight was preparing for delivery at a banquet to be given in his honor Wednesday night, a message to the American people on the nation's foreign relations.

The senator, who spent four and one-half months abroad, refused to discuss either domestic or foreign politics and declared that on Wednesday night he would set forth the attitude "which is my humble opinion, America should adopt towards Europe."

Pleading ignorance of first hand information of late developments in the political situation at home, Senator Johnson insisted he could make no comment on them until he had a chance to catch up.

He categorically refused to say whether or not he would be a candidate for the republican nomination in 1924 and asserted that his address on Wednesday would not embody any statement on that subect.

"For four and one-half months," Senator Johnson said, "I wandered in Europe generally close to the ground. Visited seven countries and talked with everyone I could, in high and low places. The visit was very int[e]resting and informative.

"On Wednesday night I will tell about my impressions and my opinions, necessarily somewhat inchoate. Then I will deliver my message to the people when can and how I can. But, on domestic affairs, cannot as yet say anything."

Immediately after his arrival with Mrs. Johnson at his hotel, the senator set to work preparing his address which will be delivered at a testimonial dinner to be given in his honor by a committee of his supporters headed by Rhinelander Waldo and George Henry Payne. He planned to call on Mayor Hylan tomorrow afternoon.

Comanche, Texas, July 23.—Congressman Thomas L. Blanton, charged by indictment with criminal libel, went to trial today before County Judge John Reece.

The defense motion to disqualify Judge Reece on the ground that he was a supporter or Oscar W. Callaway, the complaining witness, was overruled. Judge Reece declared he did not contribute to Callway's campaign fund. The defense sought to show that the jury commissioners who drew the panel and the members of the jury panel themselves were Callaway sympathizers.

VILLA ASSASSINS SUSPECTS HAVE BEEN ARRESTED

Mexico City, July 23.—(By the A. P.)—General Eugenio Martinez, military commander in the state of Chihuahua, announces the capture by his troops of three men suspected of having participated in the recent assassination of General Francisco Villa. General Martinez's report added that four additional flying columns of cavalry had been despatched in pursuit of the assassins.

Trouble is feared at Canutillo, and federal troops in nearby garisons have been instructed to hold themselves in readiness to act in consequence of threats of revolt by hundreds if Villa's followers because of an attempt by Mrs. Bertha Villa to secure possession of the immense hacienda owned by Villa.

Through her attorney, Jose Martines Baca, Mrs. Berta Villa who has been living on the ranch of the late rebel chieftain at Canutillo, has filed suit in Parral to secure the hacienda on behalf of her self and three children. Villa's followers who have been cultivating the lands at Canutillo announced their intention, according to press reports from Parral, to retain their holdings by force if necessary.

Villa stated a year ago he had 1800 armed followers at Canutillo, or within close call. Federal troops have not arrived in Canutillo, but are known to be nearby. Reports that a claim has occurred between them and the Villaistas are without confirmation.

Nothing has been heard with regard to Villa's hacienda from his brother Hipolito or Luz Carral Villa, generally regarded as Villa's wife, who is reported to be in Chihuahua.

RYAN, BEING A CATHOLIC, WILL NOT ASK DIVORCE

New York, July 23.—Allan A. Ryan testified before the grand jury which indicted George Maxwell, president of the American Association of Authors, Composers and Publishers, charged with writing "poison pen" letters, that he would not seek divorce from his wife despite evidence that her photographs and articles of clothing were found in Maxwell's apartment, it was brought out today when Maxwell's attorney attempted to have the indictments dismissed.

Ryan said that, being a Catholic, he could not get a divorce, nor would he permit his wife to obtain one. Although he has had differences with Mrs. Ryan before, and separated from her for a time in March, 1919, a short time after their marriage, he never asked for a divorce.

In asking today that the indictments be quashed, Robert S. Johnstone, Maxwell's attorney, stated that the testimony given befoe the grand jury was illegal and incompetent, and that the defendant's constitutional rights had been violated in the seizure of personal articles from his home. He said Ryan testified he had obtained from Maxwell's housekeeper photographs in which Mrs. Ryan appeared and a garment which Ryan and his wife's maid said was hers.

Judge McIntyre reserved decision.

Willimantic Camp Meeting 50 Yrs. Ago

Methodists and other attendants at the Willimantic camp meeting will find much of interest in the report from the camp meeting grounds of fifty years ago, which is sent to The Bulletin by Mrs. S. M. Duncan of Willimantic. The report is a clipping from The Bulletin of that time, which was loaned to Mrs. Duncan by Mrs. Jane B. Read of Worcester, mother of the children's meetings.

Camp Ground, Sept. 6, 1873.

The day which winds up the camp meeting at Willimantic for this year has come. Quite a number went away last evening, but tomorrow morning will be the time for a general stampede on the part of the carpet-baggers, at which time look out for excited baggagemen, sore knuckles, and various other things connected with the breaking up of a Methodist camp meeting. It is a pleasing sight at such times to see gathered at the station in waiting for the train, groups of singers, and others singing and shaking hands, and sending their loves to aunts and cousins, whom they expect to "come and see some time."

Last evening, if any reader of this report had been standing near the preacher's stand at a late hour—say half-past ten o'clock, long after the bell had rung the people to their quarters—he would have seen three persons kneeling at the altar, uttering prayers with subdued voices. The facts are these: There was a woman who had been kneeling there for hours. She said, like Jacob of old, "I will not go until I am blessed." Suddenly, when all was nearly night around her, she raised her head, clasped her hands and exclaimed, with a smile on her face, "O, how Jesus saves me." She went on her way rejoicing. It was one of the clearest conversions it had been our privilege to witness at this meeting. As she spoke of her pardon, the gentleman and lady who were kneeling at her side, daring to violate the rules of the camp meeting, shouted "Glory to God," at the top of their voices.

Everybody ought to be thankful, and undoubtedly is to that kind lady from Danielsonville, who placed a basket of beautiful flowers on the railing in front of the preachers' stand. They did look lovely, as the rays of the sun streaking through the trees struck them. It is needless for anybody to say, "God bless the flowers," for they reveal the impress of His hand, every time we behold them.

8 a. m.—At this hour the sky is very much overcast, and many are apprehensive of a storm. This is the hour for the love feast, and about six hundred are gathered at the stand to sing, speak and hear. The Rev. A. W. Paige, of New London, took charge of this meeting. This was a very interesting occasion. One hundred and sixty-two testimonies were given in during the feast. Some of these testimonies were as follows: "I'm eating from the Rock;" "I have bread right from Heaven;" "I am at the mast-head;" "This is the eleventh anniversary of my conversion;" "I am resting sweetly in His arms." A colored man said: "I can't say as much as some others in public, but I was go down in the dark woods, there I can testify for Jesus." Just here a blind boy was raised upon a seat, and sang: "I am so glad that Jesus loves me." This, of course, produced emotion in the audience. Many wept; some shouted. One man said, "My regular work is to preach the gospel to the Roman Catholics." "Jesus boarded my soul, pulled down the black flag, and enabled me to raise the blood-stained banner of the cross." Here, "Land ahead, its fruits are waving," was sung. "My mother led me to the feet of Jesus." Father Reynolds said, "The love of Jesus has been going on in my heart for sixty-four years." "I'm on the gospel ship, Jesus is captain, and we are off soundings." "For forty years, I've been a common sailor on this ship." "I was brother to the devil once, but Jesus took me out of a rum barrel." "I have had the privilege of laboring among the Hindoos." "I got mineral water at the Willimantic camp meeting." At the close of these testimonies, a very impressive scene was witnessed. The whole congregation knelt for a few moments in silent prayer, after which the doxology was sung in low tones—the audience still kneeling, until its completion. This was the best love feast for years.

10 a. m.—We have had a recess of about twenty minutes, and now we have come together again, to listen to a sermon. The clouds have all passed away, and the day is lovely, indeed. Scriptures were read and prayer offered by the Rev. Mr. Winslow, pastor of the Congregational church in Willimantic. The Rev. C. S. Macpeading of Willimantic, was the preacher.

Before the sermon was commenced the Rev. A. G. Axtel, of Westerly, R. I., advocated the needs of that society. They are trying to build a church edifice, but lack the means. He called for contributions. We know this to be a most worthy object, and hope the church in Westerly will receive much help.

Mr. Macreading took for his text, Ephesians 1st chapter, 7th verse. "In whom we have redemption through his blood, the forgiveness of sins, according to the riches of his grace." His theme was redemption.

I. The agent of man's redemption must be adequate to his need. Secrated could not save by wisdom. Plato was only human—Christ divine. Proved by his life, in his power to forgive sin. He healed the sick, restored the blind; but he in a greater sense forgave him of his sin.

II. The word redemption is incomparable in value. Creation is a grand word. We see God in all the world. The sea, the forest, the whole of nature speaks the greatness of God's power. But these things created shall pass away; but the redeemed soul shall live forever. Christ brought immortality to light.

III. God works the power of redemption through human agencies.

The sermon was a good one. All hands enjoyed it.

The Rev. J. H. Hawkins, of Providence exhorted. It being nearly high twelve when the exercises in the desk were concluded, no invitation to come to the altar was extended.

At 1 o'clock, an adjourned meeting of the Camp Meeting association was held. In this meeting it was voted to hold the next camp meeting the last of August; also, to commence it on Saturday, and close the following Saturday. The boarding house committee were authorized to make proper arrangements for board, and fix the price to suit themselves, and for the interests of the association.

2 p. m.—Prayer by the Rev. Laroy Brewster, of Webster, Mass. The Rev. W. V. Morrison, of the Central church, Norwich, was selected to preach.

Before the sermon a general collection was taken, to assist in clearing off the debt of the association. This collection amounted to $107.75. Mr. Morrison took for his text the 3d of Proverbs, 12 verse: "For as a man thinketh in his heart, so is he." It is the internal and not the external upon which God looks. 1. The thoughts of the heart determine the interest which we have in any subject. Under his head he spoke of thought and its various manifestation. Perverted thought almost invariably leads to

LEONARD RETAINS HIS LIGHTWEIGHT CROWN IN EASY BATTLE WITH TENDLER

Ringside, Yankee Stadium, New York, July 23—(By the A. P.)—Benny Leonard, king of the lightweights of the past six years, demonstrated conclusively tonight his undisputed title to the throne by trouncing Lew Tendler, his Philadelphia challenger, in a slashing, bitterly fought 15-round match at the Yankee stadium.

Before a crowd of more than 65,000 that paid a half million dollars to see the match, setting a new high mark for championships outside the heavyweight class, Leonard out-generalled, outboxed and outpunched his foremost rival from start to finish. He held the upper hand, had Tendler on the verge of a knockout at the close and the judges' verdict in his favor at the finish was merely a formality.

Spectacular as was the fight, it lacked the thrill, the suspense and evenness of their memorable battle a year ago at Boyle's Thirty Acres where Leonard, hanging on at one stage, was barely able to gain a margin of victory.

Leonard fought with consummate skill. A master of ring tactics, he had his rugged southpaw challenger baffled by the speed and precision of his attacks, while at the same time he made futile most of Tendler's attempts on the offensive. The champion landed three blows to one in nearly every round.

Tendler Slow

Tendler, on the other hand, seemed slow, lethargic by comparison to the title holder. Blocked in his favorite method of attack—for which Leonard apparently had perfected a remarkable defense—the challenger was left with no effective weapon.

He was wild repeatedly and though he stood up gamely under a terrific battering in several rounds, he seemed in much poorer form than when he gave Leonard a slashing struggle a year ago.

Leonard on the Aggressive

Leonard evidently had learned the lesson of his last fight with Tendler. Instead of permitting his rival to get the jump, the titleholder took the aggressive in the second round and quickly piled up a decisive margin on points. He jumped in and around the challenger, blocking, ducking and sparring while he shot in jolting uppercuts and hooks to the head and body. Tendler, trying gamely to stem the tide, tried rushing but the champion beat him at his own game.

For twelve rounds the champion held the upper hand with ease. Then in the thirteenth, he out loose with a savage drive that soon had Tendler in distress. Sensing the real thrill of the fight, the crowd jumped to its feet, as Leonard, swinging rights and lefts to the head, with terrific force drove Tendler about the ring. Once, from a right to the jaw, Tendler slipped to his knee and it seemed he would take the count but he jumped back to his feet only to be met with another withering attack.

Leonard's Blows Lack Power

Two hard shots to the jaw had Tendler again in distress in the fourteenth. He weathered this storm only to face another smashing attack in the final round. Leonard, trying hard for a knockout, had his opponent reeling and bloody with smashing hooks and uppercuts to the head but they lacked the power to bring down Tendler, who fought back gamely, but ineffectively, to the close.

A majority of ringside experts gave Leonard every round except the first which went to Tendler by a small margin. Some gave the challenger an even break in the seventh but the fact remained that at no time did he appear to have a chance.

The Usual Taffy

"Tendler is the greatest southpaw and one of the greatest lightweights I have ever seen," said the champion later.

"He put up a stiff battle and even in the final rounds, when I got him the hardest, I wasn't able to put him down, although I tried hard."

"Leonard is a great champion," declared Tendler in paying tribute to his conqueror. "I did the best I could but it wasn't good enough. Benny is a master ring general."

Billy Gibson, the titleholder's manager, declared the fight would go down in history as one of the greatest of lightweight battles.

"We're ready for anybody now," he added; "but there does not seem to be anybody in sight in the lightweight ranks. Leonard aspires to the welterweight title and we may arrange a match with Mickey Walker, the present champion in that division."

A Record Crowd

The crowd, massed in every nook and corner of the big stadium, was one of the most picturesque in fight history. Although Promoter Jimmy Johnston's estimate was 15,000 less than the announced capacity of 80,000 it appeared that every spot was filled, except possibly some of the far reaches of the bleachers. Both the attendance and estimated receipts, however, eclipsed the former record for lightweight championships, set at 60,000 and $275,000 in the last Tendler-Leonard scrap.

The Fight by Rounds

Round One—They came together slowly, sparring. Tendler missed a right lead. They clinched lightly. Leonard landed a light left to the jaw and took a left to the jaw. Tendler backed away from Leonard's lead and the crowd roared. Leonard backed slowly to the ropes, avoiding Tendler's rush. They clinched in a neutral corner, moved out into the center and clinched again. Tendler sent his left into the champion's ribs but did little damage. They exchanged body blows in a clinch. Tendler drove Leonard into his own corner with overhand lefts to the jaw and the crowd grew excited. Leonard landed two light left jabs to the face. Tendler rushed in again. The champion clinched. They were sparring away when the bell rang. Both men took it easy.

Round Two—Tendler continued to lead, lashing out a right to the jaw. The champion fell into a clinch. They had a light exchange and clinched again. Tendler rushed into Leonard's arms and took an overhand right to the jaw. Tendler rushed again but Leonard jabbed him with his right hand and sent a volley of solid rights to the jaw. Tendler drove the champion to the ropes, where they had a furious exchange to the challenger's advantage. Leonard jabbed stiffly with left and crossed two hard jabs with his left to the jaw. Leonard resumed the defensive, meeting Tendler's next rush with a stiff right to the head. He then caught the challenger with left jab and pounded him with his right. Tendler walked into a trap in a neutral corner, taking blows from both hands when Leonard laced out. It was a fast round.

Round Four—Tendler led with a right but was short. Leonard retaliated with his left, sending two long uppercuts to the jaw. They did considerable dancing, then Leonard jolted Tendler with a left hook to the jaw and repeated. Leonard landed twice heavily to the head in a clinch and then soaked Tendler in the left eye. Tendler landed two hard lefts to the head and then was caught with his back to the champion, who reached around and curved his right into the challenger's body. Leonard sent two short rights to the body that hurt. They exchanged lightly to the body in a clinch. Tendler left-hooked the champion's jaw and then shot a right below the heart and was short with two rights. Leonard caught the challenger with two stiff rights to the jaw just before the bell stopped the challenger's rush. Tendler's seconds showered him with water when he came to his corner and the champion listened patiently to his handlers' advice.

Round Five—Leonard met Tendler's rush and they exchanged evenly in a neutral corner, where they clinched. Leonard was getting much the better of the clinches now, shooting both hands to the challenger's jaw and then crossing both hands to the jaw when they separated. They clinched lightly and then Leonard speared ineffectively with his left. Leonard sunk a right to Tendler's jaw and then whipped two uppercuts to the jaw. Tendler landed a left to the mouth and then hooked his left to the breast. The champion jabbed expertly with his left, which bothered Tendler, who missed. Tendler caught Leonard with a hard left to the belt and then took a left cross to the head. They rushed into a stiff body exchange just as the bell rang.

Round Six—The majority of experts agree that the champion was leading by a comfortable margin at this stage. They met in the center and clinched. Leonard hooking a left to the jaw a moment later. They danced around. Tendler's right was short and Leonard slashed him with a left to the jaw. Then the champion whipped his right to the body and bothered Tendler with a left jab. Leonard had much the better of a clinch, sending both hands to the jaw. Leonard backed to the ropes for a rest and stepped aside when Tendler moved up, allowing the latter to slip through the rope. When the latter regained his equilibrium they shook hands in the center of the ring. Leonard sent solid rights to the jaw, the body and to the jaw again and had no difficulty in avoiding Tendler's left lead. The champion appeared the least worried as they backed away from a light exchange in answer to the gong.

Round Seven—They sparred for a second after the bell and then both fell away. Leonard gave an opening and Tendler rushed in with light left to the jaw. Tendler relaxed for a moment and Leonard whipped out two rights to the jaw. Tendler turned away desultorily and Leonard whipped two rights to his exposed body. Leonard dug his right under Tendler's ribs. They exchanged lightly and when they came together Leonard sunk two more hard rights just above the belt line. Tendler again walked into the neutral corner trap, where he was caught with a two-handed attack to the head Tendler, who was making a poor showing, fell back against the ropes and Leonard used both hands to the jaw some more. They sparred lightly and were boxing when the bell rang.

Round Nine—Tendler's handlers massaged his muscles and Leonard's continued to offer advice. Tendler landed lightly with his right. They sparred around the ring and then clinched. Leonard's left was bothersome and Tendler clinched. Tendler walked into a straight left and then was cautioned for hitting low with the same hand. The champion blocked him effectively in two clinches. Tendler walked into Leonard's stiff right jolts and the champion crossed and hooked. Tendler became more inaccurate and missing with his left again fell partly through the ropes. Leonard pounded Tendler's body with his right and then forced the challenger away by sending the same hand to the jaw. Leonard uppercut sharply with his right and then lashed his right to the challenger's stomach. Leonard pounded some more at the body. They were separated at the bell.

Round Ten—The champion revolved around the challenger who stood in the center of the ring. Leonard backed into a neutral corner and landed swiftly two hard rights to the head. Leonard missed a short straight uppercut. They clinched. Leonard easily ducked Tendler's advance and stopped his next sally by holding out his left hand. Tendler was again unsuccessful in trying to break through Leonard's defense stopping more jabs and falling into a clinch. Leonard right-hooked and sent a right uppercut to the jaw in close quarters. They sparred. Leonard smashed Tendler on the jaw with a hard right and they were sparring when the round ended.

Round Thirteen—Tendler's handlers were excited and doused newspapermen in their corner with water. The fighters walked into a clinch. Leonard hooked with his left and then hooked harder with his right to the jaw. He smashed Tendler's mouth with a battering right. Leonard uppercut sharply with his right then pushed Tendler away. They clinched slothfully. Leonard whipped a right to the chest and they clinched. Tendler ducked two easy rights and then fell against the ropes for an opportunity to rub his nose. Leonard hooked two hard rights to the head. He then sent a hard right to the jaw and then a hard left. He smashed left to the body which sent Tendler to the floor. The champion sprang to this advantage like a cat but it was a question of whether Tendler slipped. When Tendler stood up he had time to rub off his glove on his pants. Leonard sprang at him, punching to both body and jaw, and Tendler fought back. One of his blows was low and Leonard objected to the referee. The bell rang then and Leonard's manager stepped into the ring, protesting.

Round Fourteen—They clinched. Leonard led lightly with a right. They clinched. Leonard pushed Tendler away. Tendler landed a left to the kidneys in a clinch. Leonard drove both fists to the body in a short clinch. They sparred. Tendler was short with a lead and as the momentum spun him around, Leonard held him up with his right hand. They boxed around and then Leonard landed stiff blows to the head. Tendler appeared slightly groggy and the champion was anxious for a knockout. Tendler covered his face with his two fists while Leonard flailed him briefly. Leonard sent a short right uppercut to the jaw and then went into speedy action. He whipped out his right like a piston grooved to its mark. He landed it three times and then crossed with his left. Leonard was punching when the bell stopped him.

Round Fifteen—They clinched after shaking hands. Tendler became active but walked into hard right and left swings, while a slightly cut left eye began to bleed. Leonard was prancing around very actively. He smashed a straight punch to Tendler's face and drove him to the ropes, where he slowed down. A light exchange and they clinched in the middle of the ring. Leonard sent a hard right to the stomach and two hard rights to the mouth that brought a stream of blood. The crowd was yelling now. Leonard pounded rights and lefts to the body and then to the head. He flayed Tendler with all he had. He pounded Tendler with both hands and had Tendler reeling. Tendler's seconds shouted to him to hold up his hands. In the last ten seconds they were in an easy clinch when the fight ended.

The Preliminaries.

Mike Cancro was awarded the judges' decision over Jimmy Stewart in a four round bout, first preliminary to the Tendler-Leonard championship match tonight. Both are local lightweights, Cancro weighing 136 and Stewart 132 1-2.

Tony Lyons of New York received the judges' decision over Freddy Lux of McKeesport, Pa., in the second preliminary, a six rounder. Lux took counts from right hand jolts to the jaw in the first and last rounds. Lux weighed 145 and Lyons 150.

Babe Herman of San Francisco gained the judges' verdict over Joey Fox to England in the third preliminary, a six rounder, bristling with action. Fox rallied in the last round but did little damage. Fox weighed 126 and Herman 128.

ENCOURAGING OUTLOOK FOR FIRPO-DEMPSEY BOUT, SEPT 3

New York, July 23—Prospects of the early completion of negotiations for a Jack Dempsey-Luis Firpo heavyweight title match were brighter tonight, it was learned, as a result of a lengthy conference today between Promoter Tex Rickard, Jack Kearns, the champion's manager, Firpo and his trainer, Jimmy de Forest.

It was said that an agreement on all essentials to the match was reached at the conference but Rickard, while admitting some progress had been made, said he was ready for no definite announcement.

The final step in plans for the bout may be completed at another conference, slated for tomorrow.

While Rickard has withheld any definite information as to the date and site of the proposed match, it was believed he was arranging to stage it at the Polo grounds around Labor day, if present efforts to effect a working agreement with the Polo grounds A. C. succeed.

It was indicated that the promoter had practically abandoned his recent proposal to make the match to Buenos Aires, capital of Fripo's native Argentine, believing the financial risk too great.

FEATHERWEIGHTS COMPLETE THEIR FINAL TRAINING

New York, July 23—Eugene Criqui, of France, featherweight champion and Johnny Dundee, of New York, who are matched for a 15-round title bout at the Polo grounds Thursday night, practically finished their training today. SWEETSER LEADS FIELD AND ESTABLISHES RECORD

Cleveland, Ohio, July 23—Over the difficult and beautiful links of the Mayfield Country club, fast golf was played today in the first qualifying round of the Western amateur championship, and it fell to Jess Sweetser of New York, national amateur champion, not only to lead the field by three strokes, but to establish officially his course record of 68, first scored Sunday in practice.

Chick Evans, defending champion for the seventh time, was seven strokes behind Sweetser. The Chicagoan went out in 35, one under par, and he played raggedly on the second 9nine, taking 40 for a 75.

The nearest competitor Sweetser had in his better than par run was Captain E. F. Carter of Chicago, formerly Irish champion, who scored 35-36—71. Ned Sawyer of New York, who established

POSTED PICNIC GROUNDS.

Have you gone to some of your favorite picnic ground this summer and found it posted against trespassers?

Have you expressed your disgust at such a discovery and given vent to your feelings concerning the interference with your pleasures?

Have you stopped to give consideration to what might have actuated the owner in taking such action?

If you have been generous with the owner you have probably come to the conclusion that he was actuated by the fact that there were too many of the pleasure seekers and picnickers who abused the privileges that had been accorded them, left the grounds littered with all kinds of debris which had to be cleaned and possibly in their desire to have a good time they let themselves loose to the extent of destroying property and otherwise making themselves objectionable.

Many a time it is that those who observe all the proprieties when picnicking are forced to go elsewhere just because of the acts of the other careless individuals who may never be coming there again or who are unwilling to leave well kept grounds as they found them.

It is just such a class as this that makes necessary a constantly increasing list of laws and restrictions. Bent on having a good time they shed all responsibilities, make a dump of the property of others, raise havoc with vegetation and destroy whenever the notion seizes them regardless of the fact that they are imposing upon the good nature and the rights of others. It cannot be expected that such is going to continue forever. Resentment is the natural result and it is resentment that prompts the posting of property against picnickers.

Looked at from the standpoint of the property owner, it is the natural result. There is no one to blame except that selfish class of pleasure seekers who insist upon leaving their litter for others to clean up.

NO SEAL OF APPROVAL FOR SOVIET.

There are those who have clamored in the past and some who still cry for the recognition of the soviet government of Russia. A few even demand that the United States extend recognition and thereby give its endorsement to a government that is backing principles which this country never can approve.

It is possible for them to claim that the soviet government has made concessions and that it is not the government that it was a few years ago. All that is correct but those concessions have been made and changes have been brought about only because of the manner in which other nations have refused to extend recognition and the setting forth of what other governments would require before they could recognize it. Had, there been recognition of it when it was at its worse there is little reason for believing that it would be any different today.

That this government is quite as firm now as it has been in the past against recognizing soviet Russia is clearly set forth in the statement by Secretary Hughes who points out that it is not because of a lack of sincere friendliness toward the Russian people but because there is an unwillingness to place the seal of approval on the tyrannical measures that have been adopted in Russia that we refrain from recognition.

Furthermore he points out that the soviet government has repudiated its obligations that world revolution is still the aim of the soviet and that the spirit of destruction remains unaltered in Russia.

Think of seeking better relationship with a government which is avowedly committed to the encouragement of world revolution. There may be some howlers who raise the cry of recognizing Russia because of a lack of something else to do. Others are crying for world peace and adjustment and still urging support for a government that is pledged to the opposite. There is nothing in the conduct of the soviet government that calls for encouragement by this government as long as it remains committed to its present policies.

WHERE THE TROUBLE LIES.

From time to time we hear about the great dissatisfaction expressed by Europeans because they have not been admitted to this country. They have come to these shores with the idea of making this their home and becoming citizens. They have been of the class that might easily be rated as desirable. They have been able to meet the requirements of the country as to qualifications. But they have unfortunately come at a time when according to the immigration law it is impossible to admit them. They have run against the restrictive feature of the immigration law and because the quota for their country had been admitted before they got here they have been sent back. Naturally it doesn't make them feel very good. They are peeved but they do not stop to realize that such refusal might have been overcome had they taken the opportunity to ascertain before they left their home whether they could be admitted under the quota for their country.

Somehow the idea seems to prevail that all that is required is to cross the ocean and make application in order to be admitted. While that may have been the case at one time it is not so today. It is to be regretted that there are so many who fail to protect themselves against such fruitless trips by inquiry a sufficient time in advance to know before they start whether they can be admitted insofar as the quota is concerned.

This is one of the troubles encountered in the enforcement of the restrictive law and the monthly quota plan. That this matter should get attention in connection with any change in the immigration law has been made sufficiently clear. The testing of prospective settlers in this country in the country which they are about to leave has long been urged. Along with it there should be some arrangement made between nations whereby the embarking of emigrants after the limit of admissions had been reached would be checked. Such would avoid much of the trouble that is now experienced.

LIVES THROWN AWAY.

For the time being the number of untimely deaths seems to have switched from the highway to the ponds, rivers and beaches. There are still too many being killed by the automobile but Sunday's record of deaths by drownings in the state was deplorable.

Unreasonable as it may seem there are still those who carry the idea that they can dive into deep water and escape the consequences without knowing how to swim. Such an act is foolhardy, to say the least, and it is grossly unjust when it also means the death of another who makes a heroic effort to effect a rescue.

Quite as needless is the drowning of those who proceed to go beyond their depth when unable to swim, or the paralyzing of those who plunge into shallow water when no good reason for such action exists.

The idea of taking unwarranted chances is revealed in all its horrors by the list of those who gave up their lives when they were seeking pleasure and could have obtained it to the same degree of satisfaction without having even placed their lives in jeopardy.

At some bad railroad crossings there have been erected suitably inscribed markers telling of the deaths that have occurred there because of the carelessness displayed. Perhaps it might be a good idea to erect similar markers at bathing beaches, swimming holes and river banks where lives have been needlessly thrown away. Whether such would prove a sufficient warning for some is seriously questioned.

BELLEAU WOOD MEMORIAL.

Whether they participated in the struggle at that point or whether they had relatives of friends who did, there is bound to be much satisfaction expressed at the action taken in dedicating Belleau wood in France as a permanent American war memorial.

Belleau wood and Chateau Thierry are outstanding points in connection with the participation of American troops in the struggle in France. When General Pershing termed it the Gettysburg of the World war it clearly indicated the type of struggle that was waged there and the importance of it in connection with the outcome of the war.

That such a place might have made an excellent site for a hotel can be readily imagined. That it was prevented from becoming such was due to the American effort for the acquisition of it as a war memorial. Acquired and now dedicated it will stand as an objective of those who visit the fields of war activities in Europe during the many years to come and reflect the patriotism of those who crossed the ocean and the country that sent them in the struggle for the upholding of rights and the checking of the world conquest by the Germans.

That Belleau wood should be withheld from commercialization is fitting. That it should be preserved as the war memorial that it is to be was long ago settled by the people of this country who supported the committee in its efforts to purchase it. There is no danger that the struggle that took place there will ever be forgotten but the making of it a war memorial will doubly insure against any such possibility.

SHORT CHANGE

"I have been shopping today," said Mrs. Simmons' niece. "And I would have had a very successful time of it if it hadn't been for trouble about my change."

"It probably was accidental," said her aunt soothingly. "When a cashier gets tired she may very easily make a mistake. I know when I am tired I sometimes find it hard to tell a nickel from a quarter."

"It was worse than that," said the niece. "You see, I had a birthday and George gave me a gold piece so I started out to spend it, feeling as rich as could be. There were several things I wanted in the way of fancy duds, so I was glad he gave me money in addition to the tall lamp for the living room. Well, I set out early this morning and went to a store to get myself a string of beads to match that new blue dress I got three weeks ago. I was so excited to think I had been able to get the beads I wanted for so long, that I very foolishly forgot to count my change."

"Oh, my dear girl!" exclaimed Mrs. Simmons.

"I don't know what made me so stupid," sighed her niece. But I was. Afterward I noted a $5 shortage, which is something in my young life."

"I should think so," exclaimed Mrs. Simmons. "Are you sure that that store was where the mistake was made?"

"I was positive," declared her niece. "You see I went from there to a milliner's and got a new cap for the baby, the cutest little trick you ever laid eyes on, her first straw. I didn't use the birthday money there, but I did when I got myself a new umbrella at another shop. I went to four more stores and than I made the startling discovery that I was $5 short. I went back to each store in turn to see if I had possibly dropped it or been short-changed there.

"Each clerk was very nice about it and showed me her check stub to prove what I had given her. At one place I could not remember who had waited on me, so the floorman called five girls and I had to select one.

"I had to give it up, because they said that the girl who must have waited on me was out at lunch, but I was sure I had not lost the money there."

"You might have dropped it out of your purse," said Mrs. Simmons. "It is quite easy to do that especially if you have other things in your bag."

"I thought of that," said her niece. "And in each store I went to the lost and found department to inquire if any money had been turned in. I was beginning to get pretty tired, trutting back to all those counters and hunting up my clerk.

"I finally got back to the store where I had begun," continued the niece. "I took quite a while for the clerk who had waited on me to be free but I waited until she got through with her customer and started in on my tale of woe. She was very much interested and I was relieved to discover that she remembered the gold piece."

"Gold pieces are not common nowadays," said her aunt.

"I know I never had one before in my life," declared the niece. "I have never seen enough of them to recognise them. Well, this girl was very nice about it but she insisted that she had given me the correct change and nothing I could say would move her. She called the head of the department and I had to tell my story all over again. I had told it so often that I was afraid it sounded too glib to be true, but she listened politely and then asked me to tell it over again to a floorman."

"You certainly were earning your $5," laughed Mrs. Simmons.

"Oh that wasn't all," said her niece. "The floorman called somebody else and I began the whole thing over again. Everybody was sympathetic and though they did say mistakes were not usually rectified after the person had left the store they were very willing to do everything in their power to help me find the money.

"They were so nice they made me feel all the worse. If they had been horrid I shouldn't have minded. You see the man they called last summoned another man and while they all stood around I started my story again. This man had a very kind and interested manner and he did not interrupt until I got all through telling him how my husband had given me a $25 gold piece and I had bought a string of beads, receiving change for a $20 instead of $25."

"Such a clear statement," said her aunt. "I suppose the new arrival ordered the cashier to refund the five and you went on your way rejoicing."

"He heard me to the end of the tale," said the niece sheepishly. "And then he very gently and kindly informed me that what I gave the clerk must have been a $20 gold piece, as there is no such thing as one $25."—Chicago News.

IN THE PUBLIC EYE

Count Michael Karolyi, who is reported to have arrived in England on his way to Canada, where he plans to reside permanently, is a celebrated Hungarian statesman who served for a short time as president of the Hungarian republic. Before the war he was a member of the Hungarian parliament and president of the Hungarian independent party. He is personally acquainted with America and Americans, having visited this side just prior to the beginning of the European war for the purpose of raising funds for a campaign in behalf of a more extended ballot in Hungary. Soon after he returned home he created a sensation in the Hungarian parliament by demanding that the government should make peace proposals to the enemy powers. After the war he was imprisoned for a time, but finally made his escape to Italy. The Karolyi family is one of the most illustrious and historic of the old Magyar aristocracy.

Wives of Famous Men

Fanny Sanderson, Wife of Robert Stephenson.

A woman whose will was law to her husband, and who always got her way because she never seemed to care whether she got it or not, was Fanny Sanderson, the clever, good looking wife of Robert Stephenson, great engineer and inventor of the first locomotive.

Mrs. Stephenson's most marked characteristic was her tact, which she exercises not merely over her husband, but also over anybody and everybody who might be of assistance to him in his profession. By this quality and her amiability, Mrs. Stephenson made her husband popular among his scientific colleagues and their home was always a gathering place for the profession.

As a housekeeper Fanny was unexcelled. She was quick, unobstrusive in her domestic duties, economical but not stingy. She was a good cook and an excellent manager, qualities that meant much in the early days of their married life. In addition to all these accomplishments she was an interesting conversationalist and unusually pretty. Her chief claim to beauty was a pair of sparkling black eyes, which captivated all who came within their radius.

Their life together was exceedingly happy until cancer, that dread plague, fastened itself tenaciously upon Mrs. Stephenson. Her husband won many honors, but she was so ill that she could scarcely show any interest in them, although she made a pathetic pretense of doing so for his sake. After two years of acute suffering, patiently borne, she died. Recording the event in his diary, her husband wrote:

"My dear Fanny died this morning at 5 o'clock. God grant that I may close my life as she has done, in the true faith and in charity with all men. Her last moments were perfect calmness."

On her deathbed Mrs. Stephenson urged her husband to marry again and this was the only wish of hers with which he did not comply.

Stories That Recall Others

Green Apples Ripe?

Two boys coming from opposite directions met in the street. One boy had his mouth and hands full of green apples. The other boy, looking up as he passed, exclaimed:

"Are the green apples ripe already?"

Wisdom of Babes

Dorothy, age five, lives in the neighborhood where two of the neighbors keep cows. One cow is kept in a small lot and is very gentle. The other usually is tied in the yard or along the street in front of the house where boys tease her. When children pass she jumps at them with a bellow that sends them running in all directions.

The other day as Dorothy stood by the owner of the gentle cow she said: "I like your cow, 'cause she isn't mean to children, but when mamma sends me on an errand to Mr. ——— I look to see where the cow ain't and then I go that way."

CHILD TRAINING

A WORD OF PRAISE.

By Mrs. Nestor Noel.

"How badly you weeded the garden," remarked a mother to her young boy one hot day.

The boy, John, looked ashamed, as I had just entered the garden.

"I've done all that lot," he said, pointing to a well-weeded bed. "I can't do it all in one day." He threw down his hoe and went sulking into the house.

"It's always like that," remarked his mother to me. "He can't finish what he begins."

"Perhaps you give him too much to do at a time," I ventured. "He seems to have done that bed of pansies beautifully, and it is very hot today."

"So it is," said the mother. "Come on to the porch and we'll have some iced lemonade. It isn't fit for a dog to be outside. See how lazy Rollo is. He doesn't even get up to welcome you."

The dog wagged his tail lazily, but did not move.

Yes! It was not a day on which a dog could be expected to exert himself. Yet this woman had expected a boy to do a man's job. When I expostulated with her mildly, she remarked: "A boy must do something, or he will only get into mischief."

I have often seen women of this type and pitied their sons. This woman was cross with her boy for what he had not done, yet never gave him one word of praise for the beautiful bed of pansies which he left as perfect as an experienced gardener might have done.

I have had a great deal to do with children and I have invariably found that a word of praise will bring out the best that is in them and induce them to greater efforts. Why not let them have the word? It costs us nothing.

In looking over a child's work, why not notice the good qualities about it as well as the bad? For instance, that mother might have said: "How well you have done the pansy bed. It's hot now. Suppose you rest, and finish the other part later on." The boy would have welcomed the word of praise, especially in front of a stranger, and he would have worked twice as hard in the cool of the evening, until the rest of the garden was as good as the first part.

In his own home, a boy is often set to work with no word of encouragement and nothing to reduce the drudgery of his home tasks.

Even filling the wood box, the boy's daily job, could be made less irksome. A boy often says, "I'm forever filling that box," but a mother could change his point of view and make it a pleasant job if she made the boy realize that she needed the wood to cook good things for him.

I do not believe in paying a child for every bit of work he does, because he must bear his share in the household but I believe the kind word of appreciation should be given more often than it is. A word is not much. We do not have to open our purses to give it. Why then are mothers so chary of this little word of praise when it brings such good results?

POETRY

THE TRACK WALKER.

With head down and shoulders stooped,
And slow, home-keeping eye
Fixed on the rails, a silent shape,
The track walker goes by.

A five-mile strip of grimy stones
Edged with an iron band
Is all his world. June snows
That drift in dalnies o'er the land.

He heeds not, nor red autumn leaves
That rustle down the air;
Rail, bolt and bar to keep in place,
That is his only care.

He quits the track ten steps before
The rushing train shotes past;
Then stoops, while still the pebbles whirl,
And makes a loose bolt fast.

The ruin hid in sullen flood,
Slow rust, and silent frost,
'Tis his to fend; and men ride by
In cushioned ease, at cost

Of his long march, and lonely watch,
Nor give a backward thought
To the bent shape and plodding feet
Whose care their safety brought.

Morn is to him a sentry-beat,
To tread mid heat and rain;
His noon, a place to turn and start
Back through the night again.

A ceaseless traveler, all his days,
New lands he ne'er may roam;
In yonder orchard is his house.
Here, twixt the rails, his home.

Unmourned, unmissed, he dies, to find
(The last lone miles all trod).
That, whose walks a railway track
Aright, has walked with God!
—Youths Companion.

HURDY-GURDY.

Spring comes down the city street
Grinding out his ancient tunes
Somewhat off the key, but sweet.

What has this to do with me?
Yet I throw the window up
And lean out to hear and see.

Spring's an old man, bent and brown,
Selling music and balloons
To the people of the town.

With his music like the cry
Of their flesh and blood and bones,
All the young folks pass him by.

They possess the sun and moon
And a heart as round and full,
Need they buy a red balloon?

But the older people spill
Silver coins into his hat
For a reminiscent thrill.

Who shall say that I am old!
He has not a cent of mine,
But the wind blows thin and cold.

I have heard because I must,
Now I put the window down
And my hands are black with dust.

Want to Keep Your Hair Perpetually Curly?

Perpetually wavy or curly hair is now within the means of every woman to possess. One need only get a few ounces of plain liquid silmerine from the druggist and apply a little of it occasionally with a brush before doing up the hair. When this dries the most beautiful natural looking waves and creases imaginable are in evidence. Wind and heat do not affect the curliness as where a heated iron has been used. Liquid silmerine is so pure and harmless there is not the slightest danger of spotting the scalp or streaking the hair, and it leaves no sticky or greasy trace. It keeps the hair soft, silky and lustrous.

Hiram Harris

Mr. Harris was born in Brooklyn, Conn., Oct. 24, 1834, the son of Edwin and Rachel Harris. When a young man he was an overseer in the cotton mills in New Hartford. Later giving up his position on account of his health he purchased the saw mill and grist mill in the Pond Hill district just out of Moosup village where he was in business forty years.

On Oct. 21, 1856 he was united in marriage with Cynthia E. Lyon at Central Village. Five children were born to them, Eugene Arthur, of Worcester, Mass.; Agnes May, Mrs. Charles E. Ayer of Dayville, Conn.; Amie, who died in infancy; Winifred Estelle, Mrs. John B. Stanton of this city; and Florence Ellen, formerly Mrs. George D. Thompson, now Mrs. John Kelly of Fresno, Calif. There are six grandchildren, Edna Harris Ayer, Avery Harris and Marcia Clarice Stanton, Janet Lyon, Leslie George and Louise Thompson.

He is also survived by an older brother, William H. Harris of Old Mystic, who is in the 91st year of his age.

Since the death of his wife, over 17 years ago, Mr. Harris has made his home in Dayville with his daughter, Mrs. Ayer. He was a staunch republican and up to the present time took a keen interest in reading of all political affairs of the nation and abroad. A great lover of nature, he could tell of the habits and life of most of our New England birds and plant life. He attended the Methodist Episcopal church while in Moosup. He was of a retiring disposition, loved the quiet of his home, was devoted to his family and always ready to do neighborly acts of kindness and to give aid and assistance in cases of sickness.

On Sunday, July 15th, Mr. Harris suffered a shock from the effects of which he never recovered and after one who sleeps. Burial will take place lingering a week passed on quietly as in the family plot in the Evergreen cemetery at Central Village.

COURT STARTLED WHEN A BOTTLE OF BEER EXPLODED

New York, July 23.—Patrolman McDonnell was in the witness stand today telling Magistrate House about David Bailey, whom he had arrested after a chase and an exchange of shots.

"I shot all the bullets out of my gun at him," said McDonnell, "and started running after him, just then—"

And just then there was a loud report in the court room. Spectators started for the doorways. Magistrate House jumped from his chair, and leaned over his desk. Patrolman McDonnell jumped from his chair and sat down on the floor.

A bottle of beer he was carrying for evidence in another case had exploded in his pocket.

URGE POULTRYMEN TO COMBINE TO MEET WESTERN COMPETITION

A meeting of interest to poultrymen was held Monday night in the rooms of the New London County Farm Bureau in the Shannon building, County Agent Walter Clark presiding.

The first talk of the evening was given by Professor Roy Jones, poultry extension specialist of the Connecticut Agricultural College at Storrs, who first conducted the meeting of the club, various members giving reports of records of club work. The talk of Professor Jones was on Egg Production during which he stated that the best way to speed-up production was to cull out the non-producing poultry to make way for those that give the best egg production. At the close of his talk a forum was conducted, in which members and guests placed questions before the meeting for a general discussion.

The second speaker of the evening was E. Newton Searles of Pomfret Center, president of the Eastern Connecticut Poultry Producers association, who spoke of the work of the association.

It was brought out that the association was formed to band together the poultrymen of New London, Windham and Tolland counties and get them to send their eggs to a common market, The Farmers' Exchange, Inc., in Providence, where the eggs would be candied and then graded and crated for distribution. The purpose of the association, it was explained, is to combine the strength of the poultry raisers in Eastern Connecticut in shipping eggs into the market, thus working up a select trade and receiving better prices for the eggs.

The need of such an association is called for, it is said, because of the great numbers of middle western eggs that are now being shipped into eastern markets. The poultrymen of the middle west can raise their flocks cheaper than the poultrymen of eastern Connecticut and after crating the eggs and paying the freight on carloads can get them into eastern markets in about two weeks, to sell at a price as low and in some cases lower than the cost of production in this state.

The association hopes to gain more members throughout the eastern section of the state, gain a large number of poultrymen handling large production and by getting the eggs into the market be able to combat the western competition and establish a trade that cannot be taken away.

It is expected that the association in eastern Connecticut will continue to gain in membership and that within a few years it will be in a position to more than meet the competition of the middle western poultrymen, and thus retain the eastern market for themselves.

ABATEMENT CLAIMS CUT FROM 13 TO 6 MILLION

Claims for abatement of federal taxes have been reduced from $13,000,000 to $6,877,587.25 in Connecticut in two years, according to a report sent to Washington by United States Internal Revenue Collector Robert O. Eaton. Under instructions of Commissioner David H. Blair, the Connecticut bureau has set out to collect claims that have been pending six years, in some instances. Over $4,000,000 was cut in the past year from the amount of claims presented, which were disallowed in Washington.

Collector Eaton also notified Commissioner Blair that the net total of additional taxes assessed against individuals in Connecticut who filed income tax returns of less than $5,000 for the past calendar year was $8,536,043, and that 95 per cent. of these additional assessments have already been collected. The taxes assessed this year under $5,000 aggregate $1,082,105.62, and the proportion of additions made by the revenue office is the lowest on record in the Connecticut office. Most of the additional taxes assessed were caused by disallowance of deductions claimed by the taxpayers.

Returns on incomes less than $5,000 are audited entirely in the Connecticut office, and are not forwarded to Washington, but the internal revenue commission is informed of any addition or other corrections made. There were 113,809 such returns this year, of which 58,333 reported taxable incomes, while 55,476 reported non-taxable incomes.

The returns on incomes of $5,000 or more have been forwarded to Washington for auditing. No report as to additions made on such returns is expected for several months.

NORWICH FIGHT FANS HEAR BULLETIN'S RETURNS

Fight fans in Norwich packed Franklin street in front of The Bulletin office Monday night and stayed until nearly midnight listening to the returns on the Leonard-Tendler fight at the Yankee Stadium. The crowd was orderly as usual and had several attractions besides the fight returns to keep them in good humor, passing autoists coming in for a good share of the joy making.

It was evident from the start that the champion was favored to win and all evening Tendler money was as hard to find as an old maid without her pet cats. However, a few bets were grabbed up at odds of 10 to 7 or 5 to 3 on Leonard to win, but even these were few.

The announcing by "Steve" Coffey by megaphone met with the usual favor and gave the listening fans a clear picture of the fight from round to round.

Besides the crowd at The Bulletin office hundreds of people were served by telephone during the evening, the various lines being tied up through out the night by members of both sexes who were following the fistic battle round by round.

The Bulletin service also reached out into Willimantic to Wood's Smoke Shop and here the fans of the Thread City heard the fight round by round as it was phoned from the office and from all accounts the boys there were satisfied with the result of the fight, as Willimantic was for Leonard to win.

BERT LUCAS WRITES OF SIGHTS AROUND SEATTLE

The weather here in Seattle is cool at this writing. On June 1st I took my third ride to Tacoma, this time by boat. I met the finest lot of Elks whom I have come in contact with since I left home. They have a fine home and I spent a very nice day at the club. The fare to Tacoma is only 80 cents over and back and the trip provides a very beautiful sail. On June 3rd I went over to Bremmerton, the largest government shipyard on the Pacific coast, and was taken all through the navy yard. There are about 5,000 sailors there at present. I met several from Boston, Connecticut and New York, and other places. I visited the Elks' home there and found a beautiful home with the finest kind of Elks. I spent the afternoon at the club and returned home by boat about 7.30 o'clock.

Out here in Washington they have many picnic camps fitted with large stone fireplaces and provide free firewood and tables just for anyone who wants to go there for a picnic. Thousands make use of these camps every Sunday, they are wonderful and I never saw anything like it in the east. You should see the autos, especially on Sundays, all equipped with tents, cooking utensils, and every conceivable thing to make a week end camping trip enjoyable. The roads out here are of the finest, it being a pleasure to ride on them. On June 6th I rode down to Portland, Ore., a distance of about 200 miles through Centralia and Tacoma on the Pacific highway. This is the trunk line from California to Canada. On June 9th I took another auto trip to a place they call Walla Walla, the states prison on the Columbia highway. I went on another automobile trip on June 14th to Aberdeen, a small but very pretty little place about 100 miles out. The next day I took in a little fishing trip up to a lake called Goodwin, where I caught quite a few lake trout, bass, perch and so forth. On June 23rd I took an auto trip to Bellingham, the largest lumber town in Washington, and the far northwest. We went up to Marcomb Park and had our dinner, cooked coffee and warmed up our eats on the stoves provided by the different counties. It was a beautiful natural park with a beautiful stream coming tripping down out of the mountains with trails on each side of the ravine. No matter where one goes out here one sees the most gorgeous scenery. On the way to Bellingham one passes through several beautiful towns, one in particular is Mt. Vernon, a most beautiful town, and as one goes his way in and out around the mountains one sees some very fine scenery.

On June 25th I took a most beautiful ride up to Victoria, British Columbia, the place where one can get 14 per cent. Spring ale or A 1 whiskey by obtaining a liquor or beer permit. That was my first errand, to get a permit, "WHICH I DID."

On the trip one passes through the Gulf Islands which makes a very pleasing trip, and is one of the prettiest trips on the water. On the way over we stopped at Roche's Harbor where there is a lime kiln, the largest one in the world. I stayed five days in Victoria and believe me I did have a fine time and I wish this country was like that in regard to the liquor traffic. I will take in Vancouver next as I have a permit to purchase liquor or beer anywhere in British Columbia, and I will get my fill before I get back to the home of moonshine and home brew. I certainly felt 25 years younger while I was up there in the land of pleasure. I put up at the Dominion hotel, and I had the honor of meeting the mayor of Victoria and had quite a chat with him. His name was Haywood. I visited the house of parliament and went all through the museum, visited the Elks' club and was treated royally. Made me think of old times at home. I am a good swimmer and kept on top. I felt like a new person while in Victoria, often drinking three bottle of 14 per cent. ale and I am a new man believe me. I got a great kick out of it and a real time all on account of getting some first class ale. This was the best trip I have had since leaving home. If we can't get prohibition knocked out, why not have it like it is in Victoria. I never saw a soul drunk while there. You can't drink it outside of your home for there is a $50 fine for the first offense, $100 for the second offense and jail for the third offense. You have to drink it in your home, wherever it may be.

Will tell you more about Victoria in my next letter.

SENDING FEWER CHILDREN TO THE COUNTY HOMES

Not since 1887 has there been a year with so few children committed to county temporary homes in Connecticut as during the second year of the existence of the bureau of child welfare of the state department of public welfare which ended June 30. According to figures made public by Commissioner Charles E. Dow, only 171 children were sent to the county homes in the year just closed, a smaller number than for any year since the establishment of the homes in 1883, except in 1884, 1885 and 1887. The number committed in the year just ended is 33 per cent. less than the average number committed each year during the ten years prior to the establishment of the bureau of child welfare. That ten year average was 368.

Must Preserve Home.

The reason for this marked decrease of the number of children in institutions, according to scores of social service workers throughout the state, is the humanitarian spirit displayed by Commissioner Dow and his desire to keep the home intact.

"It is the last thing to do," said Commissioner Dow, "this breaking up of the home which some social service workers rush to on the least provocation. Keep the child with its mother as long as possible. No home should ever be broken up because of poverty alone. The poorest home is often better than the best institution."

The bureau, he said, is firmly in accord with the belief that the family is the best unit for the successful bringing up of a child. If it is found necessary to take a child away from its parents, every effort is made to find relatives who will take the youngster before he is committed to a county home. If relatives cannot be found, attempts are made to place the child in some family. Commissioner Dow holds that, for a child who is normal physically and mentally, it is better that he should live as a member of a family group than that he should be one with several hundred children in an institution.

Comparison of the figures regarding commitments last year with those of the eighties is more significant when the increase in population is considered. In 1890 the federal census gave Connecticut a population of 46,258, while today it has nearly twice that number. There has also been a marked change in the character of the population. In the three years when the commitments went below those of last year, the figures were 144, 162 and 146.

Return to Relatives.

Commissioner Dow announced yesterday that the bureau has started an investigation of the parents and relatives of all children in temporary county homes. The investigation is to determine whether there are parents or relatives who may properly take the children into their homes. Commissioner Dow believes that 10 per cent of the more than 1,100 in all county homes may be returned to parents or relatives, as, in the short time the survey has been under way, 10 per cent. of the children whose family history has been studied have been returned to their kin.

Foster Homes.

Another record was broken last month when the largest number of children were placed out in foster homes and with relatives of any one month since the bureau began its work. Forty-nine children were saved in June from institutions.

Before last month, 30 children made a high number to be sent to private families. The average before Commissioner Dow took up the work October 1, 1921 was 20 children a month.

Listed among those who are taking children from county homes are professional men. A short time ago, a little girl was placed from one of the homes in the family of a college professor with a view to legal adoption. A boy went to the family of the superintendent of a large manufacturing company. Arrangements have just been made for placing a boy in the home of a prominent lawyer. Many children, said Commissioner Dow, are placed in homes of more ordinary type but they are always given devoted care.

The bureau has 16 women and one man traveling about the state looking after the interests of the children.

Care Continues.

The work of the bureau does not end when the children are placed with a family. Special care is taken that they do not work beyond their years and strength. When children are of age and ability that makes their services worth something more than board and clothing and when they do not go to school, it is required that reasonable wages be paid them. A small amount of the wages earned is allowed the child for spending money and a savings bank account is opened in which the deposits are made regularly for the child's benefit.

All placements are made strictly in accordance with the statutory requirements as regarding the placing of children in homes of the same religious faith as that of their parents. At the present time the bureau is particularly desirous of securing homes for the Roman Catholic faith.

LIQUOR CASES IN COURTS WITH LARGEST PENALTIES

What federal officers term the most radical and sweeping plan for the strict enforcement of prohibition ever attempted in this country has been quietly in operation in Hartford county since Saturday morning and calls for the union of the United States court and the superior court in an effort to give jail sentences to all first offenders.

Finding the Volstead act and the eighteenth amendment too weak to support the proper enforcement of the liquor laws of this state, the federal authorities, headed by United States Attorney Allan K. Smith and Prohibition Director Frank T. Putney, have enlisted the aid of State Attorney Hugh M. Alcorn and the superior court.

In the future the question of whether a liquor law violator will be prosecuted in the superior court or federal court, regardless of who made the arrest, will be decided solely by the penalty provided in each jurisdiction. The court providing the larger penalty for the specific offense will handle the prosecution.

Especially will this be true with respect to cases involving the transportation of liquor. In such cases the federal law provides a fine of $500 for the first offense while under the state laws a fine of $2,000 or two years' imprisonment, or both, is allowable. This means that few Hartford county transportation cases will be handled in the federal court hereafter.

In every case will the courts be interchangeable. When an arrest for transportation of liquor is made by the police in any town or city the case will be removed from the jurisdiction of the town court as soon as possible through the issuance of a bench warrant at the request of the state attorney.

To Stiff Cases.

But even there the prosecution will not rest, for when the state authorities have disposed of the case, the United States attorney's office will take immediate steps to seize and hold the automobile with which the offense was committed.

It is the aim of the federal authorities to extend the scope of this plan to all counties of the state, until finally Connecticut will be one of the driest states in the Union. The state attorneys of New London, Litchfield, Middlesex and Tolland counties Saturday night expressed their approval of the plan and intimated their willingness to put it into operation in their districts when requested.

Follows Important Parley.

Details of the scheme were worked out Friday at a conference attended by Mr. Alcorn, United States Attorney George H. Cohen, Prohibition Director Putney, Chief Enforcement Agent James B. Wheeler and County Detective Edward J. Hickey.

Among the differences in maximum penalties provided for liquor offenses by the state and federal courts are the following:

Under the state liquor laws, manufacture, and possession with intent to sell of liquor, is punishable on the first offense by a maximum fine of $300 or 30 days' imprisonment, or both. In the federal court the manufacture and sale of liquor on the first offense is punishable by a maximum fine of $1,000 or six months' imprisonment, or both. Thus in the case of these latter two offenses, the prosecution will be handled in the federal courts. The penalties for transportation have already been mentioned. Cases involving the possession of liquor with intent to sell will probably go to the superior court as a jail penalty of 30 days is allowable there, while the federal law only provides for a fine for the first offense.

No opposition to the plan is expected from the federal courts since Judge Edwin S. Thomas of South Norwalk, district judge of the United States court, has frequently ruled that the jurisdiction of the two courts is even great enough to allow prosecution in each for the same offense.

State attorneys from other counties than Hartford were unsparing in their praise of the idea and in their faith in its practicability.

State Attorney Hadlai A. Hull of New London county, although saying that in this county the liquor cases were all handled in the criminal court of common pleas, expressed his approval in common with the others.

"I do not see any difficulty in the way of its adoption and operation," he said, "and I do approve of it thoroughly."

Federal prohibition agents, as a result of the conference will be asked to make a special effort to do their share toward assuring its success. Under recent rulings by Judge Thomas a search warrant is unnecessary in the case of an automobile stopped on the highways, and an agent may search the car and any receptacles within the car for liquor without violating the rights of the occupants. The same holds true in the case of a man walking through the streets with a suitcase, for, if the agent has sufficient reason to believe that the suitcase may contain liquor, a search may be made without a warrant.

Exceptions to the plan of an interchange of cases will only be made when the dockets of either court become too clogged to allow an immediate disposition of pending cases.

A safe, certain method for ridding the skin of ugly, hairy growths is as follows: Mix a paste with some powdered delatone and water, apply to hairy surface about 5 minutes, then rub off, wash the skin and the hairs are gone. This is entirely harmless and seldom requires repeating, but to avoid disappointment it is advisable to see that you get genuine delatone. Mix fresh as wanted.

DANIELSON

Another touring car with a Massachusetts registration 260,399 skidded, turned over and went through the fence at the identical spot where Miss Helen Welch of Providence was killed on the afternoon of the Fourth near the foot of the steep hill at South Killingly. The driver received a cut on the cheek and a young woman fainted from the shock of her experience. Other occupants of the car were a woman and young man. The driver tore away the cloth top of the car with his hand to extricate the other passengers. A Hartford car that was in the rear of the wrecked machine picked up all the members of the party before their names could be obtained by anyone and Monday night the state police were without knowledge of their identity. The young man who was driving the wrecked car said that the party was hurrying to New Haven where a relatives was desperately ill.

Lightning struck the Congregational church at Canterbury Green, Monday afternoon, damaging the spire and setting the belfry afire. The fire was extinguished before it did any great damage.

In the town court Monday morning, Judge W. Fenner Woodward imposed a jail sentence of 30 days and a fine of $200 and costs, a total of $234.09, on Peter Ennis, arrested Saturday night after a raid at his home on Morin avenue by Deputy Sheriff Charles E. Ayer and Chief John McFarland.

Ennis was given the 30 days' sentence, execution of which was suspended, on a count charging reputation and the fine of $200 on a count alleging keeping with intent to sell. His first plea to the charges was not guilty, but he later changed this to guilty and paid the amount assessed against him.

Another case disposed of at Monday's session of the court was one in which George Pope of Goodyear was fined $100 and costs, a total of $11.74, for operating a motor vehicle while he was under the influence of liquor. He was arrested while with his car near the center of the business section of Danielson Sunday evening by Officers Christopher Andrews and Arthur Le-Forest. The fine and costs were paid.

Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock, at the undertaking rooms of A. F. Wood, a funeral service for Mrs. Lella L. Dean was conducted by Rev. W. F. Davis, in the presence of relatives and friends. Burial was in Westfield cemetery. The bearers were Frank T. Preston, Edwin H. Keach, Henry E. Anderson, Arthur A. Dean, Frank H. Greene and Charles O. Walker, the last named of Moosup.

Lightning during an electrical storm Monday afternoon fired a barn at what is known as the Glebe, on Church street, near Old Trinity church, and the structure burned with its contents, including two calves, a pig, a Ford car, wagons and various farming implements.

A group of firemen with apparatus from Brooklyn Center and a bucket brigade fought valiantly to save the house and succeeded in doing so, though one side of the building was scorched.

The property, long known as the Cole place, was occupied the past spring by Captain P. T. Wood and his family, who came into this territory from Rhode Island. Captain Ford formerly was a seafaring man.

Monday morning the funeral of John Maynard was held from his home in Wauregan with services at the Sacred Heart church in that place at 9 o'clock. Rev. J. C. Mathieu was celebrant of the solemn high mass of requiem, Rev. Donat Jette was deacon and Rev. E. A. Mathieu sub-deacon. Burial was in the Sacred Heart cemetery. Louis E. Kennedy was in charge of the funeral arrangements.

Quick to follow up a report that Frank Weeden, the escaped maniac, had again been seen in the northwestern section of the town shortly afternoon Monday, several state police officers hurried over into that section and spent hours in a fruitless hunt for the elusive quarry.

There would appear to be little doubt that he has been in this territory to the north and west of East Killingly, about the Chase reservoir country for nearly a week. He was first reported as having been seen there a week ago this evening, again on Friday and Sunday and again on Monday, when two different parties reported him.

Families living in the isolated section where Weeden is reported to be in hiding are terrified over the prospect that he may attack, for he is a desperate criminal and a person against whom one murder is alleged. He is insane as well as being viciously cruel.

It was pointed out that a man might live for a week in and about the country where Weeden is reported to be and not suffer real serious privation at this period of the year. A man can subsist on uncooked vegetables and berries and small fruits with an occasional draught of milk, which would not be difficult to obtain from cows grazing in back section pasture land in that territory, and all of these things are available for a resourceful man.

Now here is something to think about! It is in the form of a communication sent to The Bulletin and is anent recent comment in this column on the convenience and carefreeness of electric car riding.

After considering the extra cost of using an automobile in driving to business and return, is there any saving time?

What generally happens is something like this! First you go to your garage, see if your radiator is supplied with water, look at your tires, start up the motor, run the machine out, then stop to close the garage doors, get out of the driveway and by that time three to five minutes are used up. Sometimes you do it faster, but the chances are that will be the average time. At least once a week you will have to stop for gas and sometimes for air, which takes about 10 minutes. The battery will need water —another five or ten minutes. That chops off a lot of time that you might save over the street car ride.

Then you go down town and into a traffic tangle, and finally squeeze your way through and begin to look for a parking space. You either go to the back of the depot and take a long walk to your office or, if you wish to pay a charge, leave your automobile at a garage. Even then it takes you time to wedge in between other cars and again when you make the return trip. All this under the assumption that your car goes when you want it to go.

PUTNAM

Booze, crap-shooting, fist-fighting, gasoline and knifing figured in the long-drawn-out proceedings at Monday morning's session of the city court, Judge M. H. Geissler presiding. As on the corresponding day of last week, there were nine persons to face the court, which will be in session again today to take up cases continued from Monday.

The feature cases of the morning were those concerning the Saturday night doings of James Smith, colored, and Harry Reil. According to their testimony in court, they were participants in a crap shooting game that was under way in a poolroom in the Providence street section of the city. Things went along peaceably enough until there was a bit of talk about Riel's winning so regularly and comment having to do with the use of loaded dice.

All of this led to a challenge and acceptance of battle between Smith and Riel and their agreement to get into Smith's automobile, drive out a ways and have it out. It was said that Riel suggested that a spot near a cemetery out on Woodstock avenue would be a fine place for the go, and Smith promptly accepted, with the assertion that he would leave Riel out at the cemetery.

So they entered the car and drove off, Smith eventually complaining that he wasn't going to drive all over eastern Connecticut burning his gasoline just to accommodate a passenger who was en route to fight him. Smith and Reil are agreed that they did finally stop the car and get out. As to what happened thereafter there is now a wide divergence of statement between the two. Riel has two knife cuts, one in the shoulder and one in the scalp. The cuts were inflicted, he says, by a pocket knife in the hand of Smith. Riel claims that he had decided he did not want to fight, when he arrived where the affair was to be staged, and was amazed when he felt a pain in the shoulder, from the first slash of the knife, and started to run. He was slashed in the scalp as he was getting away, he says. Smith is equally as positive in his claim that he was trying to drive Riel away from him and strictly on the defensive, instead of the offensive, when Riel was cut somehow.

In court Monday morning the two were given separate hearings and were not entirely complimentary in their comments about each other. However, so much was obtained from their narratives that the cases were continued until today, by which time there is a possibility of more of interest developin gin this affair. The charges against them in court were intoxication, assault and breach of the peace. Attorney Arthur S. Macdonald appeared as counsel for Smith, while Attorney Irving H. Miron looked after Reil's interests.

Among those who faced Judge Geissler during Monday's session was Barney Clancy. Barney was in Monday of last week, too, on a charge of having been intoxicated, and his case was continued a week. This must have troubled Barney for he became drunk and was arrested again last Saturday night, in strenuous effort, it would appear, to build a real substantial case against himself. He did. The judge gave him 30 days on the case continued from last week, 30 days on the new cases and 60 additional days on the third and new count of being a common drunkard and costs. Barney will be returning from the county jail at Brooklyn just about the time when the average person is thinking of buying a Thanksgiving dinner.

Michael Navens, a laborer, rode over to jail with Clancy. Navens was among those picked up at the week end for having been intoxicated. He was fined $10 and assessed costs of $12.64, and as he could not raise the money was obliged to go to jail and work it out.

James A. Lindscott, a Killingly man, was fined $20 and costs of $12.64 for having been intoxicated.

Patrick Gorham, Boston, employed here as a freight handler, was charged with having been intoxicated. He will pay actual costs of prosecution. The cases of Omer Morin and Edwin G. King, charged with having been intoxicated, were continued.

Another case continued for a week in order to procure evidence was that of Jacob Wolf of this city. Mr. Wolf is charged with having failed to return within 24 hours to the state motor vehicle department at Hartford registration plates from a motor vehicle he sold, and with failure to report the sale. Mr. Wolf pleaded not guilty.

Publicity given the fact that state police were seeking Frank Weeden, escaped maniac who for 26 years was confined in the Rhode Island hospital for the insane and who is believed to have murdered a boy near Randall's pond in Thornton, R. I., has startled numbers of people in this city and surrounding territory, in view of the fact that a hunt for him is on within seven or eight miles from this city in a lonely section of Killingly, where his presence has terrified the inhabitants.

Fear over Weeden entering this city is quite needless. He is being hunted like a wild beast and must be living much after the manner of one, keeping to the woods and wild places and only appearing when hunger forces him close to settled places in seach of food. State police continued to scour the country southeast of here for him, all Monday afternoon.

If there has been any doubt heretofore that Captain William Jarvis intends that the city's streets shall be kept clear of drunks that doubt must be fast fading as the result of the clean-up again at the week end. A campaign against those who persist in becoming intoxicated and getting out on the streets is on and it will be carried through until the most venturesome drunk will think twice before he decides to appear in public.

Peter Ennis, who has been prosecuted in this city for violation of the liquor laws, was given a suspended jail sentence and heavily fined in Danielson Monday, as told in the news from that town this morning, for furth violation of the liquor laws.

Desks and seats to be installed in the addition to the Israel Putnam school are arriving here. Blackboards for the rooms in the new addition are yet to be received, but it is anticipated that the additional rooms will be ready for occupancy when school reopens in September.

When automobiles were in a collision at the corner of Main and Pomfret streets a little boy was hurled out of one of the machines, driven by Harry Davis, rolled along the pavement and then bounded to his feet and ran off toward the sidewalk. He was not seriously hurt. The other machine that figured in the affair was driven by Clifford Mongeon.

Miss Elsie A. Gallant was a member of a motoring party that visited at Ocean beach Sunday.

Theodore Larose, operating a light roadster the gunboat type, reported striking a little boy while driving through Manhasset village in the southerly part of the city. The child was not injured to any extent.

While many communities to the south had heavy showers at the week end the drought in this territory remained unbroken up to Monday afternoon.

A number from this city were at Pomfret Monday evening to attend a concert given by a list of artists in aid of the Nurses' Home fund of the Day Kimball hospital.

Falling off in automobile traffic Saturday and Sunday was attributed by some acute observers to the fact that mills in Rhode Island and Massachusetts as well as in Connecticut are operating on reduced time schedules. The inference from this is that many who have been driving cars are operating only the slenderest cash surplus and only a small shrinkage of income is necessary to put them out of the motoring class, at least temporarily.

Seeking after information as to where drunks appearing in the city court have been obtaining their liquor the answer is not infrequently that it is bought from parties who come into this territory from Webster and Southbridge each week end and sell from their pockets or from automobiles.

NOANK

The Daughters of America held a successful food sale Saturday afternoon, $20 being cleared.

Rev. W. D. Woodward, of Gales Ferry, addressed the Vesper service Sunday at the Methodist church. A large congregation assembled to hear him. It was announced that J. G. Goods, of the Bowery Mission of New York, would be present, but his visit was postponed.

Rev. Edwin S. Holloway, of New York, occupied the pulpit at the Baptist Church Sunday morning, and gave a most interesting talk.

Saturday, at the West Mystic part of the town at Mrs. Richard Crandall's the wind, rain nad hail, broke a sash out of one window, tipped the table over in the front room, and broke a vase that was on the table. The gale blew a sash out at the home of Judge Frederick Brewers took the window light far out into the field and did not even smash the pane. It tore a part of the chimney down and several trees were torn up. At the McDonough property, a small building was lifted and taken several feet from the house. The wireless station of Elmer Branch, was demoralized the wire and guides being completely wrecked. Two old oaks that have stood for fifty years, in front of Charles B. Anderson's home at West Mystic, were torn up by the roots. Boats that lay at the dock at Noank were swamped, and the owners were afraid they would lose them, and worked hard to keep them from being torn from their moorings. It being Saturday afternoon the fishing boats were nearly all in.

WARRENVILLE

The familiar old building at Warrenville occupied for so many years past as store and postoffice, now by George O. Balch, whose son, Robert M. Balch, is postmaster, and formerly by the late John A. Murphy. Mrs. Balch's father, is located on the corner of the lot where the new Ashford town building is going up, and will be removed as soon as the new postoffice building is ready which the Balches are now building across the way, next north of the Balch home.

This old-red building is an ancient landmark with an interesting history, and many hope that some way may be devised to save it in a new location. Work on the new town building and on the new postoffice makes Warrenville a busy place these days.

WESTERLY

The presence of the police was needed at the gypsy camp ground on the site of the old baseball field at Riverside park off Canal street. The police were called by the gypsies to break up alleged "crap games" with fist fights which accompanied them and which it was stated were due to outsiders who came there for the purpose of creating a disturbance. When asked if they had not "set in" on any of the games the gypsies replied that they could not if they wanted to for they had "no mon".

In one of the disputes it is said that one of the crap shooters was knocked down and out sustaining a bad cut on his head. With the approach of the police the disturbers took to their heels, while friends of the man assailed lugged him off. With order restored the maligned gypsy coppersmiths plied again their hammers and blow torch.

By order of the Westerly road commission, spreading of the hot mixed asphalt on the stretch of Elm street, between Cross and Granite streets, has been completed and the road is opened, which gives time for the highway department to devote its attention to the small jobs about town. Monday men in the department employ removed the lengths of crubing in front of the property of Joseph Guarino on Railroad avenue, preparatory to the laying of a cement walk and gutter in front of the gas filling station there. The heavy town steam roller was at work there rolling down the highway, clearing off the loose stone to complete the stretch on which very little work has been done since the highway was widened at this point. The marking of the street crosswalk lines, which was attempted on Main and Broad streets Sunday, does not promise to be of a very lasting nature, in fact the process of obliteration was begun by automobiles passing over the lines before they had dried.

That the automobile light law is soon to be enforced by police authorities in Rhode Island is intimated by those in authority and a more strict interpretation of the public statutes covering the matter is ceratin. Connecticut automobile drivers who may operate automobiles in Rhode Island at night will have to see that their equipment measures up to the standard required. Highway traffic at night has assumed such proportions that the enforcement of the laws is a matter of safety to everyone on the roads at night time. A lesson can be learned from the experience of Rhode Island operators at the east side of the state when several weeks ago it was noised around that the Massachusetts authorities intended to follow up on their automobile light laws. In due time the follow up came and in one night near Fall River nearly a hundred Rhode Island drivers were served with summons to appear before the authorities to explain why their lights were not up to Massachusetts requirements.

At the weekly meeting of the Westerly Highway commission at the town hall Monday afternoon the progress of work on Elm street was discussed and the matter of caring for some of the details left was considered. The progress of the highway department on Narragansett avenue in clearing up the street, after the laying of the sewer pipes was found satifactory. It was the plan of the commission to make a better junction of the streets at Greenman avenue and Beach streets, even if the work required the construction of a catch basin for surface water. It was decided that what is known as the old road to Noyes Beach should have a top dressing of gravel to fill in the ruts which are now of such depth as to make travel difficult.

When your boy grows up—

he'll have a strong body and a good mind if you give him the right food now.

Every morning, first thing in the day, serve him a big bowl of Mapl-Flake. He'll like it, and it's good for him. For—

Mapl-Flake is 25% bran—the whole of the wheat with the bran left in—enough to form a harmless, natural laxative.

In addition to the bran, there is all the nourishment of whole wheat, rich in phosphorus and lime for building brain, nerve and bone, and in iron for making good red blood. Yes—and the whole wheat contains the vitamins which science has learned are so necessary to growth and health.

That boy of yours won't know he's eating bran in Mapl-Flake. He'll like these sweetened, toasted flakes so much he'll WANT them every morning.

Not only your boy, but your whole family ought to eat Mapl-Flake. It is nourishing and the bran supplies roughage to "sweep" the digestive tract. Yet Mapl-Flake is "good eating."

NORWICH BULLETIN
of Church Street Telephone 1062

Over half a dozen barrooms in Windham retain their old mahogany bars and brass foot rest and the owners are keenly interested in the new decree of the federal prohibition enforcement department in Connecticut which calls for the dismantling of all remaining barrooms in the state. Where there were twenty-eight saloons in operation in this vicinity before prohibition, or at the time of its advent, eight are still adorned with their fixtures. It was stated by the proprietors of these places that they are not engaged in dispensing intoxicating liquor and they base their statements on the grounds that none of the convictions in police court within the past two years implicated men who conducted saloons in Willimantic. All owners say that they are willing to abide by any action that the federal prohibition enforcement department may take in regard to dismantling the bars and fixtures.

In the police court Monday morning Frank Thomas was charged with intoxication and breach of the peace. He pleaded no tguilty to both charges The complainant in the case was his sister, who informed the court officials that her brother had threatened to kill her and destroy property. The basis of the trouble, she said, was a quantity of Jamaica Ginger sold her brother by a Chapman street grocer. Thomas swore that he had not had a drink in two years and further alleged that his sister was the one who had caused the trouble at their home in Chapman street. Judge Foss decided that the affair was a renewal of the family disagreement which had taken up the attention of the court some time ago. With a warning that the trouble must come to a stop, Thomas received a suspended jail sentence of one month.

George Maheu, charged with violation of the motor vehicle law, in view of the fact that he did not have his motorcycle registered, offered a clear explanation to the court and his case was continued for one week, for investigation. Maheu, who figured in the accident in which William R. Knight was severely injured while riding on another motorcycle, on the North Windham road testified that he had the machine on approval, it being the property of Ernest Liberty at the time of the accident and registered in the latter's name. He had given a small sum as a deposit but after the accident in which the motorcycle was badly damaged, he went to see Liberty and bought the cycle for cash.

Aime Nieux was charged with breach of the peace and through an interpreter entered a plea of not guilty. Officer Laramee arrested the man upon complaint of a resident of Meadow street that the accused was playing Jack the Reaper in that vicinity. The case was continued until this (Tuesday) morning when the complainant and the officer will testify.

Henry C. Rutledge of 26 Chatham street, Worcester, Mass., was charged with operating an automobile without a registration and pleaded guilty. The young man was arrested by Motorcycle Officer Bombria, Sunday afternoon, and at first it was thought that the machine was stolen but a telephone call proved this supposition wrong and that Rutledge had permission to use the machine. The case was nolled on the payment of costs of $6.15.

Michael Welch pleaded guilty to the charge of intoxication. Leniency was shown him because of the fact that this was his first appearance before the local tribunal. Judge Foss warned the young man and fined him $10 and costs.

Frank Peterek, of the Yellow Row, drew a fine of $100 and costs, amounting to $106.35 when found guilty of operating a motor vehicle while under the influence of liquor. Officer Frank McLean gave the incriminating testimony in the case. Peterek was arrested Sunday afternoon while driving a motorcycle with three small children in the side car and a man on the carrier. He denied being drunk but admitted having imbibed four bottles of home brew.

St. Mary's Choir boys have returned home after two weeks of clean out-door life, on Merrythought Farm, Columbia Lake. All are pictures of health and express themselves as thoroughly delighted with their trip, which was favored wit ideal weather and the absence of mishaps and accidents.

Many goodies and delicacies were brought to the boys by the visitors and were very much appreciated by the campers.

The annual athletic events were slated last Thursday afternoon under the direction of Choir Leader, Joseph F. Gaudreau. The prizes, which were donated by Hormidas Dion, were awarded as follows: Long distance swimming—Arthur LeClaire, first, oversharp pencil; George Sumner, second, box of candy; Louis Beausoleil, third, silver pencil. Time one hour, 48 minutes.

Standing Jump—Leonard Caisse, first, Girard St. Laurent, second.

Pole vault, Omer Desrosiers. Potato race for smaller boys, Leowel Chasse, first, Roland Gagnon, second. Potato race for larger boys, Omer Desrosier, first; Raymond Roy, second. Cleanest tent—Arthur Caillouette and George Gaudreau.

In the baseball events the Browns captured four out of seven games from the Orange teams.

Before returning for home the boys thanked Mr. and Mrs. P. H. Green of South Windsor, for their courtesy in allowing the campers to utilize the Greenway for swimming purposes.

The boys were greatly interested on one of their days at camp when an old American flag was found in the wood between the Hartford road and Merrythought farm. The party of hikers who made the find removed the thirteen stars from the flag and with a few strips of the flag proper, as souvenirs they buried the remainder of the flag beneath the camp flag pole with impressive patriotic exercises.

a perverted life, H. Well directed thought leads to God. Ill Thought determines the character of our religion. The more we think of salvation, the more divine it becomes.

The Rev. N. G. Lippitt, of Norwich, exhorted. A prayer meeting was held, in which a number of souls professed to have been blessed. The congregations at both the morning and afternoon services were much larger than is usual for Friday.

It is always a sad sight to see a clerical friend in a predicament; but sometimes their conduct is such that it seems unavoidable. We wish to condole with that brother who commenced eating his supper at the boarding tent not long since, before grace had been said, who, when called upon by the presiding elder to ask blessing, was obliged to swallow a piece of cold ham without chewing. Our fears will be greatly allayed if we hear that dyspepsia has resulted from this most unclerical voraciousness. Brothers, hereafter, when you desire to do that thing just look around and see if the elder is in sight; and if you see him coming, chew fast and clear the hold.

The thanks of the Camp Meeting association are due to the friend who killed that striped snake in Brewster avenue, about half-past 6 this evening. As the form of the venerable snake before us, we felt like saying, "Let it rest in peace."

7 p. m.—The Rev. E. H. Bradford of Colchester is the preacher this evening. We did not learn his text, being absent when it was announced. Quite a number are present at the service. Meetings will be held all night in the Danielsonville tent and probably in the Willimantic tent. As near as we can learn, there have been about seventy-five clear cases of conversion during the meetings thus far.

We wish to say a word in respect to those who have managed affairs in connection with the meeting. V. S. Gardner, A. E. and L. Colub, James Allan and L. L. Bentley have done their part well. We have heard comparatively no murmuring from the boarders at the boarding house. We judge that everything has been satisfactory in that direction. Sheriff Dewey is the right man for the work he has to do; genial by nature, but always ready to stand up to his work when duty calls. He has been sustained for the most part by a good body of policemen. There has been no disturbance at the meeting. For the most part the preachers in the district worked well, and some of them have preached well. There are always some from abroad who take full as much responsibility upon their shoulders, and make as much noise as is necessary for entire strangers, incompatible with the feelings of the initiated. But we suppose it is better to suffer affliction than to do wrong. Now, we close our reports for this camp meeting, we acknowledge all faults in our productions, and leave it for others to say whether or not they have read them with any kind of satisfaction. Good bye, friend Bulletin.

NEW LONDON RESIDENCE ENTERED AND LODGER'S $400 SAVINGS STOLEN

New London, July 23.—Edward Ludert of New York, who recently entered the employ here of the Empire Bakery, was arrested this afternoon by Motorcycle Officer John Cavanaugh, charged with violation of the automobile law in not having in his possession an operator's license per registration. Ludorf explained the absence of the automobile requisites by stating that he left the license and registration in his clothing in New York when he made a recent visit to his home. Angelo Zerill, Ludorf's employer, furnished a bond of $25 for the appearance of the accused in the police court tomorrow morning.

Jacob Lazarow of Blackhall street, was arrested this afternoon by Motorcycle Officer John Cavanaugh upon complaint of Harold Beebe of No. 11 Borodell place. Charged with reckless driving, Lazarow's arrest was the result of his automobile colliding with Beebe's machine at the corner of Hempstead and Franklin streets. Beebe's auto was descending the Hempstead street grade and was being operated into Franklin street when Lazarow's car, which had entered Hempstead street from Manwaring street, came along at a fast rate of speed. Before Lazarow could bring his car to a stop or before Beebe could drive his machine from the path of the approaching automobile, Lazarow's car crashed against the side of Beebe's machine. Both cars were damaged. In endeavoring to bring his machine to a stop Lazarow applied his brakes so securely that the wheels skidded over the macadam a distance of about forty feet.

It was revealed today that the three persons admitted to Lawrence hospital yesterday noon and whose identity or injuries the hospital attendants refused to disclose, are Joseph Epstein of No. 474 Maple avenue, Holyoke, Mass., a shoe dealer, his wife Goldie and their nine year old son, Sidney. The child is the most seriously injured, having sustained a fracture of the skull. The father sustained a fractured collar-bone and a fractured rib, while Mrs. Epstein received only minor hurts, her injuries comprising bruises and contusions about the body. An operation was performed upon the child Sunday afternoon in an endeavor to save his life and this afternoon it was stated at the institution that the boy's condition was favorable. The state police are endeavoring to obtain facts that will establish the cause of the accident. From information obtained it is believed that the machine, a new car and being used on the first long ride, was being operated by the elder Epstein to New London where the family intended to spend the day. When descending a grade a short distance east of Colchester, the machine skidded on the granolithic pavement. Epstein, who was driving, losing control of the machine, which skidded across the highway and against the heavy guard fence alongside an embankment. The machine struck with such force as to crash through the fence and overturn, throwing the passengers out and down the embankment. In landing the Epstein child's head struck a stone, which fractured his skull.

The carcass was later disposed of by an employe of the health department.

Romeo Brassard, Abia Churces and Paul Hurowitz, the two last named from Hartford, were fined $25 each in the police court this morning for reckless operation of automobiles. That Brassard was not prosecuted for a more serious offense was his good fortune, for those who saw him in the car and who realized the chance he was taking believed he would be proceeded against for something beside carelessness. Churces ran his car into that of Eva Maynard when the latter car came out of Jay street, on the way to Huntington street. Churces was over on the right side but he was driving at a hot pace and he did not sound any horn to give warning of his approach to an intersecting street. He ripped into the Maynard car and did damage of about $80. Churces is a market employe at Hartford and he had no money to pay his fine, but he was allowed to go home that he might send a check Tuesday.

Paul Hurowitz was speeding on the state road on the western side of the city. He was followed by a motorcycle officer at a speed of 40 miles an hour. His only excuse was that he was hurrying to Ocean beach and thought he was hitting a speed of 30 miles an hour.

Another daylight robbery occurred today when the home of Mr. and Mrs. David Esty, No. 12 Methodist street, was entered and $400 was stolen, the property of Harry Simmons, employed by the Merritt-Chapman-Scott Wrecking company, at present employed in construction work at Norwalk. It is believed that the robbery was committed sometime around noon. The break was not reported until early this evening. Mrs. Esty informed Sergeant Hick that she left home this morning about 10.30 and did not return until 6 o'clock. Her husband, who is employed by the Thomas Transfer company did not return home during the day as it is his practice not to go home for lunch during the summer. When Mrs. Esty entered the house she discovered some of the furnishings disturbed, particularly was her attention attracted to a door leading from a hall to the parlor which, she claims was locked, but in reality the door was not locked and it was through this that the thief gained entrance to the place. The door was latched and a small screw driver was used in prying the door open. Once inside the parlor the crook passed through the kitchen and to the room occupied by Simmons when the lodger was in New London. A search of a bureau drawer revealed the money, all in bills of the denomination of $20 and with paper wrappers about piles of $100 each. The money was in a bank book and both were secreted in a manila envelope. The money was taken, but the bank book and envelope were placed back in the drawer.

The proposition had its first reading at the council this evening. It is contemplated among the improvements to acquire land at Main street and Crystal avenue and at Bank street and Jefferson avenue to round the corners at these points. The former land is that which aroused so much talk at the meeting a month ago, when it was discovered that the occupant of the land had a lease of several years. Total stock sales 536,080 shares.

Twenty railroads averaged 78.98, net loss .77. High 1923, 90.63; low, 76.93.

MARKET WAS DULL

New York, July 23.—Net changes in today's stock market, which was on a smaller volume than recently, were not large. The course of prices was highly irregular.

A sizable list of miscellaneous stocks closed a point or more higher, while railroad shares, after opening somewhat higher, sold off in the last half hour. Professional traders concentrated an early attack against the oil shares using a one cent cut in gasoline prices as the leverage. Most of those stocks, however, recovered in the later trading.

Losses in the rail group ranged from a point to 2 1-4, the latter decline being recorded by Delaware & Hudson. Great Northern preferred closed 2 points lower, Chicago & Northwestern 1 5-8, and Chesapeake & Ohio, Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul, and Norfolk & Western 1 each. Rock Island 6 and 7 per cent. preferred each gained a point.

Some of sugar stocks sold lower on announcement of a slight cut in commodity prices but closing prices were mixed. Cuban American Sugar preferred was off 2 1-8.

The same independent course was noted in the tobaccos, Liggett & Myers registering an advance of 4 1-4 points, and Lorillard selling 2 3-4 points lower. The market for the usual leaders was extremely narrow, Studebaker and U. S. Steel each closing fractionally lower. American Car was quite active and recorded a fractional gain.

General Electric moved up 3 1-4 points and gains of a point or more were registered by American Cotton Oil, American Locomotive, American Woolen, Davison Chemical, Burns Brothers B, Cuyamel Fruit, Gimbel Brothers, and Willys Overland preferred.

Call money rates were easier, opening and renewing at 4 3-4 per cent. and easing to 4 1-2 in the last hour. A few time loans were made at 5 1-4 per cent. Commercial paper was quiet with rates unchanged at 5 to 5 1-4 per cent.

Changes in the foreign exchange rates were unimportant. Dehand sterling was steady around $4.59 7-16 and French francs improved 5 points to 5.99 cents. German marks were easier at 1,000,000 for $2.85.

As usual there was some buying of speculative issues in the industrial group but on the whole net changes were unimportant. Pierce Arrow 8's advanced 2 1-2 points and Marmon Copper 7's gained 2.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET

Chicago, July 23.—Despite a rally due for the most part to reports of damage by black rust in the northwest, wheat averaged lower in price today owing chiefly to persistent hedging sales and to slowness of export demand. The close was unsettled at 1-4 a 3-8 cent to 1-2 a 5-8 cent net decline, with September 98 3-4 to 98 7-8 cents and December 101 7-8. Corn finished at a range varying from 7-8 cent decline to 1 1-4 a 1 3-8 cents advance, oats unchanged to 1-2 a 5-8 cents lower and provisions unchanged to 10 cents off.

Estimates that more than 1,000 carloads of wheat had arrived here today gave the market a downward tendency at the outset, but the actual to tal was much less, 864 cars and this fact together with important damage in sections of the northwest and unfavorable weather both sides of the Canadian line soon gave bulls a temporary advantage. Besides country offerings were only of fair amount in the central west, and were small in the southwest. Sustained buying power, however, was lacking and price gains were more than wiped out under pressure of continued hedging sales, and in the absence of any indication of enlarged business with Europe.

Considerable attention in the last part of the day was given to figures purporting to show that for world supply purposes the increase of Canadian wheat acreage since 1913 would alone more than make up for stoppage of exports from Russia. Notice was also taken of reports of good crops in [illegible] countries and of assertions that the surplus in exporting nations would exceed by 20 per cent. what importers will require.

Corn and oats eased down as a result of beneficial showers over much of the corn belt. Influenced by scarcity of immediate supplies of corn, though July corn touched a new high price record for the season.

In the provision market, packers selling brought about a decline, notwithstanding higher quotations on hogs.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Abysmal Brute, Jack London Classic Proves Hit at Strand Theatre.

Fans of Jack London can hold a grand party at the Strand theatre, where The Abysmal Brute, his dynamic story of a rough-cut lad, opened yesterday.

Reginald Denny of The Leather Pushers, those humor classics of the prize ring with which Universal surprised the theatre-going public, is the star of The Abysmal Brute, and his manliness is well exploited in the red-blooded fighting figure around which Jack London built his story.

Those who like Jack London and have read most of what he wrote will be fascinated by the picture, which was directed by Hobart Henley, a man noted for retaining the "flavor" of original novels in the screen transcription. And perhaps those who don't know Jack London's works will be led by the picture to taste of the natural wine, the brusque psychology of his stories.

Mabel Julienne Scott has the dramatic feminine leading role opposite Denny and the remainder of the cast includes David Torrance, Hayden Stevenson, Irene Halsman, Harry Mann, Buddy Messenger, Neil Craig, Dorothea Wolbert, Crauford Kent and many others of note.

Denny is an ideal type for the leading role and his facile ability is proven beyond doubt to be the real thing in this production. The scenes were photographed against a background of great natural beauty, but they remain part of the picture and are not forced to the foreground to the detriment of the story, a fault that has been common in many productions of late. Star, director and cast are alike entitled to the highest acclaim for their artistic endeavors.

Tomorrow vaudeville every Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

BREED THEATRE

You'll laugh uproariously, and you will cry when you see Mary Pickford in Little Lord Fauntleroy at the Breed theatre today. And you will say that it is one of the greatest, if not the greatest, of photoplays ever shown—certainly the greatest picture Mary Pickford has ever made.

In transcribing Frances Hodgson Burnett's famous story to the silver sheet, Miss Pickford has established her claim to the title, "Queen of the Screen," for the essence of the book version has been retained and the charm of Little Mary's interpretations pleases beyond measure.

In the lexicon of praise there are no words comprehensive enough to set forth the glory of this wonder play. Never in her career of superb work has Mary Pickford done anything approaching her artistry in this production. The closes she ever came to it was in that masterpiece, "Stella Maris," in which, as in "Fauntleroy," she played a dual role.

The story of Little Lord Fauntleroy is too well known to be repeated here. Suffice it to say that the Pickford adaptation adheres very closely to the Burnett plot, with the result that those who has read the book will take offense at the play. What is more, Mary Pickford is a decidedly boyish Fauntleroy, curls and all. One actually forgets she is a girl. She proves herself a consummate artist by her splendid interpretation of this role. And her work as Dearest, a sweet feminine role, when compared with the boy part, represents the greatest contrast ever pictured for the screen.

TODAY I AM REAL WELL

So Writes Woman After Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Jamestown, N.Y.—"I was nervous, easily excited and discouraged and had no ambition. Part of the time I was not able to sit up as I suffered with pains in my back and with weakness. I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, both the liquid and tablet forms, and used Lydia E. Pinkham's Sanative Wash for inflammation. Today I am real well and run a rooming house and do the work. I recommend your medicine to every woman who complains, and you may use my letter to help any one else. I am passing through the Change of Life now and I keep the Vegetable Compound in the house, ready to take when I feel the need of it."—Mrs. ALICE D. DAVIS, 208 W. Second St., Jamestown, N. Y.

Often some slight derangement may cause a general upset condition of the whole system indicated by such symptoms as nervousness, backache, lack of ambition and general weakness.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will be found a splendid medicine for such troubles. In many cases it has removed the cause of the trouble.

LITTLE JACK RABBIT
By DAVID CORY

"Give me a lock of your hair," he answered.

REWARDING THE BIG FISH.

Now let me see. In the last story we left Little Jack Rabbit and the lovely princess in a boat on the big river that was rushing down to the great blue ocean near which stood the castle of the princess' father and they had both fallen asleep for it was night time you remember.

Well, by and by, Mrs. Moon, seeing them from her little window, sent down a shooting star to ask the fish in the river to keep the boat from hitting a rock or running on the shore.

So all night long a big kind fish held on to the stern of the boat and steered it carefully along and another big fish swam in front and kept a sharp lookout for hidden rocks and shoals, and on each side of the boat six or maybe seven fishes swam in a line so that nothing could hit the sides of the boat.

And when Mr. Merry Sun began to shake off the purple mist on the eastern hills, Little Jack Rabbit opened his eyes and yawned and then, all of a sudden, he saw the fishes but he didn't know that Mrs. Moon had sent the star down to tell them what to do. And just as he was going to ask them a question, the princess awoke and leaned over the side of the boat to bathe her hands and then, of course, she, too, saw the fish with their shining silver scales and sweeping fins and gliding, waving tails.

"How very kind of you," she said, "I wish I could reward you."

"You can," replied the great fish who was steering the boat. "Give me the little gold ring you wear on your finger. I would give it to my wife who is very fond of jewelry."

At once the lovely princess slipped off the ring and handed it to the fish who took it carefully in his mouth and hung it over one of his big long teeth.

"I wish I had another ring," said the princess, for the big fish at the bow of the boat looked very mournful.

"Give me a lock of your golden hair," he answered after a little while and his voice didn't sound like the other fish's at all. No, it sounded just like a man's. Wasn't that strange? So the little princess cut off a golden curl and gave it to the fish who placed it carefully in a mother of pearl shell and holding it between his teeth to keep it from getting wet.

Just then, Little Jack Rabbit shouted:

"I see a stately castle near the river's bend!"

"We are almost home," laughed the princess, and she bade the fish bring the Boat closer to the shore:

"Down the river, over so fast,
With never a sail and never a mast.
The silver fishes have brought me home
Where the castle stands near the ocean's foam.
Oh, silver fish, you are good to me to bring me back to my home by the sea."

Robust At 71, Hotel Owner Thanks Tanlac

"When a man at seventy-one can eat as I do, sleep as I do, and feel as well as I do, he certainly has something to be thankful for, and as for me, I place the credit for my good health where it belongs, squarely on the Tanlac treatment."

The above statement was made recently by Henry O. Robinson, well-known proprietor of the Winfred House and numerous summer cottages in Oak Bluffs, Mass., a thriving town and noted summer resort situated on the island of Martha's Vineyard. Mr. Robinson further said:

"Five in our family are always glad to testify to the merits of Tanlac and I associate my own good condition to the thorough overhauling the medicine gave me a year ago. I had suffered for a long time from stomach trouble headaches, bad tasting mouth and that tired, all-gone feeling. For years I suffered with my kidneys, had backache and got up mornings with a dizzy, giddy feeling.

"Well, I used to think my poor health was due to my age, but since taking Tanlac I know different, for I feel as well as anyone could wish. Tanlac has made my stomach act and feel like new. I eat and sleep like a young man and my troubles are few and far between. In fact, I am a well man and can't say too much in praise of Tanlac."

Tanlac is for sale by all good druggists. Accept no substitute. Over 37 million bottles sold.

AVERY STREET HOUSE SET AFIRE BY SMALL CHILD PLAYING WITH MATCHES

The dangerous combination of matches and a child is believed to have caused damage of about $2,000 by a fire in the home of Albert Martinelli at 29 1-2 Avery street Monday afternoon about 12.25 o'clock.

The fire had reached considerable proportions when Squad A, Deputy Chief Taft and Engine 5 arrived there after receiving a telephone call at Central station and orders were immediately given to send in the alarm from Box 7, corner of Mt. Pleasant and Elizabeth streets, bringing out Engine 6 and Truck 1.

The fire quickly broke out through the roof of the house which was a story and a half frame building, and as the inside was fitted out with beaver board the fire gained rapid headway and only quick work by the firemen held the blaze to the upper story. The upper part of the house was completely gutted but the lower half received mostly water damage.

Just how the fire started is not known but a small child who was not feeling well had gone upstairs to lie down and nothing more was heard until a Polish girl, living nearby, saw smoke coming from the west corner of the house and shouted to Mrs. Martinelli that the house was on fire. It is believed that the child upstairs had played with matches causing the blaze.

Besides the loss on the building, which with contents is estimated at $3,000, with a $1,500 insurance, the family lost $175 in cash which they had stored in a home bank in the upper part of the house gutted by the flames. The recall sounded at 12.56 o'clock.

PROVIDE NEW BADGES FOR NORWICH FIREMEN

If you see something extra shiny on the uniform of one of the firemen don't think he has been busy polishing up his old one for a firemen's convention; he's wearing one of the brand new badges distributed Monday by Chief Howard L. Stanton, recently authorized to get new badges for the department by the board of fire commissioners.

The new badge is one and three-quarters inches across, with rounded corners and a fluted edge so that it cannot catch in the firemen's clothing. At the top is the name, Norwich, placed in circular position and completing the oval is the name, Fire Department. The number of the badge is in the center, all lettering on the badge being of black enamel, the background of nickle.

In tracing out the history of firemen's badges in Norwich it is interesting to note that these are the first new badges received by the department since it became a full paid department. The first badge to be issued for Norwich firemen dates back 55 years ago to the days of the old volunteer fire department. Since that time there were but three types of badges issued until the present badge, the fourth, made its appearance Monday.

The badge now being given up is 40 years old and the numbers have been crossed so many times that the commissioners felt that it would be better to provide new and accurate ones. The old badges had become a joke in the department, many have been lost and new ones made to replace them. Later the old badge showed up and cross numbers became frequent.

In distributing the new badges Chief Stanton supplied all the regulars first, giving them out according to seniority with No. 1 going to Captain Alvin Lewis, No. 2 going to Charles Culver. The firemen's lucky badges, No. 13 and 23, went to L. P. J. Tracy and Adam Ensling respectively.

An interesting thing about the badges is that Capt. Lewis received No. 1 for most years of service while his son, Forrest Lewis, received No. 39, the largest number given out, as he is the newest call man.

SEVEN AUTOMOBILE DRIVERS TO BE GIVEN HEARINGS

Seven automobile operators have been summoned for hearings in New London at 12.30, standard time, on Aug. 3, at the court house.

Those to appear are: Fabyan Balkan, 4 Canal street, Jewett City, operating under the influence of liquor; Andrew Barry, 27 Mulberry street, Norwich, reckless driving; Joshua Sands, Old Lyme, reckless driving; Walter B. Kenyon, 15 Lincoln avenue, Stonington, operating under the influence of liquor; Anthony Piscatella, 3 Hamilton street, New London, operating an unregistered motor vehicle; Horace S. Pervere, 39 Montauk avenue, New London, fatal accident; Charles Pizzitola, North Westchester, two accidents (conference).

Going To Camp Eustis.

Members of Combat Train, Battalion Headquarters and Battery B, 192nd Field Artillery, are looking forward to September 8th when they are to entrain for Camp Eustis. The men will remain in camp for two weeks this year, this being the second time they have been sent to Camp Eustis for extensive training.

75 DEATHS FROM AUTO ACCIDENTS IN 6 MONTHS

Property damage to the amount of $378,480 was caused by Connecticut motor vehicle accidents in the first six months of this year, according to reports filed with the accident division of the state motor vehicle department by persons involved in the mishaps. This figure is exclusive of the pecuniary loss resulting from the death of seventy-five people in such accidents, which loss has been estimated at $3,889,762.50 by an actuary of one of the large Hartford insurance companies. Including this latter figure, the total loss would be $4,268,242.50, not counting hospital bills, loss of time from business on account of injuries and loss of use of motor vehicles while under repair.

The average age of the seventy-five persons whose lives were lost as a result of motor vehicle accidents in the first half of the year was 24 years, and the average earnings of a person in Connecticut are $25.25 a week throughout his life. The "American Experience Table of Mortality" used by insurance companies shows that the average person 24 years old may expect to live 39 1-3 more years. At that rate, each of those killed would have earned $51,863.50 in the remainder of his or her life, which, for the whole number of seventy-five, would have amounted to $3,889,762.50.

Department records show that 6,308 motor vehicle accidents occurred in the state in the six months ended June 30, which represented an increase of 2,483 over the number of such accidents reported in the corresponding period of last year.

POLICE COURT HAS 21 CASES ON DOCKET

A docket of 21 new and continued cases confronted the police court on Monday morning and when the business was all over Clerk A. J. Bailey found that the grand total collected in fines and costs was $236.70. Besides this there were two cases in which fines of $200 and costs were given but appeals were taken.

In the continued cases of Michael J. Doyle, Raymond Bailey, and Hilliard Estabrook, all of New London, accused of breach of the peace in refusing to leave the Commercial house one night last week, they were each fined $5 and costs which they paid.

Andrew Zysh, proprietor of a restaurant on North Main street, next to the engine house, was found guilty of violation of the liquor law on evidence of a sale of a half pint bottle of liquor. He was fined $200 and costs, with a 30 day jail sentence, which was suspended. He took an appeal. The same penalty was given John Rozansky for the same offense and on similar evidence of sale. He was tending bar at the American house when the police arrested him.

Urgel La Pre, who runs a soft drink and refreshment store at 28 Thames street, was before the court on the charge of violation of the liquor law. Probable cause was found and he was bound over to the superior court with bonds placed at $400 which he furnished. As this was his second appearance in police court in this charge he drew the binding over to the superior court.

Two men paid fines of $10 and costs for breach of the peace and eight paid fines and costs for intoxication.

One young man, accused of intoxication was given a jail sentence of five days, which was suspended, and he was put on probation for six months.

One man paid $16.50 for a minor violation of the motor vehicle laws and a Norwich man arrested for non-support agreed to pay his wife $5 weekly. A jail sentence of 10 days was suspended and the matter was continued for six months.

RECKLESS DRIVER HIT NORWICH MAN'S CAR

Stafford Springs, July 23.—Gregory Lipsky of South Coventry was fined $25 and costs, a total of $33.43 by Judge Heald in the borough court this morning on a charge of reckless driving. Lipsky and his wife were on their way to Riverside park when the Dodge car in which they were riding overtook a Ford touring car driven by John McNally of Norwich. As Lipsky's car was about to pass McNally's car Augustus Bresette, driving a Studebaker, appeared from the opposite direction. Lipsky attempted to crowd in between the other two cars and struck the left front wheel of McNally's car. Bresette pulled his car so far to the right to avoid being struck by Lipsky that his car overturned and was badly damaged.

CLAIMS YOUNG FELLOWS DEMANDED A DOLLAR

On complaint from Myer E. Antokol that two young fellows had demanded a dollar from him and had scared him so much that he ran into the back of his store at 128 West Main street, Armand Foran, 19, and Earl D. Jacobs, 21, were arrested Monday afternoon near the store by Officers Smith and Morgan.

The young men were locked up and are charged with breach of the peace.

The demonstrations in the latest and best methods of canning and preserving vegetables and fruit are to be presented by Mrs. Gertrude Noskoots, who is the New Jersey president of the State Federation of Junior Demonstrators and has been engaged especially to present this subject in the farm districts in this and other states.

WESTERLY COURT FINES DRIVER ON TWO COUNTS

Westerly, July 23.—James Duffy was presented by Chief of Police Thomas E. Brown before Judge Michael J. Turano in a special session of the Third district court at 8.30 o'clock Monday evening. He was charged with operating an automobile which had not been registered with the state board of public roads and without an operator's license. On his plea of guilty Chief Brown stated that the defendant, who came to Westerly from New York, is working at the Lorraine mill and later at Watch Hill, operated the automobile while in a reported intoxicated condition. Later the automobile was driven about Watch Hill and there it ran into the stone wall near the Ocean house. Only partial payments had been made on the machine and the defendant had attempted to sell it. Duffy said although the had had a drink he was not intoxicated. Judge Turano stated that the defendant was unfortunate in that the chief had not brought a more serious charge against him for he had decided to impose a jail sentence on anyone operating an automobile while in an intoxicated condition. He sentenced him to pay a fine of $25 on each count and costs.

The Ford touring car 54-586 R. I., of Arthur E. Bryant, towerman at the Bradford station, sustained a rear-end collision near the cemetery gate on the Watch Hill road Monday night. Michael A. Juliano of 185 High street, was the operator of the Durant car 14-935 R. I., which struck Bryant's car. No injuries were sustained. The Durant had crumpled mud guards and broken and twisted lamps. The right rear fender of the Ford was torn from the machine. It is understood that a civil suit for damages will follow.

TAFTVILLE

The lightning rod on the Sacred Heart convent was bent nearly double when it was hit by a bolt during the storm Saturday afternoon. The chimney of the house on South B street occupied by Edward St. Amour was also hit by lightning. When the game between the Taftville A. A. and the Hartford Federals was interrupted by a heavy downpour of rain the spectators all took refuge in the grandstand, but when the cyclone struck the ball field the rain was blown into the front of the grandstand and practically every spectator was drenched to the skin.

Word was received in the village Monday morning of the sudden death of Mrs. Frank E. Rand of Portland, Conn. Mrs. Rand was well known to village people, having resided here for a number of years with her son-in-law and daughter, Rev. and Mrs. Arthur Varley, when Rev. Mr. Varley was pastor of the Taftville Congregational church. Mrs. Rand was born in Marblehead, Mass., and after her marriage to Rev. Mr. Rand she went with him to the Caroline and other South Sea islands to work as a missionary for the Ameriran Board of Foreign Missions. At that time missionary work in the islands was a very hazardous undertaking, as travel was difficult, and at one time the ship that they had taken passage on was wrecked. During the Spanish-American war the Spanish government of the Philippines incited the natives against the American missionaries, putting a price on their heads. Mrs. Rand was the first white woman to visit the island of Yap and she was the first white woman seen by many of the natives of the neighboring islands. She spoke the language of the islands fluently. After 20 years of hard work as a missionary Rev. and Mrs. Rand returned to the United States and made their home with their son-in-law and daughter, Rev. and Mrs. Arthur Varley. Mrs. Rand was a brilliant speaker and had spoken in many churches throughout New England. She had a way not only of making friends but of retaining them. Her many acquaintances in the village were surprised and shocked by the news of her sudden death. She is survived by her husband, Rev. Frank E. Rand, her daughter, Mrs. Arthur Varley, and two grandchildren, the Misses Caroline and Dorothy Varley, all of Portland, Conn.

He was a frequent visitor in the village and is well known here. Mr. Peltier not long ago was interviewed by a reporter of a Providence paper which published his picture and the story of his life. He has never seen the inside of a saloon or a barber shop, and attributed his long life and good health to these two things, for he said, "Liquor will shorten a man's life anyway, and the best of barbers will talk one to death." So his wife was called upon to be the family barber until his sons were old enough to take up the task. Mr. Peltier is one of the highly respected citizens of the town in which he lives and is known as the "grand old man of Natick." He is one of the few men who have lived to see their son-in-law and daughter observe their golden wedding anniversary, which Mr. and Mrs. Lambert did last year.

Mrs. Anna Durre and son, Warren were Sunday visitors in Worcester and Boston.

Saturday's seven-minute tornado did very little damage in the village proper but in the outskirts there were reports of great damage. Mr. Wheeler who covers the star mail route between Yantic and Bozrahville was unable to reach Bozrahville owing to the many trees that had been uprooted along the route. On the Lebanon road all traffic had to pass through Christopher Hansen's yard as the large maple trees in that vicinity had so many limbs torn off and a few trees were down that traffic had to be directed that way. Section Foreman M. J. Shea covered his section with men he pressed into service as the regular road men had gone to their homes and he found much damage all along the track between Yantic and the Peck Hollow station, which he cleared.

The beautiful elm on Elmwood avenue at the home of Mrs. Mary Ladd was split so that it will have to be chopped to the ground. The huge button ball tree on the north side of the Sodom school was uprooted and fell toward the north, therefore did not damage the school. The plum and butternut trees in M. J. Sheas lot were felled, the butternut falling across the road. Several men worked late to get it out of the way.

W. W. Bentley, was overtaken by the storm the south side of Frinks Dairy farm and the hail so terrified his horse that he had to get out and lead it along, all the hailstones were the size of walnuts. At the home of Mrs. M. D. Murphy, at the crossroads several panes of glass were broken in the windows by them.

The large silo at the farm of the Smith brothers on the Lebanon roads was torn from its fastenings and whirled to the ground as were several small buildings in that vicinity.

Six apple trees in the orchard of Mr. Stephen O'Hearn were uprooted and are lying in all directions showing the whirlwind that struck there.

There are many more traces of the violence of the storm and it will be weeks before they are removed. Already many autoists have visited the devastated area and marvel that no loss of life occurred.

SCHWAB PROVED A JOVIAL WITNESS IN MORSE DEFENSE

Had Rarely Met Charles W. Morse When He Was Not Looking for a Loan—Testified That the Morse Shipyards Never Had Intentionally Delayed Work on Government Ships; That the Plants Were in Excellent Condition—Had Told Mr. Morse "That Relatives Were No Good in Business."

Washington, June 24.—One of a number of notables summoned at one time or another by the defense, Charles M. Schwab, went on the witness stand today to testify for Charles W. Morse and others charged with conspiracy in connection with war-time shipbuilding operations.

Mr. Schwab, describing himself as a manufacturer and an "engineer in human endeavor," was a jovial witness, and more than once during his testimony the strict decorum of the courtroom was broken by laughter at some of his expressions.

This was particularly true when he pointed some good natured quips in the direction of the three sons of Mr. Morse, who are on trial with their father.

"I told Charles W. Morse," said the witness, describing his efforts while head of the Emergency Fleet Corporation to speed up shipbuilding, "that relatives were no good in business."

"Most rich men's sons," said Mr. Schwab, "won't work like I want people to work for me."

The witness said the Morse shipyards never had intentionally delayed work on government ships; that the plants were in excellent condition, and that he at one time had urged a government loan of $750,000 to Morse. No risk, he said, should have stood in the way of getting ships when they were vitally needed. When he left the fleet corporation, he testified, he thanked the Morses, along with other shipbuilders, for their co-operation in furthering America's war aims.

During cross-examination, Mr. Schwab said he had rarely met Charles W. Morse when he was not looking for a loan. The laughter had hardly subsided when, in reply to an effort to of government counsel to determine when the witness had appeared in court before, he likened himself to a man who bought a book on memory training, read it awhile, decided to test himself and found he could not remember what he did with the book.

Ship-building plants operated by the Morses were low in the scale of production at times, Mr. Schwab testified, and he took measures to speed them up. His efforts in the main, he said, were in creating enthusiasm and "getting things done," the matter of contracts being left to others.

Although the defense had expected to rest today, failure to have incorporated into the record a resume of government claims in a civil suit against the Morses brought in Virginia resulted in an adjournment with its case incomplete. The record in the Virginia case, described by defense counsel as "vital," was ruled out by Justice Stafford, and Attorney Nash Rockwood was engaged in trying to put parts of it into the evidence when the court adjourned. The defense claimed in that case the government took a position contradictory to the criminal case on trial.

BANDITS WON PISTOL DUEL WITH BANK MESSENGERS

Toronto, July 24.—Six bandits engaged in a pistol battle today with a dozen bank messengers in the heart of the financial district and the bandits won.

The robbers fled in a stolen car with about $120,000, leaving three messengers lying wounded on the sidewalk. Two may die.

The highwaymen last were seen speeding along the Hamilton highway. Toronto motorcycle police in pursuit. Description of the fugitives' car was broadcast by radio to all points in Ontario and along the adjacent American border.

The messengers were walking along Jordan street from the clearing-house carrying pouches of money when the bandits drew up their car. The robbers immediately opened fire and hundreds of persons rushed to windows to watch the gun play. In the fight which followed David Campbell, messenger for the Sterling bank, fell with bullets in left lung and shoulder. A. F. Dick, Union bank messenger, crumpled with a wound in the abdomen; and James W. Harris was shot in the chest. Campbell and Duck tonight were in a critical condition.

Grabbing what pouches they could, the bandits fled in their car. The money they took belonged to the Bank of Nova Scotia and the Sterling bank.

EFFORT TO SETTLE STRIKE OF TELEPHONE OPERATORS

Boston, July 24.—A further effort to end the strike of telephone operators in New England, which has been in progress since June 26, was made today at a conference between Mayor Curley and General Manager George H. Dressed, of the New England Telephone and Telegraph company. It was learned tonight that the mayor had held several conferences previously with telephone company officials on the subject.

While no statement was issued after the meeting, it became known that Mayor Curley urged the re-employment, by the company of young women who held executive positions before the strike but had joined in the walkout. He declared that this point was the key to settlement of the strike quoting strikers as saying that they would return to work if their supervisors, obsecvers and assistant chief operators were not discriminated against.

The mayor told General Manager Dresser that a settlement of the strike in the immediate future was urgently necessary in the interests of the telephone using public.

Members of the wage conference board of the New England Council of Telephone Operators' unions, which is in charge of the strike, were summoned to Boston today by telegraphic orders. No indication was given of the purpose of this meeting.

LONGSHOREMEN ON STRIKE ON HOBOKEN WATER FRONT

Hoboken, N. Fourteen hundred men were out, the I. W. W. officials said, 900 of whom were members of the I. W. W.

Circulars calling upon all longshoremen to strike for a wage increase to $1 an hour with time and a half for over time and a forty-four hour week were distributed along docks in New York and Brooklyn as well as here.

Substituting cargo hooks for pencils, bookkeepers and others of the clerical staff of the Scandinavian-American line replaced the strikers and docked the liner United States in record time. The laughter of the strikers turned to jeers when the "white collared crew" had completed the task.

Gem Robbers Held in $125,000 Bail Each

New York, July 24.—Albert Horowitz and Eugene Moran, arrested yesterday in Princeton, N. J., in connection with the robbery of $300,000 in jewels from Mrs. C. F. Hugo Schoellkopf in New York last New Year's eve, were held in $125,000 bail each today, the highest amount ever set in general sessions. Protesting their innocence, the two were led away to Tombs prison, as there was no sign of the $250,000 required to give them their freedom.

Fixing of bail followed their assertion that they had been living like southern gentlemen in Biloxi, Miss., when detectives once lost the trail that led through Cincinnati, New Orleans, Latonia, Columbus and Philadelphia.

Despite their declarations of innocence of the Schoellkopf robbery both men were identified today by Paul Engelhardt, one of the guests at the New Year's party, as men who had played cards with Mrs. Schoellkopf a few minutes before the was robbed.

It was expected that trial of Horowitz and Moran would be delayed for some time, as both Mrs. Schoellkopf and Frank "Barrie" Carman, dancer, in whose apartment the party was given, are in Paris, Carman once was arrested in connection with the robbery, but later wa sreleased. He had been employed by Schoellkopf, a Buffalo capitalist, as dancing instructor, and general entertainer for his wife. As Mrs. Schoellkopf was leaving his apartment during the first few hours of the present year she was seized and dragged into the apartment below Carman's where her jewels were stripped from her.

Maxwell Biddulph, one of the men in the apartment below Carman's already has been sentenced to ten years in Sing Sing prison for his part in the robbery and it was through information he gave the police that Horowitz and Moran were arrested.

Police are still seeking the missing jewels.

William J. Moran, father of Eugene, who also was arrested with his son and Horowitz in Princeton, was released when the two were arraigned today.

CHILDREN BETTING ON HORSE RACES IN ENGLAND

London, July 24 (By the A. P.)—All over England tonight stern fathers were calling their little sons into the sitting room and asking them point-blank if they ever bet on the horses. The idea that maybe son is more interested in his "bookie" than in his books popped into pa's head as soon as he had started reading the evening newspaper on the way home from work this afternoon.

Under exciting headlines, he read about the "sensational testimony" given by a woman school teacher at the government's inquiry into betting. This teacher, whose school is in a poor district, testified that out of a class of 42 boys averaging 11 years old, 19 admitted that they backed horses. She also suspected that others in the class followed the ponies with their pennies but were afraid to admit it.

Some of the boys were daily bettors, she said, buying a three-penny "tip" and retailing its suggestions to their classmates at a half-penny each. She remarked that the boys were so eager and interested in betting that they had even offered to put up a little money for her. Colleagues had informed her that conditions were similar in other schools.

Asked by Sir Alfred Butt whether the youngsters understood the intricacies of betting, such as the starting prices, she replied: "Oh dear, yes! They talk about form, the size of the horses and the abilities of the jockeys. I have been astonished at their knowledge."

BANNER TRAFFIC BY THE NEW ENGLAND RAILROADS

Providence, July 24.—New England railroads hauled the largest traffic in their history during the first six months of this year with the business in June the largest in any month ever recorded, 1,021,770 cars being loaded with revenue freight the week ending June 30, said Robert H. Newcomb, executive assistant of the Boston and Maine railroad at the Rotary club luncheon here today. He declared this business was a refutation of the charge that New England was going backward. Government regulation of the railroads he called "unthinkable."

135 POISON PEN LETTERS ATTRIBUTED TO MAXWELL

Prosecutor Charges President of the American Society of Writers, Composers and Publishers With Having Penned Poison Letters for More Than Twenty Years—Alleged to Have Made Love to Many Women, Then Rid Himself of Them by Writing Poison Pen Letters to Their Husbands and Relatives.

New York, July 24.—A portrait of George Maxwell, president of the American Society of Authors, composers and publishers, as a Lothario who made love to many women and, when he become bored, rid himself of them by writing poison pen letters to their husbands and relatives was drawn today by Assistant District Attorney Maloney.

The picture was sketched in a brief filed in general sessions, opposing a motion by Maxwell's counsel to dismiss indictments charging his client with having written such letters received by Allan A. Ryan, prominent Wall street trader, and many others. Judge McIntyre reserved decision.

The brief—one of the most remarkable in the history of New York judicial jurisprudence—charged Maxwell with penning poison letters for more than 20 years. According to the district attorney's office, the letters were modeled after the famous German court letters which rocked the foundations of royal society in several countries about 1900 and which it develops were written by Baron Von Kotz, who attacked the reputation of court ladies, and, to avoid suspicion, sent similar letters to himself.

To support his charges, Mr. Maloney cited a number of alleged intimacies between Maxwell and women of prominence in the social and artistic world. According to the assistant district attorney, the latest and most prominent woman to indulge in an affair with Maxwell was Mrs. Ryan, wife of the financier, who attracted attention dyring the famous Stutz corner and a member of the Tact family of Philadelphia. Others whom Mr. Maloney listed among Maxwell's ex-inamorate were a Danish opera singer, a motion picture actress with whom he was alleged to have toured Mexico, a concert singer an a ballet dancer.

The case of another woman which Mr. Maloney cited resulted in the death of her husband from shock after he had received one of the letters with which Maxwell was alleged always to have drawn his affairs to a close, with a duplicate to himself. According to the prosecutor, Maxwell on being shown one of the notes by an irate husband, produced its mate and joined with the husband in denouncing the author.

Mr. Maloney devoted much of his brief to describing the intimacy which he alleged existed between Maxwell and Mrs. Ryan.

According to Maloney, Maxwell, who he said began life as a piano tuner on the Isle of Wight, travelled to London, Paris, Lake Como and Milan with the financier's wife, and later visited her at York Harbor, Me. She Maloney set forth, had in turn visited him in his New York apartment.

In support of his allegations, Maloney quoted radiograms which he said had been exchanged between Maxwell and Mrs. Ryan at one time when he was in New York and she was on the high seas. One of these messages, quoted by the prosecutor and alleged to have been sent by Mrs. Ryan, read in part:

"I am counting the hours. I will be there to meet you in Paris. Love, only love. Love of life."

MINE OPERATORS TAKEN COMPLETELY BY SURPRISE

Atlantic City, N. J., July 24.—(By the A. P.)—Thomas Kennedy, president of District No. 7, United Mine Workers of America, caused a stir in the anthracite wage negotiations today when he proposed that the operators and miners take cognizance of the United States coal commission's recent report by putting into effect its recommendation No. 7 and establish "a scientific and equitable basis for (wage) rate making."

The operators, taken completely by surprise, declined to state off-hand their attitude toward the proposal. Through their spokesmen they suggested, however, that the joint committee of investigation described in the recommendation also consider the efficiency of the miners in drawing up such a wage-making standard. They further requested time to analyze the United States commission's report before going on record.

The net results of today's four hour session of the miners and operators joint wage negotiations, committee, conferring on a contract to replace the one which expires August 31, was expressed by John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers, when he said: "There have been no developments. The conference is no nearer an agreement than it has been since the first day."

RIOT IN A HOME FOR MENTAL DELINQUENTS

Napanoch, N. Y., July 24.—Quiet reigned today in the home for mental delinquents here after the riot last night, in which George Sheppard of New York city, an inmate, was killed and Jesse Christian of Ellenville, an attendant, was seriously injured. His skull is fractured and little hope is held for his recovery.

The riot occurred in the mess hall when more than four hundred inmates, acting on a prearranged signal, attacked the fourteen unarmed guards stationed in the hall. The inmates fought with small stools, their only weapons, while the guards tried ineffectively to group themselves together. It was five minutes before reinforcements heard the row through the heavy closed doors and came to the rescue.

Sheppard was one of the ringleaders in the row, which has been brewing for some time, it was said. After the riot had been quelled and the inmates were being marched back to their cells in squad formation, Sheppard leaped from a staircase for the back of an attendant in front of him. He miscalculated his leap, fell upon an iron stairpost and was fatally injured, dying soon after.

NORWICH BULLETIN
11 Church Street — Telephone 1662

A young man who gave his name and address as Eugene Baribeault of 133 Vanderland avenue, East Providence, appeared in the police court on Tuesday morning, charged with the theft of an automobile. The case was continued to this (Wednesday) morning and bonds of $1,000 were named but were not furnished. Harold Stone and Charles Carpenter, two other men from East Providence, are sought by the police on the charge of being accomplices in the theft of the automobile.

The stolen machine is owned by Edward F. Johnson of 98 Maple avenue, this city. Mr. Johnson was visiting friends on Tingley street Monday night and had parked his Reo machine in front of the house. When he wished to return home late in the evening he found that the machine had been taken. He notified the police department, who in turn sent messages to departments in this section of the state. Acting Lieutenant of Police Thomas F. Grady and Officer Edward Leahy learned that the machine had been driven from Tingley street into Main street and then headed to the west. They secured another machine and followed. Upon arrival at Manchester they found the stolen car in the hands of the police there, and one of the occupants, Eugene Baribeault, held. The police in Manchester said that the car was seen to come bumping along about one o'clock on Tuesday morning, with two blowouts. When the officers stopped the machine, two of the men jumped and escaped in the darkness. Baribeault lacked speed and was caught by one of the officers.

The East Providence man said that he and his two chums arrived in this city Monday night in an autotruck and were looking for work.

The weekly meeting and luncheon of Willimantic Rotary club was held on Tuesday noon and President "Jim" Mustard was in charge of the session. A guest of the club was George Sisk-wick of Stafford Springs.

Standish, George Sisk-wick, "Herb" Huber and "Charlie" Hill sang That's Rotary. Secretary Hill then passed out a book on classification from International Rotary and read excerpts from the first monthly bulletin issued by District Governor George Cooper. President Mustard read a letter of appreciation from District Governor Cooper on behalf of himself and "Mother" Cooper for the fine reception tendered them at the Rotary club field day at Storrs last Thursday. Various pictures taken during the course of the activities at the field day were then handed out for inspection.

"Dick" Dodge, general chairman of the committee of arrangements for the field day, was given a rising vote of thanks, after which he gave his report of the event. Another vote of thanks was tendered the Connecticut Agricultural College for the use of the buildings and grounds, and to John F. Ahern, the Rockville-Willimantic Lighting company and the stenographers of the latter organization for their able assistance in registering those attending the field day. The secretary announced that a newspaper account of the day was spread upon the books to replace the usual minutes of the meeting.

The remainder of the meeting was taken up by an address by Secretary Hill in regard to the campaign which will be conducted in this city during the next three days for funds to be used in the erection of a dormitory at Connecticut College for Women at New London. The new building will be known as Windham House and the campaign for its erection was started three days before the entrance of the United States into the World war. The project lost much of its impetus during the troublesome times which followed, but is now being revived with new vigor and is being conducted in an effective manner. Besides being a most worthy one, the cause is urgent and should receive the full consideration of every red-blooded citizen. At the present time the college boasts a fine equipment with the exception of dormitory space, which, if it were ample enough, would allow for the doubling of the number of students who enroll each year at the institution. Windham House, if erected, will be the first county dormitory at the college, and it is hoped will set an example to other counties in the state.

To date, the sum of $26,000 has been raised toward the new dormitory, but Branford House, built in 1914 cost about $129,000, so that it can readily be seen that the goal is still a long way off. On account of the lack of dormitory space, three hundred girls had been refused admission up to the first of July and now the yare being turned away at the rate of three a day.

Wednesday, Thursday and Friday of this week are the dates set for an intensive campaign to be conducted in Willimantic and the headquarters will be in the office of the Jordan Buick company on Main street. The Jordan Aute company has donated an automobile for the use of the campaigners and a free telephone has been installed by the Southern New England Telephone company.

It is planned to ask for ten dollar donations, five dollars to be paid down and the remainder by the first of September.

Five thousand dollars which was given the college by the late Guilford Smith and $3,300 given by Mrs. Tourtelotte of North Grosvenordale, will go toward the erection of Windham House.

The local organization for the campaign includes Mrs. Helen Bose Cummings, chairman, Mrs. Charles W. Tryon, treasurer, and Mrs. Ashton C. Persons, secretary. Mrs. Carl R. Alford is also a member of the committee. A number of local young women who are students of the college, will have charge of exhibits of work done at the institution. They are: Misses Myrtice Tryon, Esther Taber, Helen Holbrook, Doris Bradway and Agnes Jones. The campaign in Windham county is under the supervision of Mrs. Edwin W. Higgins, wife of ex-Congressman Higgins of Norwich. Mrs. Higgins is devoting her entire summer vacation to the cause.

THE MAYFLOWER AT LAST TO GET HER CHANCE AT THE FISHERMEN'S TROPHY

Gloucester, Mass., July 24. — The Boston schooner Mayflower, twice ruled out of international fishermen's contests because of her yacht-like lines and great sail area, will have her chance in the open fishermen's race in Massachusets Bay August 27 for the trophy offered by Sir Thomas Lipton. This event, open to fishing schooners of all the world, will be raced under "fishermen's rules," with no restrictions as to hull and sail measurements or ballast. It will be part of the programme for the celebration of Gloucester's 300th anniversary as a port.

The entry of the Mayflower became known today when it was announced that three other American schooners also had entered for the Lipton trophy. The Henry Ford, defeated last year by the Lunenberger Bluenose for the international fishermen's cup, is one of these. The Elizabeth Howard, runner-up to the Ford in last year's American elimination races, is another; while the third in the new schooner Shamrock, now being fitted out at the Essex yards for a Boston fish firm. In order to have her ready to take part in race the builders of the Shamrock must first win another contest—against time. The new Columbia, an aspirant for international honors at Halifax in October, will not race here, as she is engaged in salt fishing on the Banks.

No entries are expected from Nova Scotia, where the owners are said to be reserving their resources for the international fixture next autumn. There still is hope of an entry from Newfoundland the committee announces.

The race will be twice around a 15 mile triangle five miles to a side. The centennial committee announces that there will be no postponement on account of the weather and the skippers themselves profess to be praying for a northeast gale.

DEMPSEY-FIRPO BOUT TO BE SETTLED TODAY

New York, July 24.—(By the A. P.) —Negotiations for a heavyweight title match between Jack Dempsey and Luis Angel Firpo, cloaked in mystery for the past ten days, reached such a stage today that Promoter Tex Rickard declared he probably would have a definite announcement to make at 3 o'clock tomorrow afternoon.

Just what this announcement would be the promoter declined to reveal, but there was every indication that the match had been clinched after a series of conferences during the day among Rickard, Firpo and Jack Kearns, the champion's manager.

The belief was strengthened by Rickard's statement that the principals had reached a thorough agreement with him on financial details and that there seemed no necessity for any further conferences before public announcement of the situation.

The promoter indicated that the site, and date of the proposed match still were uncertain, but general belief prevailed that he was endeavoring to effect an agreement to use the Polo Grounds for the fight on or about Labor day. It also was said that September 22 had been considered as a desirable date.

Pressed for the status of his recent proposal to put the match on in the Argentine, Firpo's native country, Rickard practically admitted he had abandoned all idea of that project. He feels that the logical site is in or about New York, where there is greater assurance of financial success.

Rickard denied that Firpo had at any time caused a hitch in negotiations by excessive financial demands, as reported.

"There has never been any difficulty over terms," he said. "We settled that matter at the start, but there are a lot of other things to consider. I hope to have things on a definite footing, however, inside the next 24 hours."

YANKS BEAT ATHLETICS WITH EIGHTH INNING RALLY

Philadelphia, July 24.—New York staged a batting rally in the eighth inning of today's game and scored enough runs to win from Philadelphia. The final score was 3 to 2. Until the eighth Rommel had the best of a pitching duel with Mays.

In the ninth inning with two on base Babe Ruth hit his 23d home run of the season, tying the mark of "Cy" Williams of the Phillies, who had previously led both big leagues. The ball cleared the right field wall and landed on the roof of a house across Twentieth street. Score:

SWEETSER WINS GOLD MEDAL AT CLEVELAND

Cleveland, O., July 24.—(By the A. P.)—Although he finished in tenth place of today's scoring and slumped seven strokes from the first round, Jess Sweetser of New York, national amateur golf champion, today with a 73 won the gold medal in the qualification for the western amateur title play because of the lead his record 68 for the Mayfield links gave him in the first round.

Sweetser scored the same today as Chick Evans, the defending champion, returned yesterday, while Evans despite a bad start that put him three over par in the first three holes, finished with a 73 for 148, tying him with three others for fourth place in medal play.

Within two strokes of the national champion's fine 143, five strokes under the average best score for 72 holes at the recent national open meet, from which Sweetser retired because of poor play, came Captain E. F. Carter of Chicago, formerly champion of Ireland, who scored 71-74—145.

Only one stroke behind came Densmore Shute of Huntington, champion of West Virginia, who today set a record of 33 for the second nine for a 71 and a total of 146. He made the 33 handily although he took a six of the 396-yard sixteenth by over-approaching down a cliff and thereby spoiled a likely 31 which would have landed him in second place.

Tied with Evans were Dexter Cummings of Chicago, who had the best score of the second round, a pair of 35's for a 70, one under par each way; James Manion of St. Louis, who improved his score six strokes today for a 71, tying Shute's second best score of the day, and J. M. Wells of East Liverpool, Ohio, who merely reversed Evans' score by taking his 75 today.

INDIANS AND BROWNS DIVIDE THE HONORS

St. Louis, July 24.—Cleveland and St. Louis divided a double header which was featured by home runs here today. The Browns won the first contest, 3 to 1 and the Indians annexed the second, 3 to 2 in thirteen innings. In the first game, McManus' home run after Williams had singled in the eighth inning decided the issues. Brower scored Cleveland's run when he hit for the circuit in the seventh inning. Tobin tied the score when he duplicated the feat in the Brown's half. Jamieson's four base hit in the thirteenth inning won the contest for the Indians. Myatt and Tobin also cracked out homers during contest, which was a pitching duel between Edwards and Kolp, Edwards struck out ten batters. The Scores:

Chicago, July 24.—Detroit won both games of a double header from Chicago today, 4 to 1 and 3 to 0, respectively. The White Sox were unable to hit Pillette effectively in the first game. Heilmann cracked out his 14th homer of the season in the first game. The second game was a free hitting affair in the first few innings but settled down into a pitching duel between Robertson and Cole, in which the former's wildness cost him the game. The scores:

TAFTVILLE-RIVERVIEW SERIES STARTS ON SATURDAY

One of the prime baseball attractions for the local fans over the week end will be the first game of the series between the Riverview club of the State Hospital and the Taftville A. A. at Taftville on Saturday. These two teams are about the fastest in the eastern section of the state and both have been playing exceptionally good baseball during the early part of the season. The Riverview club within the past week has seen fit to go out and get some new material to plug up the weak spots.

Tony West, the bespectacled phenom, is booked to do the twirling for the Riverview team, while either Mike Morin or Davis of the Sub Base will do the work for Taftville. Morin, who is playing with a team in the Canadian League, is expected to be on hand for the opening game, but should he not put in an appearance Davis or Greenhalgh will be sent into the box. Taftville has no desire to announce the lineup as yet but promises that when the team appears on the field it will be the equal of anything that the Riverview management can produce.

The Riverview club lineup will be practically the same as last week when they were beaten by the Corbin Red Sox. West p, Reddy c, Fay 1b, Massey 2b, Sullivan 3b, Mills ss, Clabby lf, Murphy cf, Hunt rf.

QUINN HOLDS WASHINGTON TO THREE SCATTERED HITS

Boston, July 24.—Quinn held Washington to three hits today while Boston hit Mitchell hard in the early innings. The score was 6 to 1, the ninth Washington run coming when Goslin knocked a home run into the right center field stands in the seventh. Frank Hitter Gharrity doubled in the ninth and the other Washington hit was of the scratch variety made by Leibold in the fourth. Picinich, last year with Washington, made four hits in four times at bat for Boston. Peckinpaugh fielded brilliantly. The score:

SOUTHPAW GOLFERS TO HAVE THEIR DAY

MARRIED MEN TROUNCE SINGLE MEN IN FOURTH GAME OF PRESTON SERIES

The drizzling rain that fell during the greater part of the game failed to dampen the enthusiasm of the fans or the fighting spirit of the players at the fourth game of the East Side series, in which the Married Men trounced the Single Men, 14 to 6, and stepped out one game in the lead on Tuesday evening. There was a crowd of fully 300 at the game and every last one of the fans stuck to the finish held by the spectacular performances of the diamond luminaries of both teams.

As soon as one star fades in oblivion another rises to that coveted pinnacle of baseball fame. This time it was "Berger" Goldberg, who climbed the rugged path to baseball notoriety. Berger, who pitched for the Single Men, although defeated through no fault of his own, was acclaimed as a conquering hero by the East Side populace. He pitched an extra good game, and when we say good game we mean it, for he surely did just that little thing. He far outpitched his rival Jumbo James, but his support was weak in the pinches which, was enough to discourage most anyone. Berger appeared on the diamond gowned in snow-white "knickers," pearl gray gold stockings, rubber-soled shoes, a white sleeveless shirt and a maroon baseball cap, giving one the impression of a composite picture of a golf-player, a swimmer and a baseball player. Berger then proceeded to make the fans sit up and take notice and until the fifth inning he had the Married Men not allowing a hit. In the fifth the Benedicts bunched hits and aided by errors scored seven runs and were never in danger.

In the fourth inning the game was halted and Lenger was presented a bouquet of flowers which he gracefully accepted and then in turn presented them to one of the fair sex at the game. After the game Berger said that he was handicapped by the wet ball but would do better next time.

Col. George Fowler, the peppy midget shortstop for the Single Men, had less opportunity to shine last evening but his playing was of sterling quality especially at the bat. The Colonel was the one man that Jumbo James really feared for he would not strike unless the ball was over the plate, and when he did cut at it he meant business. He was also presented a floral tribute which he disdainfully refused to accept.

Among the other stars that came in for their share of glory were Andy Boyens, snappy little backstop for the Single Men, Tom Swain, Ed Blood, Howard Randall and many others. One of the big disappointments of the game was the absence of Matt DeLaney, who has been the feature of the series until surplanted by Col. Fowler and Berger Goldberg. The score:

CRIQUI AND DUNDEE READY FOR BATTLE THURSDAY

New York, July 24.—Eugene Criqui, of France, featherweight champion, and Johnny Dundee, his American challenger, finished training today for their 15-round title match Thursday night at the Polo Grounds. Both will do just enough exercising from now on until the fight to keep on edge.

Dundee, at his West Orange, N. J., quarters, cavorted eight miles on the road today and later boxed six rounds. The Frenchman, already nearly two pounds under the 126-pound feather limit, had a less strenuous programme.

Tom O'Rourke, matchmaker of the Polo Grounds A. C., has completed a card of four preliminaries. Two of these will bring together "Irish Johnny" Curtin, Jersey City bantamweight, and Danny Edwards, of California, and Leon Poulet, French sparring partner of Criqui, and Pat Mills, Irish lightweight.

MOOSUP TAKES EASY GAME FROM VOLUNTOWN

Moosup walked away with the long end of an 8 to 3 score at Voluntown on Sunday. Voluntown threw the game away in the second inning, errors being responsible for the Moosup runs. Dupont pitched a good game for the home team allowing the visitors only six scattered hits and striking out 12 men, but received poor support. The visitors played a snappy game in the field and LaVallee pitched good ball allowing six hits and fanning six men. Eno who relieved him in the seventh inning held the home team hitless the remainder of the game. Tommy Corcoran held the indicator at the game and gave complete satisfaction as is his custom wherever he officiates. The score by innings:

THE TWEELVE-MILE LIMIT.

Are the British undergoing a change of mind in regard to the suggestion regarding a twelve-mile limit for liquor searches, or are they just awakening to the real meaning of the proposition?

Reports from London are to the effect that there may yet be an agreement between Great Britain and the United States that will permit the searching of British vessels within the twelve-mile limit for liquor. For some little time it was felt by the British that there would be no interference with the carrying and sale of liquor by British ships within the territorial limits of this country if the liquor was placed under seal as the three-mile limit was passed and kept there until it has been re-passed on the outward voyage.

Whatever they may have thought, it has developed by a decision of the supreme court of this country that such would violate the dry law of this country and attempts to disregard the law have resulted in the seizure of the sealed liquor. These acts have been admitted by British leaders as being entirely within the rights of this country.

That means that the British ships cannot have liquor except on westbound trips. It is a displeasing situation, but also is it displeasing to this country that so many British vessels are camping on the three-mile limit and selling liquor to be smuggled into this country.

There is a way of ending this situation, or at least greatly relieving it. That lies in the proposed treaty arrangement whereby this country would be permitted to search vessels within a twelve-mile limit for liquor that the smuggling may be stopped, while in return therefore this country would be willing to permit foreign vessels to bring liquor under seal within the present territorial limit.

This country would be obliged to get action by congress to do it, but in making such a proposition there has been no idea of searching the foreign vessels for other than liquor. It seems to have taken the British a long time to digest the Hughes proposition.

LAX REGARD FOR LAW.

Lamentable was the death of the three men who were killed in a New York factory when caught by the fumes of a deadly gas used for fumigation. It appears that the company had issued orders that all must leave the building and it does not appear why the three who were caught had not responded to such warning. When gas for fumigation purposes is being used that is so powerful that it will render a person unconscious at the first sniff, it certainly calls for all possible precautions and an adequate time allowance for the emptying of the buildings for there can be no help for persons in such a trap.

Whether or not there had been any criminal carelessness in connection with the fumigation arrangements, it does appear that there was a direct disregard for the law of the city which requires the securing of a permit for any such act. Fumigation in itself isn't a matter that calls for restrictions, but there is need of safeguarding the lives of those who might be called to such a building and who would have no previous knowledge of existing conditions.

This might easily be true in case a fire should develop at the building before the fumigation had been completed. Firemen rushing into a building under those conditions would be immediately overcome. There would be little to prevent a wholesale killing, and yet such could be and is guarded against by the issuance of permits, information regarding which is immediately transmitted to the fire department and gas masks are employed should fire develop in those buildings at such a time.

Apparently the fumigation permit in New York gets little more attention than the law regarding fire escapes, wooden stairways in buildings or in fact the permit for the handling or transportation of explosives. Unfortunately it requires the loss of life in too many instances to bring to light the many who show their disregard for the provisions that are established for greater safety.

LET THEM STAY.

When it is announced that there are 11 of the 25 so called political prisoners who have refused the pardon granted them by the president, because they prefer to serve their time rather than to comply with the conditions attached to the pardon, that is of course a choice which they had a right to make. The fact is that many feel that that is the place where they should have been allowed to remain whether they wanted to or not.

When such individuals make it clear that they are unwilling to agree to be law abiding and loyal to the government of the United States, and not to encourage, advocate or become wilfully connected with lawlessness in any form it is evident that they have in mind the very thing which the conditions seek to prevent. Those who agreed to the terms do not seem to have any doubt as to what they mean. Those who pretend they do not know what they mean indicate that they are so imbued with lawlessness that they will not abandon it even to get their liberty, and that they prefer to serve out their sentences and then return to their practices rather than conduct themselves as good citizens should.

There seems to be no good reason for wasting any great amount of sympathy or effort upon such individuals. Their attitude only serves to emphasize the fact that they have not been misudged or unduly sentenced. Such sentence as they have served doesn't appear to have had any beneficial effect upon them, and it doesn't appear that it will have if fully served but the country is getting the protection that it is entitled to and there is a lesson provided for others that will help.

It can hardly be expected that just because they will not accept the terms offered that they will be turned loose without strings and thereby invited to do their worst. They are as ungrateful as they are menacing.

SCRAPPING BATTLESHIPS.

Two obsolete warships, the New Jersey and the Virginia, have been designated by the navy department as targets for testing the effectiveness of the airplane bombers. This isn't the first time that such has been done. A number of old warships lie at the bottom of the ocean because they were used as targets either by the navy itself or by the air craft.

Some criticism may arise from the fact that old ships do not permit of the same resistance that modern ships did against airplane attacks, and there are those who will insist that a stationary target, such as it is planned to make of these ships, does not serve to test the ability of the bombers since they could not expect any such favorable target in case of actual conflict.

Whether it will arouse the controversy regarding the effectiveness of the present day battleships remains to be seen. The navy cannot be expected to admit that the battleship is no longer of value and that its doom has been sealed by the airplane, while the air service is certain to claim much as the result of some of the demonstrations that have been made of its effectiveness.

When battleships are being taken out to be sunk or used as targets there is much to be said about the waste of material. Breaking up the vessels and using the metal as raw material cannot fail to make its appeal provided such conversion can be accomplished at a price that does not make it more expensive than raw material. When it does cost more to junk the old battleships than new material would cost there can be little said against the occasional use of the old timers for the testing of the effectiveness of gunners and shells or the aerial bombs.

THE COAL SUPPLY.

Two members of the fact finding commission which has been probing the coal situation, John Hays Hammand and Thomas J. Marshall, are quoted as expressing their confidence that there will be no anthracite strike in the fall. They are not going into details as to why they think that way and they are not telling just what they are basing their opinions on, but such optimism comes from a source that relieves to some degree the apprehension that has been felt over the possibility and the fact that the miners in conference have not been willing to agree to continuing mining activities until there is an adjustment of their dispute.

The public is decidedly anxious that there should be no repetition of what happened last year. The idea of endeavoring to have demands granted because the public is faced by distress conditions cannot be expected to gain approval whoever is responsible for it.

Those who have been urging the filing of coal bins during the summer have been doing a good service. They have been endeavoring to remind the public of its own shortcomings. But that doesn't warrant either the miners or the operators entertaining the idea that the public should get no consideration when it comes to the price or the production of coal.

ABSURD SUPPOSITION

"Heck!" grumbled the father of the family as he investigated his cigar jar and found it empty. "I must remember when I go out at noon tomorrow to drop into the cigar store and get a box of my favorite Spaghetti brand".

"Why the idea!" his fair young girl reproved him, pausing on her way to the front door. "I don't see why you should wait till you go downtown, when you can get perfectly beautiful cigars in the new drug store that has opened around the corner! They have a case full of perfectly fresh cigars and I should think you would like to patronize home industries and help business in the community and—er—all that! Shall I get you some?"

"Where you going?" demanded the father of the family.

"To—to the drug store," hesitated his fair young daughter, drawing on her best gloves very busily, "I want some postage stamps."

"I should think you would have got the stamps when you were in there just before dinner to buy a new toothbrush," her mother said, "Going out alone after dark like this with the streets thick with holdup men!"

"I forgot I needed stamps," her daughter explained kindly, "or I should have gotten them. Lots of people forget things."

"You might have got them when you were there right after lunch getting a soda with Cerise Green," said her little brother brightly. "Specially as you didn't remember them this morning when you went after the toilet soap you forgot the time you bought the birdseed after breakfast."

"Here, here!" the father of the family said, irritably, "What is this—a bee or a drug store Marathon or what?"

"I wish I might stir without the whole family keeping tab on me!" flamed the fair young daughter, with much indignation. "Here I run my feet off doing errands, and then everybody acts like this! It's the most natural thing in the world when there is a perfectly fine store handy to trade there and I think it would be dreadfully discouraging to start in business and find that people were horrid and snippy and never came in, even if they didn't want to buy anything.

"Why, lots of people go into Jump & Saffron's drug store just because it looks so bright and attractive. Mr. Saffron has the nicest cushioned window seat for people to sit on when they want to wait for anybody, and when a person is as thoughtful as that I think one should show that she—he appreciates it and recognizes a force in the community and—and——"

"Hey!" the father of the family interrupted, still more irritably, "When did you get so interested in civic affairs? How old are Jump and Saffron?"

"Oho!" said the father of the family. "So that——"

"It's nothing of the sort!" cried the fair young daughter, turning deep red. "If you are going to listen to a horrid little boy who doesn't know what he's talking about, all right! Mr. Saffron is a remarkable young man and he went to college and uses the most beautiful language and just because he is polite to me as he is to everybody Willie has to go and [illegible] things like how was I to know when I went after bird seed this morning that you would be wanting cigars tonight? I couldn't!"

"But you said it was postage stamps her father reminded her patiently. "I don't understand——"

"How many cigars shall I get you?" his fair young daughter broke in with great firmness, her hand on the door. "I am almost certain I saw that name—Vermicelli, didn't you say?—when I happened to be there and if Mr. Saffron doesn't carry them I know he'll be delighted to order them and keep them for you."

"If you're so sure he has them," said the father of the family, reaching for his hat, "I'll go out right now and pick them out myself! I think I'd better give this Saffron fellow the once over. And I can get your stamps for you just as well as not, Cissie, if you don't care to go out again."

"Oh, I don't mind going at all!" the fair young daughter said nobly, stepping through the door hastily before he could prevent her. "Anyhow, he may have just ones and no twos and in that case I don't know just how many I want, so I guess I'd better go. It just makes me laugh when I think how disappointed you are going to be if you think I have the slightest interest in Mr. Saffron! It'll just serve you right, so there!"

Stories That Recall Others

Full of Beans

A little girl was having a reading lesson. The subject was Jack and the Bean stalk. Jack has just bartered away the cows for the beans, and so, the text continued "He and his mother went to bed full of g-r-i-e-f."

"Well, what does that spell?" asked the teacher after a long pause.

"Beans," was the reply.

The Way to Tell

Little Johnny was on a visit to his aunt. She kept rather a good table, and Johnny used to the plain home fare that his mother wisely provided for him ate his fill of cake and jam.

"Johnny," said his aunt, as the boy finished the last crumb of the fifth slice of cake, "have you had all that is good for you?"

"I don't know," answered the boy.

"Well, what do you think?" asked his aunt kindly.

"Ain't any use thinking," was the non committal answer.

"Well, you are a funny boy!" said his aunt. "When will you know?"

"In half an hour."

"And how will you know?"

"Well, that's easy. If I ain't sick I'll be sorry I took so much. That's the only way to tell that I know of."

IN THE PUBLIC EYE

Rear Admiral Albert T. Niblack, U. S. N., who goes on the retired list today for age, has had a career of nearly half a century of active naval service. He is a native of Indiana and was graduated from Annapolis in 1880. Of late years he has had many important assignments, such as inspector of the naval militia, naval attache in Berlin, Rome and Vienna, prior to the Spanish-American war, and at Buenos Aires and Berlin since that short struggle. He had his full share of important service in connection with the establishment of American authority in the Philippines, and shared in the concerted action of the powers following the "Boxer" outbreak in China. During the late war he served as one of the principal subordinates acting under Vice Admiral Sims in the waters of the European war zone. Admiral Niblack, whether on land or sea duty, has always been found capable, and has been reckoned among the leaders of his profession as a thinker and doer.

Wives of Famous Men

Margaret Miller, Wife of James Watt

A woman who shared all the poverty and struggles of her husband, but who was fated to die before he achieved the success which she helped him to win, was Margaret Miller, wife of James Watt, the inventor of the steam engine.

Margaret was his cousin, and the two had loved as long as they could remember. Family opposition was strong, however, for two reasons—first of all because of the relationship and secondly, because of the youthful scientist's pecuniary difficulties. But love triumphed, and the two were married, rashly, perhaps, as there was absolutely no money and very little prospect of acquiring any.

This marriage, however, was one of the exceptions that proves the rule to the effect that "when poverty comes in at the door love flies out of the window." The porer they became the more tender and patient Mrs. Watt grew. She knew, she often said, that James would be poor when she married him, and felt that he needed her love all the more because he had so little else. Their home was plain and small, but she kept it scrupulously neat, in spite of the fact that her husband's work of a necessity created a good deal of untidiness. And she never scolded him for upsetting the house with his tinkering.

"She had the sweetest of dispositions," writes a biographer, "was always happy and made his life happy even in its darkest hours of struggling."

After many years of grinding poverty, his life's work began to earn recognition. He was sent for by some business men, and while he was away negotiating for the sale of his patent Margaret died, without even learning of the good fortune she helped by her patience to win.

A Little Talk on Thrift

No Success Without Character.

The benefits of thrift are by no means limited to material matters. The effects on the character, the development of moral stamina and the inspiration of right living are among the good fruits of thrift that cannot be measured by the standard of dollars and cents. "Save and teach all you are interested in to save;" wrote Thomas Jefferson, "thus pave the way for moral and material success."

Back of all success in life must be character. No one ever has really succeeded without it. By success is not meant alone the accomplishment of great deeds. A good life is a successful one. A good housewife is a success. And when one analyzes the success of those who have been the great leaders of thought and action one finds that notwithstanding tremendous mental power and broad vision, they possessed the outstanding feature of character. How important for example, was this fact apparent in the cases of such men as Lincoln, Franklin, Jefferson and Washington. They were guided entirely by matters of principle.

Our characters are moulded by our daily habits. The young man for example who charts his career and then adheres strictly to his plans will succeed. This means that every day he must overcome obstacles and resist temptations. But those who are weak, drift with events and eventually fail.

Thrift does not mean alone the saving of money. Your bank-book or your investment strong box do not entirely tell the story of the value of your thrift. There is something in the heart and in the brain that are even of greater value.

Practice thrift, not alone because of the rainy day or for the period of old age, but for all it will mean to you in the days of activity and progress as well.—American Society for Thrift.

WEAK AND RUN-DOWN

After Serious Operation WINCARNIS Restores Her Strength

"Not long ago my daughter was obliged to undergo a serious operation which left her in a dreadfully weak and run-down condition. She had no appetite and was as white as a sheet. She really looked as if she had no blood left in her. She was also very nervous.

The doctor had given her some medicine to build her up but she did not seem able to get her strength back. In fact, her improvement was so slow that it had me mighty worried.

I heard about Wincarnis and got her a bottle. It worked wonders. She began to improve right from the start. It was simply wonderful how quickly she regained her strength and put on weight, and how the color came back to her cheeks."

TROUBLE AT OKLAHOMA AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE

Muskogee, Okla., July 24.—The removal of George Wilson, farmer-labor reconstruction league organizer, as president of Oklahoma Agricultural and mechanical college "for the protection and safety of that organization" was assured today when Governor J. C. Walton ousted Peter Coyne and H. M. Stillwell as members of the state board of agriculture.

The governor made this plain in a signed statement which accompanied the order, removing Coyne and Stillwell declaring that his action was taken "not only for the safety and protection of the school but for the good of a great cause, the farmer-labor movement."

Wilson's election aroused the protests of organizations and students throughout the state, many of whom pointed out that he has no college degree.

Wilson, a former non-partisan league worker, was active in organizing the farmer-labor reconstruction league, which supported the governor in the election last fall.

WILL RETURN FIRE OF ANY RUM RUNNER

New York, July 24.—Any rum runner who opens fire on United States coast guard cutters is going to get it back.

Captain Byron L. Reed, commanding local coast guard headquarters, made this quite plain today when Commander A. J. Ahearn of the Semicole reported to him that he had withdrawn his craft from the British schooner Thorndyke off Rum Row last night after the alien had threatened "to fill the prohibition agents full of lead."

"If they fire on you, return it," was the order Captain Reed snapped out after Ahearn had reported withdrawing for fear of bringing on an international incident. Ahearn, however, did not depart before seizing a motor boat with 20 cases of liquor which he said he had found alongside the Thorndyke.

EXPECT TO HAVE NEW STREET WORK FINISHED IN ANOTHER MONTH

Another month will see the major portion of new street work completed by the street department, according to Street Commissioner A. E. Cruthers, who has charge of the work in the city.

The work of laying cement on Laurel Hill avenue has been progressing rapidly and on Tuesday the men had reached just below Center street with the cement on the easterly side of the street and between the car tracks, and within four more days should be down to Walnut street where the work will end. This half of the street is by far the harder of the two for the laying of cement, as it requires care to lay in between the trolley tracks.

Upon the completion of this half of the avenue there will be a slight holiday while the avenue there will be a slight holiday company is removing the old trolley tracks and when the street is leveled again the work of laying the cement on the westerly side of the street will begin. With good weather the avenue should be opened for public travel by the middle of August.

Not to waste any time in the programme of road building ahead of the street department for the summer, Commissioner Cruthers stated Tuesday night that the concrete mixer would be taken off the Laurel Hill avenue job just as soon as one side is laid, and brought to Rose alley, where it will be only a short job to lay the cement road there, making a great improvement in this centrally located place of travel.

The work of scarifying West Main street has been progressing at a rapid rate and the job on the southerly side would have been completed Tuesday had it not been for the tying up of both road rollers. Today (Wednesday) the two rollers will be in action and the remainder of the distance on the southerly side of the street will be cleared up. This work has been pushed forward rapidly, less than a week being taken to scarify the south side of the street from Thames square to the city line at the corner of West Main and Maple streets.

Upon the completion of this work, the steam rollers will be busy getting the roadbed ready for the tar coating. One will be used to harrow the roadbed and the second will roll it down. A coating of fine crushed rock from 1 1-2 to 2 inches in diameter will then be fed to the bed and rolled down hard, then the final work of binding with tar will be done.

Commissioner Cruthers was not certain Tuesday whether the work on West Main street would be cleaned up entirely before Central avenue is touched, or whether he will finish only the south side of the street and then go to Central avenue and scarify, then tar bind one-half of that avenue before going back to West Main street.

There is, however, some possibility that West Main street will be finished up completely before Central avenue is done so that the street will be in fine shape before the horse racing at the fairgrounds in August and the fair in September.

Commissioner Cruthers said Tuesday night that all of West Main street could be finished, Central avenue rebuilt complete, and the work on Rose alley and Laurel Hill avenue cleared up long before September 1st and although this represented only a part of the work ahead of his department, when done, it would be a fine job and the people would be satisfied with the results, and forget the troubles they have had in the past with bumpy roads and streets.

He simply asks people to be patient for a few weeks longer while the work is in progress, feeling that when the streets are rebuilt the public will be satisfied with the results.

GYMNASTIC AUTO BREAKS GLASS IN NEW LONDON

(Special to The Bulletin)

New London, July 24—An automobile owned and operated by Calvin Edmunds, of 42 Maple street, while racing with an unidentified car through Main street, tonight, skidded on the pavements, climbed on the sidewalk and crashed through two plate glass windows of the furrier store of B. M. Baline. Edmunds was arrested charged with reckless driving and will be presented in the police court tomorrow morning.

The automobile and unidentified car passed through Main street at a speed estimated by witnesses at between 45 and 50 miles an hour. When approaching Masonic street Edmunds' car began to skid and the driver was unable to control it. The machine skidded almost a distance of 60 feet going across the highway and upon the sidewalk, narrowly missing men and women pedestrians, and passing between a telephone pole and the buildings continued along the sidewalk and crashed through the window of Baline store. The automobile then continued off the sidewalk and to the opposite side of the street where it was brought to a stop.

Edmunds declared that he was not racing any car and that he estimated his speed not greater than 15 miles an hour.

WETHERSFIELD PRISONERS MAKE GIFT TO WARDEN

In appreciation of the privilege of the freedom of the prison yards on Sunday afternoon between 1 and 5 o'clock in the afternoon, a recent change in the prison routine, the men at the Wethersfield State prison on Sunday gave Warden H. K. W. Scott a painting, the work of Louis Weiss, an inmate, with a verse, praising the warden as "one who understands," the work of Francis Joseph. Both Weiss and Joseph are serving sentences at the state prison and the work has been done in their cells nights. The presentation was made at the close of the chapel services Sunday morning by arrangement with the prison chaplain. It was a touching ceremony.

The painting is a marine scene, a schooner with dark brown belly-ing sails sailing toward the foreground of the picture. Behind the sails the moon is showing through the clouds. The picture is free from other conventional marine-scape detail and is considered a remarkable piece of work by those who have seen it.

The picture is framed with an elaborate scroll, done with pen and ink, and a conventionalized border in blue and gold, in which the Masonic square and compass has a prominent place. Enclosed in the picture is Joseph's poem. With the picture and poem, the warden received a roster of the prisoners, signed to a brief introduction expressing their appreciation of the freedom of the yard on Sunday afternoon.

GIVEN COFFEE SET ON WEDDING ANNIVERSARY

Mr. and Mrs. Herman Redkowski of East Baltic street celebrated the 25th anniversary of their wedding day on Monday. As they have been faithful members of the First German Lutheran church for many years, the members of the Ladies' Aid society planned to surprise them on that day.

Around 3 o'clock in the evening they went to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Redkowski. It was certainly a big surprise. The pastor, Rev. H. Hunsinger, delivered an address to Mr. and Mrs. Redkowski congratulating them on behalf of the society and in the name of the society presented them a beautiful coffee set. The evening was spent with games and vocal and instrumental music. Later on refreshments of coffee, cake, ice cream and fruit were served by the hostess. The guests, having had a fine time, departed at a late hour, wishing Mr. and Mrs. Redkowski many happy returns of the day.

HAS RIGHT LEG BROKEN WHEN AUTOMOBILE SKIDS

Two employes attached to the New London office of the Southern New England Telephone Co. were injured, one of them receiving a broken leg, when the repair truck on which they were riding skidded on the wet Montville road about 7:30 Tuesday evening near the Hubbard place on the road between Norwich and New London.

Joseph Driscoll, Ocean Avenue, New London, received a compound fracture of the right leg below the knee when he was thrown from the truck, while Charles Green, also of New London, had a cut near one of his eyes and his back was bruised.

The truck was driven by Frank Coombs and was on the way from Putnam to New London, with three men aboard besides the driver. When almost opposite the Hubbard place, it skidded off the crown of the road and landed in the ditch. Driscoll landed on the ground and Green was tossed about on the machine, receiving cuts and bruises.

The other men picked Driscoll up and sent in a call for Dr. John J. Donohue of Montville and for the Backus hospital ambulance, both responding. Dr. Donohue arranged a temporary pillow splint for the broken leg and put in a call for the Lawrence hospital ambulance at the request of Driscoll who wanted to be taken to a hospital in his home city rather than in Norwich.

Shortly after the doctor had summoned the New London ambulance, the Backus hospital ambulance drove up with Superintendent Hutchins, a doctor and a nurse. When he had the circumstances expained to him by Dr. Donohue, Superintendent Hutchins kindly agreed to take the injured man to New London in the Norwich ambulance rather than have him wait for the ambulance from that city. This was done and the man was taken to the Lawrence hospital. Green was treated by Dr. Donohue and went to his home.

THAMES RIVER BRIDGE HAD BIGGEST YEAR

The Thames river highway bridge had the most traffic and the highest receipts of any of the three toll bridges in the state in the year ending June 30, according to a statement issued by State Highway Commissioner John A. MacDonald. Automobile traffic over the Thames river bridge increased at such a rate in the past twelve months that there were 150,000 more cars on which tolls were collected than in the preceding year.

Tolls were collected on that bridge in the year just closed on 374,967 passenger automobiles, which is more than twice the traffic to which the bridge would be subjected if every passenger car registered in the state were to cross. Commercial motor vehicle traffic was more than quadrupled, tolls being collected on account of 75,851 trucks during the year.

Over 30 per cent. of the motor vehicles using the Thames river bridge were from out of the state, and over 26 per cent. on the Saybrook-Lyme bridge were foreign, but only 3,126 foreign cars were the subjects of toll charges on the Haddam-East Haddam bridge, while tolls were paid on 54,598 Connecticut cars. The ratio on the Thames river bridge was 147,995 foreign to 331,177 domestic cars, and, on the Saybrook-Lyme bridge, 66,571 to 189,926 Connecticut cars.

Thames Bridge Receipts $115,350.75.

Thames River bridge receipts easily topped those of the other two bridges, reaching $115,350.75, as against $96,660.54 in the previous year. The expenses were $24,475.10, compared to $25,334.58 in the previous year. There was only a slight gain in the receipts of the Saybrook bridge, which aggregated $30,978.25 for the year. The preceding year the receipts on this bridge were $79,350.50. The receipts on the Haddam-East Haddam bridge totaled $15,706.20, an increase of $125.85 over those of 1921-22. The expenditures on the Saybrook bridge were $3,886.55 and those on the Haddam-East Haddam structure $9,388.86.

Losing Money on Ferries.

According to the statement the state lost $14.67 for every passenger which it carried across the river on Bissell's Ferry in the fiscal year. The loss was $6.38 a passenger greater than that for the previous year.

The loss from the operation of the Rock Hill-Glastonbury ferry increased in the same period from $1.03 to $2.24 a passenger, while the loss on the Chester-Hadlyme ferry increased from 33 to 37 cents a passenger.

Decreased patronage is held responsible for the deficit. The three ferries carried 23,122 passengers in the past year, a drop of 6,131, causing a decline from $4,078.50 to $2,961.10 in the aggregate gross receipts. Meanwhile, the use of the state toll bridges increased to the extent that notwithstanding the repeal of toll charges for foot passengers, their gross receipts jumped from $195,569.89 to $216,006.20 and their net receipts from $145,365.11 to $156,117.69.

Only Forty Ferry Passengers.

Only forty passengers were carried on Bissell's ferry in the entire year. The charge for each was 5 cents, the rate fixed by the state board of control. The expenditures for the maintenance of the ferry aggregated $568.68, so that the average cost to the state for transporting each passenger was $14.72. The previous year there were 168 passengers and the operating expenses totaled $647.68. On the Chester-Hadlyme ferry, there were 21,168 passengers, and the receipts totaled $3,401.96, as against expenditures of $11,105.24. This ferry carried 26,058 passengers in the previous year. The Rocky Hill-Glastonbury ferry carried 1,929 passengers at a gross cost of $3,877.96, and they paid an aggregate of $696.45 for the transportation. No motor vehicles or horse-drawn vehicles used Bissell's ferry. A small number used the other two ferries, the payment of tolls for which helped to keep down the average cost for transportation for each passenger.

Operated Since 1641.

The state highway department is required by statute to operate these ferries. Bissell's ferry is by far the oldest of them, having been in operation since 1641, when it was established by John Bissell. Originally it was located on Bissell's farm, but it was moved in 1668 to its present site about a mile and one-half above Windsor. The ferry operates on a submerged cable which passes through block pulleys of the boat rigging to trees on either side of the river. Motive power is supplied by the current and the boat runs on an angle as in tacking.

LEVIATHAN CARRIED ONLY 31 BAGS OF MAIL

New York, July 24—Although the United States steamship Leviathan is rated among the swiftest liners afloat, she was entirely ignored by the French post office department and was given only 31 bags of mail by the British for transportation to this port on her mairen round trip voyage which ended here Monday, it was learned tonight.

The Homeric, a British vessel which sailed from Southampton one day after the Leviathan and is not due at Quarantine before six p. m., tomorrow, is bringing 6,600 bags of mail and parcel post matter. Of the thirty one sacks of mail placed aboard the Leviathan five contained only letters that were especially addressed "via Leviathan." No mail was taken on at Cherbourg.

THE LIFE OF A HOME

A healthy, happy, contented wife is the life and joy of the home and the greatest inspiration a man can have, yet how many homes in America are blighted by the ill-health and sufferings of the wife and mother. It may be backache, headaches, the tortures of a displacement or some other ailment peculiar to her sex which makes her irritable, despondent, and her whole life a burden. Every woman in this condition should rely upon Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound made from roots and herbs to restore her to health and happiness, for statistics prove that it benefits 98 out of every 100 women who try it.

HENRY FORD FURNISHES BAIL FOR MRS. GORKA

Detroit, Mich., July 24.—Instructions to furnish bail for Mrs. Katherine Gorka, awaiting trial for the shooting to death of her husband Frank, were sent by Henry Ford from his yacht in Grand Traverse bay to his Ford Dearborn office. Ford was cruising around the bay and in reading a belated Detroit newspaper found the story of the woman who is alleged to have shot her husband in a quarrel following the husband's action in buying an automobile with money she had saved to purchase a home.

After reading the newspaper account the Detroit automobile manufacturer told his radio operator: "Tell my office in Dearborn to supply bail to any amount and get that woman out of jail immediately."

An hour later attorneys for Mr. Ford appeared at the prosecutor's office to arrange for bail, but found the woman had been eleased Saturday on $10,000 bond furnished by friends.

Bad Complexions Now Removed by Absorption

It has been found that ordinary mercolised wax has the power to absorb an old, faded or discolored complexion—or more literally, the old cuticle, or outer skin—revealing the fresher, healthier under-skin, blooming with the pink of life and the glow of youth. The dead and half-dead cuticle comes off so gradually, in fine, flour-like flakes, that there is no pain, no discomfort, no detention from one's everyday duties. Of course such troubles as tan, freckles, moth patches, liver spots and fine lines go with the discarded skin.

Mercolised wax, which druggists supply in one-ounce tins, should be spread lightly over the face before retiring and washed off in the morning.

DANIELSON AND PUTNAM NEWS

DANIELSON

As to the facts contained in the following story sent out under a Providence date line, there is some truth at least as regards the coming here of Marcin Zagraniczny, it was ascertained Tuesday, for the purpose to withdrawing money from the bank, so his disappearance is a matter of local interest, for the missing man is known in Polish circles in Danielson and elsewhere in Killingly:

Providence, R. I.—Search for Joseph Morris, Lena Sherman, Anthony Boris and Mary Zoma, Coventry "love cave elopers," today shifted to California, when it was learned two couples answering their descriptions had purchased tickets in New York for the West Coast. They are believed en route to Hollywood.

They are sought for alleged violation of the Mann act and for questioning in connection with the disappearance of Marcin Zagraniczny after he had drawn $4,500, his life's savings. Chief Agent John Daley of the department of justice has broadcasted descriptions of the four elopers to all cities and towns leading to the West Coast.

A week ago Zagraniczny disappeared after a trip to Danielson, Conn., with Morris and Boris, where he had withdrawn $4,500 from a savings account and cashed two life insurance policies. The following evening, a younger sister of Mary Zoma told the police, she visited the "love cave" and saw Morris and Boris take a tin box filled with money from a hole in the ground near the cave.

Shortly afterward the two couples fled from the cave in Morris' high-powered car, Zagraniczny mysteriously vanished about the same time. Today Chief of Police Lowell Greene of Coventry learned that Boris has a police record for assault and badly beating up a man.

Joseph Morris, a Providence man, came to live with Lena Sherman's parents when they moved to Coventry a few years ago. Lena was then but 12. Morris became enamoured of her, police say. He was then 40 and is said to be married.

Mary Zoma, Lena's neighbor, now 16, according to police, became enamoured of Anthony Boris, married and he father of several children. When the dual romance developed the couples became closely associated. "Love sences" in the "love cave" and "petting parties" in Morris' automobile were the order of the day, police assert.

A few weeks ago Morris and Lena's father quarreled. Morris left the house in a rage, with Lena vowing that "wherever Joe went she would follow." Joe went to the "love cave" in the heart of the thicket surrounding Coventry, and Lena followed.

With them in the cave was a baby girl, which police declare was born to Lena a little more than a year ago.

Much that appeared strange over the inability of anyone here to obtain the names of any of the four persons—two young men, a woman and a young girl—who had a narrow escape from death when the car in which they were riding turned over on its side and plunged through a fence and off the state road at South Killingly early Monday morning was cleared up by the state police Tuesday morning when they telephoned the Massachusetts number into motor vehicle headquarters in that state and ascertained that the machine was one stolen in North Attleboro at 4.30 Monday morning.

The pitiful story of the woman in the party, while blood was flowing from the cheek of the injured young man, and while the girl lay in a faint, that they were hurrying to the bedside of a dying relative in New Haven was a clever and subtle subterfuge to get away from the wrecked car at the earliest possible moment. And in this too a kindly though inexplicable providence aided them, for about the first car that came along after the wreck was bound for Hartford and the kindly occupants offered to take all of the party to the office of a physician in Danielson, where the injured might receive attention, and then on to the Capital City as a big lift on their rudely interrupted journey.

All the people in the wrecked car got away before any state officer could reach the place. A checkup showed they had not visited the office of any physician here, and there were other things that made the whole matter following the wreck look suspicious. An investigation revealed that the car had been stolen and cleared up the story.

According to the most complete compilation of statistics available from a battery of adding machines and the united efforts of 22 certified accountants, just 21,871 persons resident in the towns of eastern Windham county have seen Frank Weeden, escaped maniac, during the past 48 hours, and probably as many more will see him today. It was reported late Tuesday afternoon, but almost entirely discredited, that three blind men saw him during the day while they were reading of the hunt that was going on for him in this and adjacent towns. Seeing Frank Weeden has become the most popular pastime of the week. But to inject added zest into the pastime there are those who are telling of the number of children he has killed at Dayville, East Killingly and in other places hereabouts since this paper carried a story Monday morning that he had been seen at the week end in a lonely section near the Chase reservoir. He had only killed six up to Monday afternoon, but had made his score 11 by Tuesday evening. And so it goes.

The fact is that officials in all towns hereabouts are being pestered with reports of excitable people who claim to have seen Weeden. These reports have piled up until they have become an absurdity. Weeden would have to be in 27 places miles apart to make good the reports of all who claim to have seen him. Incidentally, these unfounded reports are a handicap to officers who might have a chance to get him if only reliable reports were sent in.

And to lessen the terror of nervous people all through the territory, it must be recorded that Weeden has not killed any children in Connecticut. These stories are 100 per cent. untrue and the product of exaggerating mentalities that like to be first with big and sensational gossip.

In the town court Tuesday Judge W. Fenner Woodward imposed a fine of $25 and costs, a total of $36.09, on Frank P. Donnelly of New London for reckless operation of a motor vehicle in this town, July 16. Donnelly was caught driving at high speed on that date by State Officer Arthur W. Williams, on the state highway between Attawaugan and Danielson.

A session of the local juvenile court was also held Tuesday afternoon to dispose of a case in which it was established that a local boy 10 years of age was guilty of stealing money from a garage. The boy was ordered committed to the state school for boys at Meriden and will be taken there this morning in charge of State Officer A. W. Williams.

It may be necessary as a warning to careless and reckless drivers to paint the word DEATH in bold letters across the width of the state highway at the top of South Killingly hill. Three times during the present month cars have turned over coming down this long, steep grade, one fatality has resulted, and seven people have been injured.

In each case the cars that figured in the accidents bore registrations of states other than Connecticut—Rhode Island, New Jersey and Massachusetts, a straw pointing to an allowable conclusion that the drivers are unfamiliar with this hill, not regarded as at all dangerous by those who are acquainted with it, providing reasonable caution is exercised.

Publicity and more or less intimate knowledge of the accidents that have occurred on the hill during the past three weeks has resulted in drivers hereabouts being especially careful in coming down this hill, but many hundreds of drivers who know nothing at all about the hill are in danger each week, and will be until warning signs are placed at its top—and the signs will not slow the daredevils down, either.

A. E. Hall, who lives nearly opposite where two of the accidents have occurred this month, says that the nervous strain of watching the reckless operation of cars down this particular hill is almost sufficient to make him decide to sell his place and go somewhere apart—that he may not have to look upon hourly gambling with death on the part of those who ride in motor cars. As Mr. Hall expressed this sentiment while standing beside a machine just wrecked, another car came tearing down the hill at close to 50 miles an hour.

Some sections of Killingly had benefited hardly at all from the showers of the past few days up to Tuesday evening. Crops of corn and potatoes are suffering particularly from the drouth, but beans are doing a little better, everything considered.

A pig was killed by lightning, close by the barn that was struck and destroyed at the Fox farm on Church street Monday afternoon. R. L. Fox, owner of the farm, said the fire spread with such startling rapidity that even rushing from the house immediately upon knowing the barn was hit he could not get out his automobile, which was just inside the door. The barn was covered by insurance, but the contents, including much new machinery and the season's cut of hay, housed only Friday last, was not insured.

All Hallows' Roman Catholic church at Moosup was damaged to the extent of approximately $1,000 when lightning ripped into the spire during an electrical storm Monday afternoon. Supporting beams on the inside were damaged and slate was torn away. The church, of brick, was not set afire. The repair work will require considerable erecting of scaffolding, which will add to the expense.

Rev. J. E. McCarthy of Moosup is spending a time with relatives in Waterbury while he is convalescing from a recent surgical operation performed at a Hartford hospital.

PUTNAM

What the corporation from the outset has called a lockout, and what is former employes have persisted in describing as a strike of Manhasset company workers, will enter its 13th week today with a program on the part of those who are holding out to reawaken public interest in this long-drawn-out industrial strife.

Archie J. Gauthier, who has come here from Baltic as successor to Oliver Christian, who directed the strike up to two weeks ago, said Tuesday that the strikers are arranging a series of open air mass meetings at which the public and especially textile operatives in other plants will have an opportunity to hear the history of the strike since its inception and many details pertaining to the affair that will be of general interest to the public. Possibly the first meeting will be held Sunday next, but this had not been definitely determined Tuesday.

Significant, too, is the presence in the city of Robert M. McWade, United the department of labor. Mr. McWade a man of broad and varied experience as a conciliator specializing in textile controversies, has had interviews with mill officials, it is known, but Mr. McWade declined when interviewed Tuesday to make any statement as to the progress of negotiations, saying that such information would have to come either from mill company officials or from the department he represents at Washington, to which his report will be made.

Mr. Gauthier, who is president of the Connecticut Textile council, expressed himself as satisfied with the Putnam local's strategic position and asserted that those who are out on strike already have won a moral victory. While the mill has continued to operate throughout the strike in a restricted way, he pointed out, it is not doing business under normal conditions, and, he claimed, is not getting the necessary skilled workers from other places made vacants by the strikers. Mr. Gauthier allowed that places of some of the strikers had been filled by recruits obtained in local and sub-local territory.

Mr. Gauthier pointed out that pickets of the strikers are daily on duty and keep a careful check on the workers at the plant.

Asked as to what the strike leaders would do in bringing together the strikers who have scattered to take re-employment in the Manhasset mill in case a satisfactory settlement was arrived at, Mr. Gauthier said that at least 150 of those who went out on strike are engaged in more or less temporary occupations here, and in nearby territory and that these would return immediately if a settlement satisfactory to them is obtained.

At present, strike benefits are being paid to about 125 persons. The American Federation of Textile Operatives, which is financially backing the strikers, has ample funds, Mr. Gauthier said, and can support the local strike indefinitely.

In all of the twelve weeks of the strike the company has offered no concessions to the strikers. That attitude, it was indicated Tuesday, remains unchanged, the company maintaining that its wage scale is as high or higher than those of other mills manufacturing the same lines of goods in this territory.

In the meantime the people of the city generally had lost sight of the strike. The open air mass meetings are expected to bring a revival of public interest and, manifestly, are intended as new and accelerated pressure against the company.

From a neutral standpoint the whole affair is of peculiar interest just now, because of the slump in the cotton textile industry generally in New England and the fact that mills engaged in manufacturing tire fabric and not involved in any labor dispute are curtailing production and working three or four days a week because of lack of business. This situation is admittedly a severe handicap on the strikers.

Thompson youths and children who participated in the sport, will long remember July 23, 1923, as a mid-summer day on which they got out their sleds and spent a few brief hours at the mid-winter sport of coasting.

And few in the territory, no matter the number of their years, can recall a mid-summer storm that brought hail that covered some of Thompson's highways to the depth of seven or eight inches and endured for hours after a wild electrical storm that brought a deluge of rain and hail.

Inspection of gardens and other crop lands in Thompson during Tuesday revealed the extent of the storm damage in this respect. Cucumbers just developed 16 marketing size were beaten to a pulp under the storm of hail, the leaves stripped from the stems and cut to pieces. Squash vines suffered similarly, beans were cut down and corn shredded as though with a knife. Lettuce heads were cut to bits as though they had been run through a meat grinder.

But the coasting that followed the storm was the outstanding feature of a very unusual event. The whole countryside had much the same appearance as after a snowstorm. Connecticut company linemen who were caught in the storm near West Thompson scooped from a few square feet mounds of hailstones that would approximate a bushel. The tracks of the New Haven road were white with hail, the last of which did not disappear until nearly five hours after the end of the storm.

While Thompson was worst hit by the hail, this city got some of it, though no serious damage resulted. Some of the hail here was almost as fine as couse snow. A sharp drop in temperature followed the storm and it was so cool late in the evening that one's breath condensed and showed as vapor, as on a snappy night in fall.

An aftermath of the case of James Smith, colored, and Henry Reil, continued after a hearing in the city court Monday morning, was the appearance, Tuesday morning before the same tribunal of George Bricault, proprietor of the pool room in the north end of the city where a dice game brought on the inception of the affair that brought Reil and Smith before the court.

Reil, who has been under the surveillance of the police for more than a year, pleaded not guilty to a charge of keeping a gaming place, but he was found guilty and sentenced by Judge M. E. Geissler to serve 60 days in jail. Bricault appealed from the decision to the superior court and furnished the $500 bond required for his release.

First Selectman Clarence E. Pierce was shaken up and his son, Raymond, received a gash on the forehead while Raymond Pierce's nurse, Miss Viola Coburn, was slightly injured, Monday evening in a collision between the Pierce car and a machine owned by James Entwestle of 106 School street, this city, out on Killingly avenue. Officer Eugene Gibney, who investigated the accident, found that it occurred when the Entwestle car pulled out to pass another machine and could not get through, the situation resulting in a crash with the Pierce car, which was seriously damaged.

Raymond Pierce, who is convalescing from a serious illness, was the worst hurt of anyone in the machines and his hurts were not of a critical nature. Both machines that figured in the accident were insured.

Solomon Taub, a jewelr doing business in New York and a resident at 1282 Madison avenue that city, died Tuesday morning of injuries he received a week ago when the horse he was driving bolted when a shaft of the vehicle broke and the horse bolted on the state highway in East Thompson. Taub suffered fatal internal injuries in the accident and is believed to have been kicked by the horse. Three children who were riding with Taub were injured only in a minor way. Taub was spending a vacation with his sister's family at East Thompson. The body was forwarded to New York for burial.

This city was flooded with many wild rumors, Tuesday, of deaths of little girls and boys, in Killingly, at the hands of Frank Weeden, escaped maniac who has been intensively hunted by state police and posses of citizens for the past four days, many miles of nearby territory having been scoured for him without success. Each and every one of the stories told here about further desperate deeds of Weeden since he is supposed to have come into this territory are wholly without foundation. Soo, too, are 95 per cent of the stories of persons having seen him here, there and everywhere within a radius of 20 miles. The Weeden case serves as an opportunity for many publicity seekers to step into the limelight for a minute and if all their yarns are to be believed there are more one-eyed men roaming about adjacent territory just now than a Elm eye factory could outfit running 24 hours a day for the next seven weeks, providing glass eyes are factory-made.

There is little excuse within the city for the terror that Weeden's presence in adjacent territory has induced. Frank Weeden is like a hunted animal and will not likely venture into thickly populated sections. His game is to keep under cover, and he is doing that very well if he is still in Windham county.

Up to Tuesday, subscribers had taken 172 shares of the 16th series of the Putnam Building and Loan association. Indications are that this series will be made up of well over 200 shares before it is closed.

John B. Byrne returned here Tuesday after representing Connecticut as state bank commissioner at a congress of bankers from all parts of the United States during the past week. Commissioner Byrne will take up the duties of his office again today (Wednesday.)

Nathan Eccleston was in Worcester Tuesday, on a business trip.

Major Horace L. Manchester, quartermaster in the military department of the state of Rhode Island, came to Westerly Tuesday noon from Providence and visited the state armory on Dixon street. In his survey of the state property it was decided to proceed at once with the installation of heating for the supply room on the second floor on the north side of the main building, which was considered a year ago. Another matter to receive the quartermaster's attention was the disposition of the large rifle and shield which has lain on the lawn in front of the armory for several months. Major Manchester, in whose charge all the armories of the state are placed—with the exception of the Cranston street armory and the armory of mounted commands in Providence—has practically made up his mind that the big gun should not be carried into and erected in the drill shed's northeast corner, as first planned. It is stated that, too much of the valuable floor space would be taken up. The matter of locating the rifle was taken up on Tuesday afternoon with Capt. Christie McConnell, commanding the 349th Co., C. A. C., which occupies the armory. Later in the afternoon Major Manchester and Capt. McConnell visited the rifle range at Burdens pond, where the state will spend some of its funds in placing the range in proper condition.

Requiem high mass was sung Tuesday at 9 o'clock by Rev. Fr. J. J. Fitzgerald at St. Michael's church for Miss Esther A. Lynch, who died Saturday at the Rhode Island hospital in Providence. The bearers were J. C. Coffey, George Ford, Edward Coogan, Arthur Brown, Vincent Karkavish and Arthur Hult, all of the ticket force of the New Haven railroad station, who came to Westerly Tuesday morning on the New England express. For a number of years Miss Lynch has been an accountant at the New Haven ticket office of the New Haven railroad. A few weeks ago illness caused her return to her home at 113 Mechanic street and that was followed by her removal to the hospital ten days ago. She was born in Pawcatuck, the daughter of the late John and Mary Conners Lynch. She is survived by four sisters, Annie, Beatrice and Katherine Lynch and Mrs. James McKenna, all of Westerly.

The Westerly band will give the fifth concert in the summer series Thursday evening, July 26th, at 8 o'clock in Wilcox park. The program will be as follows:

March, Second Connecticut, Reeves
Overture, Poet and Peasant, Suppe
Waltzes, Remembrances, Fahrbach

A meeting of the officers of the Interstate Amateur Baseball League was held in Pawcatuck Monday evening. The player lists of the various teams were gone over to insure a full fourteen on each roster. It seemed the sentiment of the various managers that a double-header game on Saturday was more desirable than to play a twilight game during the week, in case the regular scheduled game was interfered with by rain or other cause. Inasmuch as but one game was played last Saturday, it was thought best to place the unplayed games on the week following the schedule as originally planned. As made up, the schedule calls for each team to play six games in all, three on their home grounds and three away. Following the completion of the schedule the winning team in each section will play a series with each of the others, to decide the championship of the league.

The committee in charge were Ransom Young of Bethel, J. F. Gardner of Voluntown and Miss Christine Burdick, Frank Mell, Irving Thornton and Edward Thornton, of Jewett City. Each Sunday school provided sandwiches and cake for its own members, while the ice cream, lemonade and paper plates and cups were provided by the different Sunday schools. MOTORISTS KEEP NEW LONDON COURT BUSY HANDING OUT PENALTIES

New London, July 24.—Walter Moshier of Noank is a patient at Lawrence hospital here, having been admitted this morning for injuries sustained when he fell from a staging at the Noank shipyard. Moshier's injuries are confined to his shoulder.

Carl Kahler, No. 143 Shaw street, employed in the freight service of the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad, reported to the police this afternoon that his kayak had been stolen from the end of wharf on Howard street. Kahler tied up the craft about 9 o'clock last night and this morning it was missing.

The police have not yet arrested the thief who entered the home of David Esty, No. 12 Methodist street, Monday during the absence of the family and stole $400 belonging to Harry Simmons, a lodger, from its place of hiding in a bureau drawer. Upon the information obtained the police are inclined to believe that the theft is an "inside" job, for only acquaintances of Simmons and such as knew of the money being in the bureau, could have taken the man's savings.

David Appleby of Saybrook, who was struck by an automobile, owned and driven by Jesse Maynard on Bank street extension Sunday night and who received numerous bruises, left Lawrence hospital this afternoon and returned home.

William E. Butterfield has sold a house and lot on Williams street to Arthur J. and Eva M. Dellice.

A bicycle owned by Joseph Keenan, son of Mr. and Mrs. Matthew Keenan of No. 144 Winthrop street, was stolen this morning from the basement of Saltonstall school, where the youth had left it temporarily.

The police this afternoon received a complaint from the chamber of commerce that youths had caused damage to gardens of Williams street residents. The owners of the garden, however, did not make known to the authorities the exact damage alleged to have been perpetrated.

The funeral of Katherine J., wife of Thomas G. Haney, was held this morning at 9 o'clock at St. Joseph's church. A mass of requiem was celebrated by Rev. William C. Fitzsimons, rector. The bearers were William T. May, Dennis Shea, John G. Cagnon, James R. May, Michael J. Sullivan and Thomas C. Dillon. The body was forwarded to Lisbon, for burial in St. Mary's cemetery.

Funeral services for Miss Sarah E. Huntley, whose death occurred at the Smith Memorial home Sunday, were held this afternoon at 3 o'clock at St. James' Episcopal church, Rev. Philip M. Derridge, rector of the church, officiating. Burial was in Cedar Grove cemetery.

Mrs. M. A. Batson of Manchester, Conn., was arrested this morning by Sergeant Nelson Smith, when Mrs. Batson violated the traffic regulations in turning her car around on State street. She will be presented in the police court tomorrow morning, being allowed her liberty on her own recognizance. Mrs. Batson was operating her car between Bank and Main streets and when the machine reached the northerly end of the safety zone, she guided her car to the opposite side of the street and headed in the opposite direction. In doing so, the machine struck Angelo Santimatteo of No. 21 Shaw street, a passing stew. Santimatteo did not consult a physician, but claimed to have injured his back.

John May, nine-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur May, of Montauk avenue, who was struck and bruised by an automobile at Westerly ten days ago, was able to leave Lawrence hospital today and return home.

There was considerable automobile business in the police court this forenoon, and there is to be more of it tomorrow. Jacob Lazarow of Blackhall street was fined $25 for recklessness in running down the automobile of Howard Beebe in Hempstead street yesterday. Mr. Beebe had turned his car and was over on the right side when Lazarow came down Mallwaring hill and started up Hempstead street at a rate that must have been, as the boys say, going some, for his car burned the road for a distance of some 50 feet before it could be stopped, notwithstanding it had collided with the Beebe car. Officers Hammond and Cavanaugh were called and measured the distance, as shown by the wheels of the Lazarow car on the macadam surface. Then Mr. Lazarow, while contending that he was not driving fast, insisted that he was 75 feet away from the Beebe car when he applied his brakes. There was no longer any doubt as to whether Lazarow was reckless. He proved it by his own testimony. He didn't have his operating license even when in court, but he was not prosecuted for that.

John C. Kelsey of Waterbury was fined $5 for allowing his automobile to be parked more than a foot away from the curbing on State street. A state law governs this offense.

Edward Ludorf had neither registration nor an operating license, when apprehended by an officer. He said the car came from New York and that though he had been in Connecticut two months he had not secured registration nor the right to operate the car in this state. That cost Ludorf $20 and the costs of his trial.

A. Harrison was charged with disregarding signals given him by Traffic Officer Graham, but he explained that he did not understand the signal and was released without penalty.

Mrs. Jennie Lyons Stebbins is confined to the house with a broken arm sustained by a fall at her home. She was formerly matron at the county jail in this city and is over 70 years of age.

The automobile of Police Sergeant Samuel Hick was damaged this noon when in collision with a machine, owned and operated by Perry Rogers of East Lyme, employed by the East Lyme Power company. Rogers was arrested by Patrolman Carlos Selesnitsky, charged with operating his automobile while intoxicated. Rogers was locked up, but this evening his father came to New London and furnished a bond of $100 for the accused's appearance in the police court tomorrow morning, also took possession of the automobile. Sergeant Hick's automobile bore the brunt of the collision. Rogers' machine got only a bent headlight. Sergeant Hick was operating his automobile in a southerly direction on Bank street, between Lee and Ocean avenues. When nearing Ocean avenue the automobile operated by Rogers and headed in a southerly direction came along. There was ample room for the two cars to pass in safety, but Rogers' machine was operated to the left side of the highway and side-swiped the police sergeant's car.

City Manager James E. Barlow this afternoon instructed the police to allow automobiles to park on the west side of Bank street between State and Golden streets, but thirty minutes after 6 o'clock p. m. until 6 o'clock a. m. except Sundays, also to allow automobiles to park on that section of State street, between Meridian and Huntington streets for a period of two hours from 6 a. m. until 6 p. m. Sundays automobiles, he informed the police, may be allowed to park throughout the evening. There is an ordinance in effect at present allowing automobiles to park on Bank street every night indefinitely and on State street but thirty minutes.

Glassman was arrested by Sergeant Samuel Hick, and charged with reckless driving. When at a point in front of the headquarters of the Niagara Engine Company the car skidded on wet pavements.

The boy wore brown trousers, long blue coat and blue cap when he went away from home yesterday forenoon. The youth, who is five feet, two inches, has been at the state reform school at Meriden, but was discharged some time ago.

The boys attending Sunday school at the B. F. Learned mission enjoyed an outing today in Waterford, for Supt. Richard W. Mansfield provided a day of athletics and feasting for the youngsters. About fifty made the trip by automobile.

Y., was ordered into court by Traffic Officer John Courtney for parking on Bank street longer than thirty minutes. Harold E. Brown of No. 444 Central street, Springfield, Mass., was summoned to court by Patrolman Clyde Murphy for parking on State street for a period longer than is allowed. William F. Kerrigan of New Haven was ordered into court by Patrolman Clyde Murphy for parking his automobile away from the curb on State street, as was Mrs. Isaac Bishop of No. 340 Hempstead street. Miss Goldie Forse of Hartford, visiting at Ocean beach, was ordered into court by Patrolman Edward Daniels for failing to have her operator's license signed, the license not having the young lady's signature although she has been operating a car two years. Harry Hodsen of Niantic was notified by Patrolman Clyde Murphy to present himself in court for parking his car on State street longer than thirty minutes, as was Clarence M. Shay of No. 19 Mott avenue.

Dr. John N. Dimes, a practicing physician in New London the past forty years, is to take up his residence in Waterford about the middle of August. He recently disposed of his house on Montauk avenue and will locate just over the New London boundary where he will have a country residence that will be to his liking.

Some one with a view to the future might purchase land somewhere along the line of the New London or Norwich trolley where circuses could make use of it for show purposes. The rental from a couple of circuses each year would yield a handsome return on the investment, and the land might be used for other purposes often when the circuses came as early in the season as they came this year. In many cities the trolley roads have such a field close to their lines and reap a good return.

NORTH STERLING

The Danielson correspondent in The Bulletin of July 16 hits the nail on the head when he said "Wanted—More fox hunters in the rural districts." We not only need more fox hunters but fewer bird hunters and rabbit hunters. Only a few years ago any hunter could secure a good dinner of partridge and rabbit for his family in a few hours. The foxes have increased to that extent that it is seldom the cottontail of gray rabbit can be found in a day's hunt. Unless we have more fox hunters the partridge and the gray rabbit which used to be so numerous will be things of the past. The bounty on a fox should be $10 in every town, for the safety of the game of Connecticut.

Mrs. Ralph Winthers is visiting relatives in Brooklyn, N. Y.

30 industrials averaged 90.16, net loss 1.42. High 1923, 105.29; low, 87.64.

20 railroads averaged 78.45, net loss .53. High, 1933, 80.63; low, 76.85.

MARKET WAS DULL.

New York, July 24.—Lack of buying support in the early hours today encouraged short selling in a wide assortment of stocks and gave today's stock market a distinctly heavy tone.

No news was construed as bad news among professional traders who seemed less cheerful over progress toward settlement of European problems and inclined to be pessimistic over prospect for improved earnings by western railroads.

The result was recessions of from 1 to nearly three points over a large portion of the list. Great Northern preferred dipped to 61 1-8 a new low record for the year and closed 1 1-2 points lower on the day at 62, Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul preferred closed 2 1-2 points lower and more than a dozen rail stocks were off a point or more.

Steels and equipments came in for a large share of the selling, Baldwin dropping 3 1-8, Crucible 2 3-8, and the preferred 3, Bethlehem 2, U. S. Steel 1 1-8 and American Locomotive 1 1-8. American Car closed 2 1-2 points off on the day.

The Pan Americans led the decline in oils, the A stock falling off 2 7-8 and the B, 3 1-2. Associated Oil moved 2 points lower and California Petroleum 1 1-4. Losses among a miscellaneous list of industrials and specialties included Stromberg Carburetor, 3 1-8, Central Leather preferred 3 1-2, and Dupont 4 1-4. Declines of 1 to 2 3-4 points wee recoredder 1 to 2 3-4 points were recorded by American Woolen, Studebaker, Stewart Warner, American Smelting, Burns Bros., A and Cuyamel Fruit.

Call money ruled at 4 3-4 per cent. throughout the day. The time money market was quiet with brokers bidding freely at 5 per cent. and lenders holding out for 5 1-4. Commercial paper was scarce with prime names worth 5 per cent., and others slightly higher.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET.

Chicago, July 24.—Wheat dropped in price today to within a fraction of the lowest prices reached thus far by the 1928 crop. Weakness of the New York stock market had much to do with the lowering of values here. Wheat closed unsetled at 1 3-4 to 2 cents net decline, with September 96 7-8 to 97 cents and December 100 to 100 1-8. Corn finished at a range varying from 3-4 cent off to a share advance. Oats 1-3@1-4 to 3-4 cent down and provisions unchanged to a setback of 15 cents.

From the outset, pressure to sell was evident in the wheat market. A sharp decline in Liverpool quotations tended to emphasize the effect of bearish views expressed by a leading Chicago banker as to the outlook for improved trade with Europe. In addition, the downward course of securities in Wall street put wheat bulls at a decided disadvantage and although hedging sales of newly harvested wheat during the first part of the day were only moderate, the market later felt the weight of persistent commission house selling and of increased hedging, as well as unloading on the part of early buyers.

The fact that receipts of wheat at Chicago were again heavy, in contrast with exceptional smallness of arrivals in the southwest and west, where farm organizations are striving to have as much wheat as possible stored on farms, was apparently responsible for some of the selling pressure here and so too, was slowness of export demand. Announcement that harvesting had already begun in the Canadian Northwest with weather favorable and a big yield in prospect, was effective also in depriving the market here of support.

Corn and oats sympathized with wheat weakness. At one stage, however, July corn touched a new high price record for the season, 87 1-4 cents.

Provisions were depressed by downturns in the value of hogs.

BOND MARKET.

New York, July 24.—Trading in bonds today was dull and at somewhat lower prices. High grade investment issued practically stood still but some of the more speculative bonds, particularly among the rails, were quite active in mid-afternoon.

Norfolk & Westgrn convertible 6s sold 2 points lower, and losses of a point or more were recorded by Frisco income 6s, Minneapolis & St. Louis refunding 4s, Chicago Great Western 4s, and Erie prior lien 4s. Chicago Railway 5s were off 1 3-8 and Third Avenue adjustment 5s yielded 1 3-4. Illinois Central 5 1-2s moved up a point.

Industrial liens generally were quiet with Magma Copper 7s falling off 2 points, Cerro De Pasco 8s, 1 7-8, Public Service of New Jersey 5s, 1 1-2, and Midvale Steel convertible 5s, 1.

With the exception of the treasury 4 1-4s, which improved slightly, active U. S. government bonds were reactionary. Losses, however, were confined to 2-32 of a point. South American bonds were in fair demand, Bolivian 8s gaining 1 1-4. French issues sold slightly lower, after showing early strength.

CURB MARKET.

New York, July 24.—Short selling, starting in the oil group, undermined prices in today's curbs market and turned the entire list heavy.

Imperial Oil and Prairie Oil & Gas lost 3 points each, and losses of a point each were recorded by Magnolia Petroleum, Maracaibo, and Standard Oils of Kentucky and Nebraska. Standards of New York, Kansas and Indiana receded fractionally.

Reading Coal rights, when issued, was the only strong feature of the industrial group. That stock climbed to a new high at 21 7-8 and closed a point higher on the day at 21 1-2. Glen Alden Coal slumped 1 3-4 and the motors were fractionally lower.

Trading in the mining group was at somewhat lower prices but net changes were relatively unimportant.

METAL MARKET.

New York, July 24.—Copper steady; electrolytic, spot and futures 14 3-4. Tin easy. Spot and nearby 39.75; futures 39.62. Iron steady; prices unchanged. Lead steady; spot 6.25. Zinc steady. East St. Louis spot and nearby delivery 6.10. Antimony, spot 7.00@7.20.

MONEY.

New York, July 24.—Call money steady; high 4 3-4; low 4 3-4; ruling rate 4 3-4; closing bid 4 3-4; offered at 5; last loan 4 3-4; call loans against acceptances 4 1-4.

COTTON.

New York, July 24.—Cotton—Spot quiet; middling 24.65.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Breed Theatre.

When "The Great Night," a William Fox photoplay starring William Russell, comes to the Breed theatre today and Thursday, the patrons of the theatre will see Russell at his best, according to advance reports. The story written by Joseph F. Poland, gives Russell all the opportunities he could desire to display his histronic ability.

In this picture Russell is cast as the son of a millionaire jeweler. His father dies and according to the terms of the will the young man must marry within a month. Desiring to escape the numerous offers of matrimony which follow the announcement of the contents of the will, the heir seeks out his friend the police commissioner and obtains employment as a patrolman. Russell is rapidly leaving behind the western pictures in which he was formerly featured and is fast becoming familiarly identified with the modern type of story.

Howard M. Mitchell directed the production.

For the second feature Shirley Mason will be seen in the delightful comedy drama entitled "Shirley of the Circus," and Movie Chats will complete the bill.

MONTFORD

CORD TIRES

Once again we want to preach the GOSPEL OF QUALITY. The best is the cheapest in the long run. First cost in a tire is unimportant, it is the cost-per-mile, freedom from trouble and long, uninterrupted service, which should be the deciding factors in purchasing tires.

We believe in the MONTFORD tire, in the people who make it, and in the old-fashioned, sterling principle of honest merchandise.

We could sell you cheaper tires—but we won't. We have lived in Norwich all our lives—and prospered. The GOOD WILL of loyal, satisfied customers is our chief asset. We want to perpetually enjoy this GOOD WILL and try to earn it—by always giving full value for money received—and MORE whenever possible

In offering you MONTFORD tires, on our wholesale-direct-to-the-public plan, we honestly, sincerely believe that a better tire value does not exist. If there was a better one—we would have it.

Of forty manufacturers of quality cars the two cars leading in sales are priced at $2885 and $2685; the Paige at $2450. What difference is there to justify the extra price? Check Paige points against these competitors—and you will realize that never before has $2450 bought such a car.

131-Inch Wheelbase 5-Foot Springs

Paige has a wheelbase of 131 inches—providing roomy comfort and roadability. Riding ease rarely equaled is assured by rear springs more than 5 feet long. Check against costlier cars! Paige leads in comfort.

More Power for Weight

Mark Paige piston displacement—compare it with others. Here is reserve power for all needs. Paige weight is 3850 pounds, yet the ratio to piston displacement is only 11.4 pounds per cubic inch. This low ratio is why Paige out-performs its competitors—climbs hills easier and at lower speed—gets away faster. Compare it in the chart—nearly two pounds less per cubic inch—15% more ability!

Easy Handling

With a driving range of 2 to 70 miles an hour in high there is small need of gear shifting, though it's done without clash or missing. Steering is easy for the frailest hand.

You wouldn't compare a car with three wheels to a car with four wheels, in relation to their prices. So Paige must be compared as to equipment with what its competitors would cost you if similarly equipped.

What Is Equipment?

Note the twelve items of equipment in the chart above—all things which you would eventually buy for any car. Paige has them all! One competitor has only three of them—and the other five—least costly items. Calculate the cost of this equipment, and see how much more you get in the Paige.

Why Paige Can Be Sold at $2450

Tremendous volume on our smaller car—the Paige-built Jewett—reduces overhead on Paige cars to a negligible amount. This saving makes the Paige price possible. With the Jewett—Paige builds twice as many cars as either competitor shown on the chart. Under any other conditions Paige with its present high standards could not be sold for less than $3000.

To fully appreciate Paige—see the car—drive it. Call or telephone for a demonstration at your convenience. If desired—payment terms may be arranged.

THE REVERIE OF POOR SUSAN.

At the corner of Wood Street, when daylight appears,
Hangs a Thrush that sings loud, it has sung there for years:
Poor Susan has passed by the spot, and has heard
In the silence of morning the song of the bird.

'Tis a note of enchantment; what ails her? She sees
A mountain ascending, a vision of trees;
Bright volumes of vapor through Lothbury glide,
And a river flows on through the vale of Cheapside.

Green features the views in the midst of the dale
Down which she so often has tripped with her pail;
And a single small cottage, a nest like a dove's,
The one only dwelling on earth that she loves.

She looks, and her heart is in heaven: but they fade,
The mist and the river, the hill and the shade;
The stream will not flow, and the hill will not rise,
And the colors have all pass'd away from her eyes!

—William Wordsworth.

THE MASTERPIECE.

My window frames the loveliest things—
A sweep of meadow land,
A flash of black and yellow wings,
Dim, distant dunes of sand;

White sails upon a cobalt bay,
Green galleons of boughs
That over wind waves toss and sway,
And skyward point their prows.

The rain may fall, the sun may shine,
But charm is always there,
Within this gallery of mine
The picture's ever fair.

And sometimes dawn's the hoiliest hour,
And sometimes hush of noon,
Or when a star begins to flower

Ah, you may go where genius flames,
And critics bow the knee,
But every day my window frames
A masterpiece for me!
—Anne P. L. Lloyd, in New York Herald.

CHURCH GETS INJUNCTION AGAINST BUILDING ON ENGINE HOUSE LAND

On an application from Trinity Methodist Episcopal church of this city, Judge Christopher L. Avery of the superior court granted a temporary injunction Tuesday against Abraham Abelman of this city to restrain him from building on a 6-foot strip of land on Main street adjoining the church. The injunction holds until further order of court. The land is between the church and the former Main street fire engine house which Abelman recently bought from the city.

At the time the engine house was for sale, the church put in a bid for it, but Abelman bid more and obtained the property. Since he became the owner, he has erected a brick addition on the 6-foot strip of land, running the addition up two stories on the rear for about half the depth of the building, but the front half is only built up to the height of the basement. This furnished an approach to the doorway to the addition and has an iron railing along the side.

In applying for the injunction the church claimed that the original deed in which the church conveyed the property to the city in 1856 contained the provision that the strip of land should not be built upon in order that the church might have it open for air, light and egress in case of fire.

It is understood that the deed of the engine house property from the city to Abelman conveyed it "subject to such rights as appear of record."

Judge Avery gave the hearing on the injunction in chambers at New London, Tuesday morning.

Attorney Hibberd R. Norman of Norwich represented the applicant and Attorneys A. B. Davies and Charles V. James of Norwich were counsel for the respondent.

GIVES STATE PRAISE FOR RAISING MILITIA QUOTA

One of the infantry regiments in this state, either the 169th or 170th, will be re-designated the 102nd, it became known Tuesday. Adjutant Gen. George M. Cole mentioned this fact at a dinner of the 170th regimental line and staff complimentary to the 169th officers at New Haven Monday night.

General Cole said the war department is holding open the designation. Colonel Green of the general staff, Washington, has urged an early decision as to the selection. Col. Creed E. Hammond said that Connecticut leads the country in the raising of its quota of militia. He added: "I want to tell you, gentlemen, that the Connecticut national guard stands exceedingly high at Washington, and I can really see why you are able to accomplish such fine results by observing the spirit which has prompted this affair tonight."

He paid a glowing tribute to General Cole and his expeditious manner of handling the state's troops.

The son, who is janitor at a young ladies seminary at Bloomfield, N. J., represented to the court that he is his father's sole heir and is heir to the real estate. He was represented by attorney Roderick M. Douglass, in whose hands the court placed the settlement of the estate after the matter had been thoroughly discussed.

FORESTRY ASSOCIATION IS MAKING PRIZE OFFER

The Connecticut Forestry association offers a prize of $25 for the best thinning in any hardwood stand in the state of Connecticut, to be awarded not later than June 1, 1924.

Conditions: The area of the thinned stand must be at least one-half acre. The thinning must be made before April 16, 1924. Contestants must be bona fide residents of Connecticut. Any contestants may enter more than one separate stand under his or her name. At least three contestants must be entered if this prize is to be awarded.

Contestants should submit a statement showing the amount of wood removed in the thinning, its disposition, and the return received therefrom, as well as a statement showing the cost of the operation. A small area should be left unthinned to afford a contrast to the thinned area.

In awarding the prize, the method of making the thinning, the utilization of the material, cleaning up of slash, cost and return of the operation and the resulting condition in the remaining stand will all be considered.

All stands entered for the competition will be examined and judged by the thinning committee of the Connecticut Forestry association, consisting of Ralph C. Hawley, New Haven, James L. Goodwin, Hartford, and George M. Myers of Union. Such examination will be between March 1, 1924, and May 15, 1924. Contestants may be called upon to show the thinned stands to the committee.

Entry of stands into this competition should be made to the secretary of the association, 360 Prospect street, New Haven, Conn.

BERT LUCAS WILL SEE RECEPTION TO HARDING

Herbert W. Lucas of this city, who has been away on a trip in the west since about the middle of January, is in Seattle, Wash., this week, where he will witness the events attending the reception to President Harding. He writes The Bulletin as follows:

"Victoria, the capitol of British Columbia, is one of the oldest cities on the Pacific coast. It has 135 miles of concrete walks, 65 miles of boulevards, 120 miles of sewers, 134 miles of water mains, 70 miles of paved streets, 20 miles of street railway lines and 100 miles of gravel roads. Victoria has the finest street lighting system in British Columbia, the assessed value of land is over $46,000,000, the school enrollment is 6,000 and there are about 60,000 inhabitants. It has one of the best fresh water supplies in the west, the water being brought through concrete pipes from Sook Lake, resting in the hills 95 miles out. Victoria is the first port of call for ships engaged in the trans-Pacific trade and operating between Puget Sound and California. The port has direct steamship connection with all important Pacific countries and the harbor has less fog than any other on the coast. It has dock facilities capable of serving the largest steamships afloat, and is only three miles from Esquinalt, one of the largest harbors in the British empire, where what will be the world's largest dry dock is now under construction. Victoria is regarded as the most beautiful residential city in Canada. It is the terminus of several of the great scenic automobile routes of the Pacific seaboard.

"The principal industries of the city are steel and wooden ship construction, ship repairing, fruit preserving, rice and flour milling, manufacturing of cereal foods, paints, roofing and soap making. The bank clearings a year ago were $156,777,690.

"Its parks total more than 13,000 acres. Not over 60 years ago Victoria was laid out as a town, yet the city may justly claim the distinction of being one of the oldest circles of population on the Pacific seaboard. Vancouver Island was one of the first spots on the great western ocean to be visited by explorers, and it was familiar to the adventurers of those early days when California was still under the dominion of the Spanish dons and Indian tribes.

"Victoria, then known as Gamasum, was the seat of a flourishing trading post of the Hudson's Bay company, where Indians brought furs and skins for exchange for rifles, trinkets and blankets. For many years Victoria held, without competition, the key to trade of the north Pacific. It was through Victoria that the great movement of fortune seekers made its way in the days of the Cariboo gold rush.

"Victoria once had control of the great prairies and also Ontario and even today the fisheries and salmon canneries are still operated from Victoria, although expansion has led to decentralization. The city, however, lies in the heart of a district offering great opportunities for development of great basic industries.

"The climate of the city has also tended to make it famous, the weather being described as like that of southern England, without the east winds. The winters are mild and even, with practically no snow. Spring arrives early and the summer is dry and warm, but never excessively hot. The atmosphere is fresh and clear, warmed by the Japanese current. Thunder storms are virtually unknown. Sheltered by coastal ranges there is less rainfall here than in other cities, most of the moisture comes from the ocean. The city is known as the City of Sunshine, the average daily light being 16.2 hours for the year. The average temperature is 49 degrees, the highest for a period of 6 years 85 degrees and the lowest 20 above zero. The rainfall averages 24 inches yearly.

"Nearby is one of the largest telescopes in the world. Here automobile drivers are not allowed to cross the border unless they show their registration, also the makers' name on the car, and it is well for everyone to have credentials while crossing.

"If your auto remains in Canada less than 30 days a touring permit is obtainable. Canadian custom officials at the port of entry allow the car to be run in the Dominion without securing a custom bond or depositing duty. If more than 30 days' stay is planned in Canada a customs bond rated for six months must be obtained, granting the permission to return within that period. A Canadian registration must be secured, also a license.

"In order to bring the car back into the United States duty free on the return journey it must be registered with the American customs office, at the international border when leaving the United States, and a certificate of export obtained.

"Victoria has some very fine picture houses, also vaudeville houses, but I have told you enough of the city. I took in the Dempsey fight and it was fine. Gibbons is a great fighter and in time can whip Dempsey, I think. It was a fizzle as far as the crowd went, only a few thousand being there. I went up on the Great Northern special that left Seattle at 2 a. m. and arrived there at 1 a. m. July 4th. I think Gibbons had the shade in five rounds. He was foxy as he has never been floored, but the fifteenth looked like it but he kept clinching and was good at it, Dempsey failing to floor him.

"I expect to see quite a time here in Seattle July 26 to 28. The fleet will be here and President Harding will inspect the fleet on July 27th. There will be ball games at the Woodland Park for the supremacy of the fleet, the prize a big silver cup, and I'll be there to see the games. There is a big play at the Stadium called Americanis, which will be enacted by 10,000 actors, the scenery costing $250,000. It is a gigantic production of great American events in history. We will live again in the days of Washington, the Civil war, Roosevelt, and will see real battles. Sophie Breslau, the celebrated opera star, sings each evening. The tickets sell from $1.00 up and the stadium seats 65,000, and will be filled every evening and afternoon for a week.

"It's a wonderful piece of work, 200 dancing girls in it. President Harding will be there on July 27th and I've a seat engaged.

"President Harding has been received out here with enthusiasm. In Tacoma, Wash., 35,000 people stood up in the rain in the stadium to hear his address, and it rained all day. He will be received here with great demonstrations and they are making great plans for his coming and I will be there that week when I will go up to Vancouver where the golden ale flows."

SERVED IN CIVAL WAR AFTER NORWICH ENLISTMENT

William Bogue, a lifelong resident of Hamburg and the last of the Civil War veterans of Lyme, died at his home Saturday afternoon aged 79 years. Mr. Bogue suffered a severe shock several years ago from which he never recovered.

He enlisted with the 26th regiment, Connecticut Volunteers, at Norwich, and soon after sailed for New Orleans. His regiment was in the siege of Port Hudson when so many of his comrades met death. He was so severely wounded and carried a bullet in his leg that he received in that memorable battle. After the war he engaged in farming and was very successful until his health failed him. His wife, Nancy Miller, died several years ago. He leaves two children, William, who lived with him, and Mrs. Frank Saunders of Old Lyme, several grandchildren and three sisters, Mrs. Frank N. Hall, Mrs. Nancy Slate and Mrs. Melendor Tooker of Hamburg.

The funeral was held Tuesday afternoon.

Jack Goes to Gooseville.

Now as soon as the boat landed on the beach in the last story, Little Jack Rabbit helped the lovely princess to alight, but just as they were starting off for the castle a voice called out:

"Oh, beautiful princess, will you not give me the little blue flower at your feet?"

The lovely princess stooped and plucking the little blue flower from its stem, ran down to the water's edge. No sooner had the fish swam up to the shore and taken it in his mouth when wonderful to tell, he turned into a handsome prince!

And goodness me! Wasn't the princess surprised? Well, I just guess she was. As for Little Jack Rabbit, he wasn't in the least. Oh, my, no! He had seen so many strange things lately that nothing surprised him any more.

Well, after that, he left the little princess with the handsome prince and again started on his journeys. Soon he came to Gooseville, which was surrounded by a high wall.

As soon as the old goose sentinel let Little Jack Rabbit through the gate he locked it at once so that nobody else could get in.

"Have you ever been to the Country of the Gods?" asked the old goose sentinel turning to the little bunny boy.

"No, but I've read the book called the 'Wind Wagon' which tells all about that wonderful land," answered the little rabbit boy.

"All our geese are the great, great, great grandchildren of those famous geese who once saved Rome," explained the old sentinel goose.

"You don't say so!" replied the bunny boy, sitting down to pull off one of his shoes and shaking out a little stone that hurt his toes dreadfully.

"Yes, I certainly do," answered the old goose sentinel. "Come with me and I'll show you a very fine statue," and leading the bunny boy down the street, presently they came to a little park in the middle of which stood a big marble goose squirting water out of his bill, and, now dear, boys and girls, you must wait until tomorrow to hear what happened after that.

SENATOR JOHNSON HOLDS UNITED STATES SHOULD STAY OUT OF THE WORLD COURT AND HAVE FOREIGN POLICY ISSUE IN 1924

Views Voiced at a Dinner in New York Given by Men Who Supported the Late Theodore Roosevelt in His Progressive Party Campaign For the Presidency in 1912—Senator Johnson Declared Nobody in Europe Cares a Rap For the International Court—Many Europeans Expect the United States Can Be Lured Into the Court and Full Participation in European Affairs.

New York, July 25.—(By the A. P.)—Senator Hiram Johnson of California declared tonight that America should stay out of the world court and insisted that the nation's foreign policy should be decided at the polls in 1924.

Senator Johnson who returned Monday from Europe where he talked with leading statesmen of many countries, expressed his views at a dinner given in his honor by a committee composed largely of men who supported the late Theodore Roosevelt in his third party campaign for the presidency in 1912.

The chairman of the committee giving the dinner was Colonel Rhinelander Waldo, while George Henry Payne, active in state republican politics and a campaign manager for Roosevelt, was vice chairman. Mayor Hylan of New York, whose administration is supported by newspapers owned and published by William Randolph Hearst, was among the guests.

Others on the committee included Colonel John J. Byrne, Marcus Loew, Charles M. Schwab, Louis Evan Shipman, Congressman A. B. Rossdal, Colonel Thomas L. Miller, Walter S. Dryfoos, August Heckscher and E. F. Albee.

Many friends of the senator have boomed him as a presidential candidate next year and it was noted with interest that his views on America's entrance into the world court directly clashed with those set forth by President Harding.

"Nobody in Europe cares a rap for the international court," Senator Johnson declared. "Many may care very much whether we get into it. No body expects the world court to solve any provocative international problems; but many expect if the United States can be lured into it, the United States is on the way not only to the league of nations but to full participation in European affairs."

Court Will Not Prevent Wars

"However well intended," he added, "it is a dreadful thing to tell our people that the international court will stop war or that it will have the slightest effect upon war. * * * It is an utterly futile agency for peace—it cannot and will not prevent wars and it does not pretend either in its organization or its operation to do so. It has jurisdiction of nothing, except what countries may choose to submit to it, and the four great members, Great Britain, France, Italy and Japan have specifically declined to submit to its compulsory jurisdiction."

Senator Johnson said tonight's meeting was without political significance, and his address merely was to give his opinions on international affairs. "It was an 'innocent abroad,'" he said. "I went to Europe just an American. I return just an American."

Senator Johnson said he spoke with neither "personal nor political hostility to any man," but asserted he could not "forgive the man who decides this nation's future solely by the present apparent necessity of partisan politics."

"What we condemned under a democratic administration, we will not accept under a republican administration," he declared.

The senator said he would refrain from any extended discussion of domestic questions, but pointed out that "men are not unlike the world over."

Common Humanity Must Bear Burden

"Common humanity learned from dread war it must bear the burden," he said, "but it learned, too, it could wield the power. * * * Discontent abroad in our land, say our publicists? Of course there's discontent. It arises not from dissatisfaction with popular government, but with the lack of it. When we are so weak, our efforts so futile, that we cannot frame laws which will stand the test of the courts, to prohibit child labor and give women a minimum living wage, the common man looks at us, aye, he even dares to look at the courts, with some doubt and mistrust. * * *

"If one tenth the effort now being made to take us into Europe were devoted to taking our own country out of this distress and want, we'd have a happy, contented and prosperous people. * * * But of one thing be certain. Humanity is determined to have its own. It no longer begs; it demands. It asks the right to life, liberty and human happiness. It will have it in full measure. I suggest to my conservative brethren that recent events indicate they must choose whether progressive things will be done in a conservative way or in a radical way. You may have to take progressivism or radicalism will take you.

"But upon these domestic questions, our people will divide without pretense or cant, and they will be decided in the good old American fashion, in fair stand up fight."

Unlike domestic politics, Senator Johnson said, foreign polices could not readily be changed. He declared this fact made it important that a decision be reached on America's attitude toward Europe without haste, passion, partisanship or prejudice.

"Though you and I thought it had been decided in 1920. The old question recurs. If it must be decided again, I insist it shall be honestly and fearlessly decided. Let's have no pretense, let's make the issue so plain that even some of our most distinguished statesmen cannot dodge it. I do not agree at all with the views of Mr. Justice Clark and Mr. Hamilton Holt, (exponents of the league), and their associates; I do heartily agree with them on one thing: if our foreign policy is to come before our people, let it come frankly, fairly, honestly, and let the people decide whether they wish to participate in the European political mess or follow the policy that has thus far been ours: that has brought us our fame; our prosperity, our happiness and our glory."

Poisonous Propaganda

America has been filled with "foreign propaganda" that is "poisoning the national mind," the senator declared. It comes principally from the British empire, "although Britain is no worse, only more effective than other countries," he said. This propaganda "taints the very sources of our news," and "often speaks in the holiest aspirations of mankind."

He declared many Americans "are afflicted with an inferiority complex" when in the presence of a foreign title or a great alien personage. When a Balfour or a Cecil preach their doctrines in America, the senator said, it is always, "however, carefully and sweetly phrased, the doctrines of and for their great nation, not of and for ours."

European Situation.

Senator Johnson summed up the present European situation by declaring that England pursues the policy of the commercial supremacy of England; France is determined to maintain her continental position and her world power; Germany, disarmed, sees her fairest industrial provinces seized and dreams of a future day of reckoning; Italy bluntly announces the Italian policy of 'nothing for nothing'—'Italy for Italians,' while the Balkan states retain their capacity for involving their greater neighbors, and with but one or two exceptions "still cling to the good old Balkan method of changing ministries by assassinating ministers."

On every hand, he declared, there are distrust, suspicion, hostility and hatred of one another and distrust and suspicion of us.

"Europe must put her political house in order before she invites guests to cross its threshold," the senator said.

"In this condition abroad," he continued, "what should be our attitude? * * *

Clash of Selfish Ambitions.

"I will not take our country into this clash of selfish ambitions and yet existing racial feuds which have written the bloody pages of centuries of European history. * * * So earnestly and firmly do I believe that the future of the republic depends upon keeping out of the turmoil, the strife and the controversies, the schemes and machinations of Europe, that we can have no higher resolve than to dedicate ourselves to the patriotic duty in the days to come of maintaining the distinctive American policy and keeping our country free from every entanglement which would destroy that policy. In my humble fashion, without limitation of politics or candidates, I dedicate myself to maintaining America just as America has ever been."

Senator Johnson declared, however, that America should have a foreign policy which would speak "in tones which will cause all the world to pause." If America believes that any other nation jeopardizes peace there is no reason for America not saying so, he added.

"Since when has America become so weak and so timid that its foreign policy could be declared only in conjunction with other nations?" he continued. "I can recall when a democratic president of the United States did not hesitate to express the views of our country in foreign affairs. And I remember when the greatest American of his generation spoke in clarion tones America's foreign policy and all the world listened.

"Free, independent, unfettered by league or association, court or conference, America can speak and the world will heed."

Disagreement With Harding.

Senator Johnson said he did not question the good faith of President Harding in asking for America's entrance into the world court, nor the fact that he "believes he may accomplish the seemingly impossible task, but aside from his few advisers, I think there is quite a substantial disagreement with him."

Recalling that in 1920 Secretaries Hughes and Hoover of President Harding's cabinet, had urged America's entrance into the league, and had since changed their minds, Senator Johnson pointed out that they were now believed to be among the chief sponsors of the world court. He said he congratulated them that they had seen the "error of their ways" and asserted, "I may be pardoned, therefore, in suggesting to you the vehemence of their views three years ago upon a most important international policy, views which they now have changed; and we may be pardoned, too, in accepting respectfully but with a bit of caution their present views upon a less important international policy."

"It is not wisdom that France and Britain want," Senator Johnson declared. "They know that we have no special wisdom to offer. They know that they could get better special wisdom about the Ruhr for example from Denmark. But they do not say that Denmark is essential to the league. They do say that the United States is essential to it. What is the difference The difference is that while Delmark is wiser about European affairs, the United States is the world's largest reservoir of money and one of the world's largest reservoirs of potential military man-power."

America's own simple problems are too stiff to be solved, the senator said, without attempting to solve the stiffer problems of Europe. America, he said, has not learned how to bring about peace in the mines of West Virginia; to establish friendly relations between the Ku Klux Klan and the Catholics, Jews and negroes; to be certain of an anthracite coal supply for next winter.

"Our own poor are yet poor," he added, "and little children of the slums yet suffer. Our farmers face falling prices of their products and see in despair the ruin of years of toil."

Looking into the future of Europe, Senator Johnson said he did not believe the continent would fall into chaos.

No Evidences of Chaos in Europe.

"I saw no evidences of chaos in Europe," he said, "but I saw plain evidence of future conflict. Another bloody war is in the making. I would prevent it if I could; but if that bloody war is no concern of ours and comes from causes of which we are no part, I would not send a single American soldier again across the seas."

Stick to Our Own Ideals.

"There's just one course to pursue," Senator Johnson concluded, "just one way to play our proud part, just one method to render real service—speak our voice frankly and boldly, be true to our own institutions, hold to our own ideals, be fair and just to all peoples, ourstanding on our own shores, remain the master of our own destiny, the captain of our own souls."

HARVEY P. BISSELL COLLECTOR CUSTOMS FOR CONNECTICUT

Hartford, July 25.—Former comptroller Harvey P. Bissell, of Ridgefield was officially notified today of his appointment by President Harding to be United States Collector of Customs for Connecticut. The notification was contained in a letter from McKenzie Moss, Assistant Secretary of the Treasury.

Mr. Bissell was instructed to enter into a $25,000 bond with the United States. This bond will cover the disbursement of funds from all appropriations under the administrative control of the coast guard service, the office of the supervising architect, and the public health service. Mr. Bissell will take office when his bond has been approved by the treasury department.

LLOYD GEORGE MAKES FIERCE ATTACK ON POINCARE

Bristol, England, July 25.—(By the Associated Press). Former Premier Lloyd George made a fierce attack on M. Poincare, the French premier, in a speech here today. He objected to M. Poincare's habit of making speeches Sundays, which, he pointed out, was a day consecrated to good will, and hardly a day "to unscrew the cylinders of carefully distilled hatred, ill will, suspicion and anger among the nations."

Alluding to the past negotiations, Mr. Lloyd George said: "I did not fall out with M. Poincare, but it was very difficult. Mr. Bonar Law also found it quite impossible to work with him."

The former premier accused M. Poincare of "wickedly distorting" his speeches, and expressed the hope that the British efforts toward peace would not be converted into mere fuel for further devasting and scorching flames, which burn up the peace, prosperity, progress and happiness of mankind."

PROVIDENCE COAL DEALERS PREDICT INCREASE IN PRICE

Providence, R. I., July 25.—A prediction that an increase of 50 cents a ton over the present prices for anthracite coal will be put into effect before the summer was over was made by several dealers of this city today. The dealers also say that the coal situation for the coming winter will be very much the same as it was last year and that the same restrictive regulations will need be in force.

UNDERWOOD FOR CONCERN IN EUROPEAN AFFAIRS

Birmingham, Ala., July 25.—The United States must concern itself in European affairs, Senator Oscar W. Underwood declared here today, speaking before a luncheon club.

"The duty of the United States toward Europe is clear," he declared. "Our soldiers did their duty; let us pray to God that the business men of the United States will not flunk in theirs now.

"The wheat farmers of the west are faced with disaster, with the probability of having to sell their wheat for cost of production or less," he continued. "You all remember the time when the cotton of the south in 1914 was a drug on the market, because we had not the ships to get it to our consumers in Europe, who take half our crop. Let us pray the disaster in the west today may not be the disaster in the south tomorrow, for we have got to recognize the fact that these are not local conditions, and where there is disaster in any section its effect is felt in all other sections."

Senator Underwood did not mention the league of nations but he frankly warned that "black clouds blowing from the wheat belt," brought by failure to find an export market, would cause economic suffering in this country unless this nation takes a hand "to remedy conditions in Europe."

"The farmers of the west are facing this calamity today because there is not a consuming market for their wheat in Europe, not that Europe doesn't need that wheat but that Europe can't buy it. Of the five billions of American securities formerly held in Europe, none are there. There is no basis of credit—and credit is largely based upon stability of governments. There is a rumor of mobilization, here, there and yonder. Europe is crushed with the cost of armament, and ministries may fall over night. These people need that which we produce, and have not the means to pay for it because they are racked and torn with debt, with instability of governments, with lack of credit. So, therefore, the situation in the west is the concern of this whole country; as much of the south as of the west, and the concern of the business men of the whole United States.

"In the future, if American business is to survive and our products be consumed, there must be a European market. The trouble is not that people abroad are not ready and willing to purchase, but that they have not the ability to pay."

Counsel and Witness Clash in Morse Trial

Now Probable That the Case Will Reach the Jury Within Two Weeks.

Washington, July 25.—Sharp clashes between the court and counsel and between Charles Pies, of Chicago, a witness, and counsel, featured this, the fifty-sixth day of the Morse trial, during which the defense rested and the government began the introduction of testimony in rebuttal. It now is probable that the case will reach the jury within two weeks.

Justice Stafford interrupted the cross examination of Lee R. Sanford, a naval architect with the Emergency Fleet corporation, to inform Attorney Fowler, of defense counsel, that he was not "treating this witness fairly." Mr. Fowler asked for an exception to the court's remark and Justice Stafford said witnesses should be treated in a gentlemanly manner. Again Mr. Fowler asked for an exception and in announcing that the exceptions would be noted, the court said there was something which could not appear in the record, "and that's the tone of your voice, which I say is insulting."

Mr. Sanford was being cross questioned about his testimony as a government witness that from the records of the fleet corporation he would estimate the net effect of the four major changes in the plans of ships built at the Virginia Shipbuilding corporation's Alexandria, Va., plant was to cause practically no delay. The defense had contended that alterations in plans had been a contributing cause to the delay in severing the ships to the government.

Before this Mr. Piez, who formerly was director general of the Emergency Fleet Corporation and who was called as the first government witness in rebuttal, had clashed with Attorney Thomas, of defense counsel. Mr. Thomas was sitting some distance away and, with the remark that he could not hear the questions put Mr. Piez suggested that counsel stand up. After several passages, Mr. Thomas demanded to know if the witness was trying to "give orders." Mr. Piez explained that his suggestion was made because "several heads intervene" and that with Mr. Thomas standing he could read his lips.

Justice Stafford intervened to remark that he was sitting beside the witness and that he had been unable to hear counsel until "just now when he raised his voice."

Mr. Piez was questioned particularly by Assistant Attorney General Turner as to whether at a conference he had with Former Representative Carlin, of Virginia, about advancing money to the Virginia company's shipyard there had been any proposal that the fleet corporation would "match dollars" with the Virginia plant.

"There never was," said Mr. Piez. "We had a contract covering payments."

Mr. Piez testified that when Mr. Carlin conferred with him after the first government loan of $750,000 to the Virginia plant he had told him that if the Virginia company would "match dollars with us there would be no need for additional loans." He added that at that time the fleet corporation records were that the government had put $1,500,000 into the plant and housing while "the contractor had put in only $600,000."

HELD FOR DISAPPEARANCE OF $20,000 IN BONDS LAST APRIL

New York, July 25.—Richard A. Chapman was held for Connecticut authorities today in connection with the disappearance of $20,000 in bonds sent to England last January in the steamer Minnekahda.

Chapman first was suspected in connection with the robbery last April when he was said to have sold one of the bonds in New Haven, Conn. Later he was questioned by federal authorities in Chicago and released. When he returned to New York in June he was arrested by postal authorities and held in $1,500 bail in connection with the same sale.

The remainder of the missing bonds were then turned over to the United States district attorney by Chapman's lawyer, who said his client had found them in Riverside Drive.

Later the postal authorities asked Connecticut officials to take jurisdiction in the case, and his detention today was made at their request.

Break in Hoboken Water Front Strike

New York, July 25.—The battle of labor which the International Longshoremen's Association and the marine transport workers' division of the Industrial Workers' of the World have been waging in Hoboken since yesterday, continued today with both sides claiming a victory.

John A. Ryan, vice-president of the International gave out a statement today in which he said the strike had been settled with the promised return to work of members of his organization. Officials of the I. W. W. came back with an answer in which they denied the strike was off and a settlement had been reached.

That the I. W. W. are determined to bring out all their members in the port of greater New York unless their demands are granted was indicated late today when a circular was posted in Brooklyn headquarters of the organization calling a mass meeting there next Saturday when a strike vote will be taken.

I. W. W. leaders likewise assert that 12 ships of eight lines are tied up and more tieups are to come.

Mr. Ryan stated that the decision to return to work was made at a mass meeting in Hoboken today, after he and other officials had pleaded with the strikers to disregard the I. W. W. propaganda and await the renewing of their contract with the steamship owners September 1.

The I. W. W. accounts of this meeting say it was attended by only a "few hand-picked" members of the I. L. A. and that "wobblies" were barred, as were those of the more conservative union suspected of being inclined to favor the strike. They contend the desertion from the ranks of the strikers of those who voted to go back today will not affect the effectiveness of the strike, and deride the efforts of Mr. Ryan to settle a strike which was begun without his authorization and over his protest.

Marine transport workers told of an attempt made by the steamship lines to import 100 strike breakers from Brooklyn. When the tugs landed in Hoboken, I. W. W. organizers persuaded 90 of them to join the strike, it was said.

The steamship President Polk, which was to have sailed from Hoboken late today, but which was held up because of the shortage of men to load her, will depart early tomorrow, shop officials said tonight. All of the passengers were aboard and the ship's cargo taken from the pier, it was asserted.

PRIEST CONVICTED OF FORGING LIQUOR PERMIT

Denver, Colorado, July 25.—Father William A. Grace, a catholic priest, tonight stands convicted of forging a liquor permit and faces a prison term of from one to five years and a fine of $10,000 or less. He was found guilty in federal court here today by a jury that deliberated only only ten minutes. Two other charges of alleged violation of the prohibition laws are pending against him.

Father Grace was committed to jail, John McCann, assistant U. S. district attorney explaining that he would not be eligible for release under bond until after motions for a new trial and arrest of judgement have been filed. Counsel for the defense were expected to file the motions tomorrow.

"The judgements of God are not those of men," the priest said when the verdict was announced.

Father Grace was indicted recently by a federal grand jury at Pueblo, along with Mrs. Katherine O'Connor, daughter of J. K. Mullen, Denver multi-millionaire, and John R. Walsh, brother-in-law of Father Grace.

Liquor obtained on forged permits ostensibly for treatment of the sick at the J. K. Mullen home for the aged, it was charged, found its way into the homes of wealthy Denver persons.

Father Grace's defense was contained in a letter alleged to have been written by the defendant priest to J. K. Mullen in which he declared that he was actuated by the highest motives in obtaining the liquor and in which he deplored the alleged attitude of Father William O'Ryan who, he said, was attempting to make light of his charitable impulse and to impugn him with less praiseworthy motives.

JURY REBUKES ANDERSON AND ANTI-SALOON LEAGUE

Term Statements Made by Anderson and the League as "Impertinent"—Jurors Resent Charges That Politics Had Played an Important Part on the Indictments—Hand Down Two Additional Indictments Alleging Extortion.

New York, July 25.—A sharp rebuke was administered today to William H. Anderson and the Anti-Saloon league, of New York, of which he is superintendent, by the special grand jury which last week returned three indictments charging him with grand larceny and forgery and this afternoon handed down the two additional indictments alleging extortion which Acting District Attorney Pecora announced would be forthcoming.

"Impertinent" was what the jury termed statements issued by Anderson and the league after the first indictments and a presentment urging legislative investigation of the dry organization. These statements, said today's presentment, reflected on the jurors' integrity.

The jurors resented charges that politics had played an important part in their findings and made it clear that the recommendation for a legislative probe had originated with them, and not with Mr. Pecora. Foreman Arthur William added that not one of the jurors was aware of the political affiliations of the others.

The extortion indictments, which had been forecast, charged Anderson with having extorted $2,500 and $1,375 at different times from O. Bertsall Phillips, a former collector of the league. In connection with the two new indictments the jury handed down a superseding indictment correcting from $13,200 to $4,400 the sum that Anderson was alleged to have obtained fraudulently from the league.

As was the case last week, Anderson was in court when the indictments were returned. With him was his new counsel, former Governor Charles S. Whitman.

Indications today were that, should the case go to trial as the district attorney's office expects, the jury box would not be filled until the middle of next month. Anderson obtained until August 3 to make any motions he might desire and the court then would have to pass on these motions.

Politicians were busy today speaking on whether the league would be investigated by the legislature as recommended by the grand jury and if so, when. They evinced considerable interest in newspaper reports that republicans and democrats would join in urging an investigation—reports which some other newspapers asserted were unfounded.

Certain political leaders expressed belief that if Governor Smith did call a special session to consider legislation involving the operation of municipal bus lines in this city, the Anti-Saloon League probe would bob up in Albany then.

CARRYNG MARK NOTES IN LAUNDRY BASKETS IN BERLIN

Berlin, July 25 (By the A. P.).—A flood of 10,000 and 20,000 mark notes is inundating Berlin because of the reichsbank's inability to supply sufficient quantities of high denomination currency, and a small army of bank clerks stormed the institution today in an attempt to haul off enough paper to supply the private banks.

The heavy demand for currency was precipitated by a sudden rise in all prices, due to the mark's further collapse. Merchants and tourists, who besieged the banks from early till late, are forced to depart with wads of small bills for which a suitcase or hamper is the only serviceable container.

The sudden dearth of big bills is due to their having been shipped into the provinces with a view to saving transportation and bundling charges and, pending the appearance of new one, five and ten-million mark notes, Berlin will be obliged to content itself with small bills.

Thousands of bundles of small notes are piled promiscuously into laundry baskets or motor lorries without being checked off. These are subsequently passed out to bank patrons or tourists with the same indifference, and, unless the recipient is possessed of surplus time or patience, he tucks the bulky wad under his arm and walks away without counting them.

The surfeit of small bills is incidentally responsible for extragavant tipping, which is becoming general throughout Berlin, as the possessor of several millions marks in small denominations is inclined to unburden himself of their bulk, and it is no unusual sight to see a toulst pass out a ten or twenty-thousand mark tip, where a tenth of the amount is customary.

SEIZED $100,000 IN GEMS OF "MILLIONAIRE STEVEDORE"

New York, July 25.—Customs officials seized jewels valued at $100,000 found in the baggage of Frank Auditore, "Millionaire Stevedore" of Brooklyn, on his arrival tonight on the steamship Homeric. It was charged that he had failed to declare the gems.

Will She Or Won't She?

Irene Castle, internationally known dancer and fashion leader, who finds herself to decide whether or not she will divorce her husband, Robert Elias Treman. The dancer is now in Paris, and rumors have been current that she had begun divorce proceedings. Later this was denied and it was claimed that a reconciliation was effected. Irene Castle has been one of the most dashing figures along the White Way and she was credited with having introduced the bobbed hair fad. Her husband is the director of the Treman-King Co., and is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert H. Treman, of Ithaca, N. Y., socially and financially prominent.

MINE OPERATORS DECLINE TO RECOGNIZE CLOSED SHOP

Atlantic City, N. J., July 25 (By the A. P.).—The anthracite miners' demand for "complete recognition" of their union, including a check-off of client quantities of high denomination currency, and a small army of bank clerks stormed the institution today in an attempt to haul off enough paper to supply the private banks.

The heavy demand for currency was precipitated by a sudden rise in all prices, due to the mark's further collapse. Merchants and tourists, who besieged the banks from early till late, are forced to depart with wads of small bills for which a suitcase or hamper is the only serviceable container.

TELEPHONE OPERATORS HAVE BALLOTED ON STRIKE

Boston, July 25.—The Balloting of the various telephone operators' union locals in Boston and through New England was completed tonight. The result of the voting on whether or not to call off the telephone strike will be announced tomorrow at a strikers' meeting in Tremont Temple, Miss Julia S. O'Connor, leader of the strike for higher wages and a seven hour day, said after a meeting of the wage conference committee of the strikers.

Whether or not acceptance was voted of the New England Telephone and Telegraph Company's proposal to take back the striking operators individually, where places can be found for them, with the loss of their seniority, and the suspension of company benefit privileges for one year's time, Miss O'Connor refused to divulge.

CONDITIONS OF BRITISH TRADE AND INDUSTRY.

London, July 25.—(By the Associated Press) A grave view of the conditions of British trade and industry is taken by a large industrial group of the House of Commons, which tonight sent a letter to Premier Baldwin outlining the plans of the group to meet the situation.

Observing that the prospects of a settlement of reparations and similar difficulties are too remote to appreciably affect the situation, "which is due to political uncertainty, lack of confidence, war wastage of wealth and the loss of purchasing power among our customers." The letter says it appears inevitable that, unless very drastic measures are taken immediately a fourth winter of unemployment, with not less than a million and a half unemployed, must secur and must disastrously affect the morale and efficiency of British workers.

NORWICH BULLETIN

An "Old School-Old Home-Old Church Week" is being talked of, probably during the latter part of June, 1925. Affairs of the same nature were held in 1905, 1910 and 1920 and all proved a great success. The former reunions held by the pupils of John B. Welch proved to be of such interest that inquiries are already coming from far-off places in regard to the latest plans. Letters of inquiry have come from the Hawaiian Islands, San Francisco, St. Louis where Dr. Louis H. Burlingham resides, and from Col. John S. Welch, principal of the Natchaug schools, 1871-1884 and past commandant of the University military academy at Columbia, Mo., where he now resides in retirement. Superintendent of the St. Louis public schools John J. Maddox, principal of Windham High school 1907-1910, also plans to attend the reunion.

Still another group of high school pupils whose members are planning to be here in 1925 and those who attended during the administration years of Principal Frank H. Beebe, the first principal of Windham High, which succeeded Old Natchaug and the First district high schools and graduated its first class in 1889. After being principal of several high schools in the vicinity of Boston, Mr. Beebe is superintendent of New Haven schools.

It is admitted by the former pupils that the reunion in 1925 is likely to be the last and the climax of their decennials and, for that reason they are very anxious to have former principals, teachers and schoolmates attend.

Principal Egbert A. Case is another school administrator who is attaining high regard in the memories of former pupils, as he is about to enter his fourteenth year of successful service.

A number of the district and parochial schools also caught the spirit of the reunion in 1915 and it is thought that they will develop plans for the affair with enthusiasm. While the school spirit in a reunion has been the great rallying power, yet the Old Home spirit has always been present in a finer and deeper influence. The churches took an active part in the 1915 reunion and shared in the homecoming call, so that these three good things in life combined in making the past reunion one of the finest events ever witnessed in this community.

For that reason the 1925 celebration is being emphasized as "Old School-Old Home and Old Church Week" and in this connection Allen B. Lincoln, an active promoter of the several reunions has prepared the following message to be broadcasted to former pupils:

Community Reunion—June 1925.

'Old School Week, Old Home Week, Old Church Week." The celebration will rally around these centers of inspiration, with community cooperation.

Everybody who has ever lived in this community is expected to come to this reunion and bring his family.

Come back to gain new inspiration from the old-time friendships and associations and bring to us your best messages from life's experiences.

Successful reunions were held here in 1905 and 1915. Let's make that of 1925 The Best Ever.

Get the date clearly in mind, latter part of June 1925— exact dates determined later. Don't miss it, plan for it. Get some of these cards and spread the news among those you wish to meet here or send in names and addresses of those you wish notified. For particulars address your local friends or Secretary Chamber of Commerce, Willimantic, Conn.

John Desrosier, 23, of 121 Main street, was placed under arrest by the local police on the charge of violation of his parole. Desrosier was given a year's suspended jail sentence May 10, by Judge Webb in the Windham county superior court in this city, on the charge of an attempt to break and enter the Boston store building. A special hearing was held before Judge George E. Hinman in the superior court judges' room Wednesday forenoon. Probation Officer S. Arnold Peckham read from his diary the number of times Desrosiers had reported to him as ordered by the court which required an appearance every two weeks. June 23 was the last time that Probation Officer Peckham had heard from Desrosiers.

The young man gave several reasons for his failure to report regularly, the outstanding ones being his work and a recent illness.

Judge Hinman stated that he was not sure what Judge Webb had in mind when he suspended the jail sentence, unless he wished to give the young man a chance to make good. He warned Desrosiers that the use of automobiles and late hours caused much of his trouble. He was given a last chance and told to appear before Probation Officer Peckham once a week.

The opening day of the campaign for funds to erect Windham House dormitory at Connecticut College for Women, New London, which is being conducted in this city, was an arduous but successful one for the campaigners. Several teams called at campaign headquarters in the office of the Jordan Buick company and gave substantial amounts. During the day Mrs. Edwin W. Higgins of Norwich, who is in charge of the county campaign, called on the heads of a number of local organizations and was rewarded by the receipt of pledges for good sized sums. A number of local women are stationed at the headquarters throughout the entire day. Although any amount will meet with the full appreciation of the committee, a ten-dollar pledge or cash offering will be reciprocated with a button on which is inscribed "Windham House." President of the Chamber of Commerce Valentine L. Murphy pledged allegiance to the movement Wednesday and will spare no effort to aid the cause. His pledge was substantiated by a check.

Two young boys who gave their names as Arnold John Nesbit of Uxbridge and John Burke of Cambridgeport, Mass., were arrested as suspicious persons about 11 o'clock Wednesday morning by Trafic Officer Frank McLean and are being held by the police until some of their accounts can be checked up. They admitted having traveled in a Ford automobile which Nesbit said he purchased for $17 last Monday. They abandoned the machine in Central Falls, R. I., while the police of that city were giving chase to another young man in the party.

Two men, who, it is believed, were the ones who escaped from Edward Johnson's automobile in Manchester Tuesday morning when given chase by the Manchester police, were arrested by the Providence police. Acting Chief of Police Allan MacArthur made out warrants for their arrest and County Detective William E. Jackson left Wednesday forenoon for Providence to return with the men. They waived the right of extradition and will be given a hearing in police court this (Thursday) morning.

Members of the family of D. D. Cavanaugh, whose Ford automobile was stolen from their garage in Chaplin early Saturday morning, are happy in the thought that the car has been recovered. Barclatt is expected to manage the local clerks and he will probably cover short field. JEWETT CITY

Those of the new flower students, who didn't allow their interest to pass with the closing of the schools in June are, during July, finding no difficulty in adding 20 new flowers to their lists in a single day's journey along the country roadside or in the fields. One addition of this week is four "banes," all blooming is the same lot, a little above the town.

If various imputations are true this square of land, must be an unhealthful locality, for the insects and animals affected by these herbs.

The dog-bane (the Baptist cemetery is overrun with it) has a very beautiful pink flower if closely examined. In early times it was said to be poisonous to dogs. During the summer months many fields in this section are whitened by the small daisy-like blossoms of the flea-bane. Great bunches used to be hung in country cottages for the purpose of excluding insect intruders. The thorn apple, well known in earlier times as henbane, has a very showy white flower. It is one of the night shades, and possesses certain narcotic properties. Years ago there was an old Jewett City woman who used to smoke the dried leaves of this plant in a long-stemmed clay pipe, claiming that it relieved certain asthmatic troubles she had. Happy was the boy, and some of them are alive today, whom she selected to pick for her 100 nice leaves, for which she would pay him five big copper cents!

Cowbane, or water hemlock, can be found in any of the marshy lots in this vicinity. There are some stalks six feet high near Tadpole. It is easily identified by its stout smooth purple streaked stem. Its root is said to contain very dangerous poison properties.

Dr. Hugh B. Campbell of Norwich will hold his July clinic in the Red Cross room, Friday morning at 10.30. This opportunity to consult him cannot be overestimated. He has patients who come to him each month, and are greatly benefited by following his advice. If any tubercular predisposition is located in the early stages, then is the time to get the best of the trouble. Many a parson hesitates too long and then no doctor can help him. There are persons in this locality who are alive today, and several in better health, because they have been under Dr. Campbell's care. Others have died because they neglected the opportunity. These clinics are arranged by the Red Cross chapter to benefit the health of the people in this town and nearby localities. The district nurse will do anything in her power to help any patient regain his health. The clinics are free.

Earl Robinson and Charles Jaskiewicz are two Boy Scouts from Jewett City who are at Camp Tippecan, at Beach Pond. Assistant Scoutmaster Samuel Cathcart, Jr., has visited the camp.

She boasts that she will cause a rich bachelor and woman hater to take her in his arms, and she has a difficult time in making good her boast. Before the bachelor realizes that he loves the girl, there is an exciting runaway, a thrilling pageant, a night swim to a yacht, a storm and exciting rescue at sea. Of course, all ends happily, but until the final climax, the fate of the heroine, played by Miss Ayres, is in doubt. It is just such a picture as the average screen fan will enjoy. The supporting cast is excellent.

Breed Theatre.

Russell portrays the character of Larry Gilmore, son of the late head of the Gilmore jewelry establishment. The picture opens after the will of Larry's father had been read. According to the terms of the will, Larry must marry within thirty days or lose his share of the estate. This causes a rush of females to the Gilmore establishment, each anxious to be the lady selected to assist in getting the money.

Larry has no intention of entering the field of matrimony, so he persuades his friend, the police commissioner, to appoint him to the police force. It is as the policeman that Larry meets romance. She is a little girl working in a cheap restaurant. Larry eventually marries her, but it is only a few seconds before the time limit is expired.

Eva Novak, Winifred Bryson, Henry Barrows, Wade Boteler, Harry Lonsdale and Earl Metcalfe have important parts which they handle exceedingly well. Howard M. Mitchell, the director, with good material to work with has produced an excellent picture.

The photoplay is assured of a successful run because interest is upheld throughout and the picture does not drag at any time. It is full of life, love and action.

The Great Night will be shown again today at the Breed and for the second feature Shirley Mason will be seen in Shirley of the Circus. Movie Chats completes the bill.

D. W. DeWolf of Bristol, R. I., a Rhode Island representative of a fire insurance company, was a visitor in Westerly Wednesday. Last winter Mr. DeWolf accompanied by his wife and daughter made a trip to England and on the continent. The trip from London to Paris was made by aeroplane, the time taken for the trip—landing field to landing field, being two hours and a half. Mr. DeWolf reports the cost of the trip to be but little more than the cost by steam trains and channel boat. At Paris it was found that the cost of living at a good hotel amounted to 30c a day in our money, for room and meals. There were some hotels where the prices were higher but there were also many more where the cost of living was much less than paid by Mr. DeWolf. The exceedingly cold weather as experienced last winter in the United States was felt by their party even in Venice. Mr. and Mrs. DeWolf remained in Europe a month longer than their daughter who was desirous of returning to her home country.

The night detail was unsuccessful in locating the man and Wednesday he was sought by a company detail. Wednesday morning York surrendered to Sheriff Fred T. Mitchell who took him to the police station. Captain Christy McConnell of the 349th company was notified and went to the station and read the 62nd and 92nd articles of war to the prisoner. Later Private York was released on bail furnished by George Davison, to await his hearing. Sergt. George Dewding entered the complaint of the man's desertion.

DEMPSEY AND FIRPO SIGNED FOR BOUT IN UNITED STATES; PROBABLY IN SEPT.

New York, July 25.—(By the A. P.)—Jack Dempsey, world's heavyweight champion, and Luis Angel Firpo, his challenger from the Argentine, have been matched for a title bout, probably in September at a site within or close to New York.

Promoter Tex Rickard announced late today that articles binding the match had been signed by Firpo and Jack Kearns, the champion's manager, but he declared the date and place of the match were still a matter of uncertainly.

"You can say that the match is signed, sealed and delivered," Rickard said, "and that it will be held in the United States, but I can give no further details now. I had expected to have all arrangements completed today but there are several matters yet to be adjusted. I hope to be able to fix the time and site within a day or two, however."

Belief that Rickard had the Polo Grounds in mind as the probable site was strengthened by information that he had held another conference with Charles A. Stoneham, president of the New York Giants. There also was considerable speculation over possible dates with the probability that the bout would be staged some time between September 5 and 25. On either of these days, incidentally, the Polo Grounds will be available for boxing purposes.

It was understood that the Dempsey-Firpo articles were signed several days ago, but that Rickard had withheld the announcement pending his efforts to fix other details. Faced with new difficulties, however, the nature of which he did not reveal, he decided to make known the fact that no hitch existed so far as the fighters were concerned. The promoter emphasized yesterday that he had experienced no difficulty in coming to terms with either Firpo or Kearns.

What Rickard has guaranteed either fighter was not disclosed but when Firpo came back to the United States last March for a series of matches under the promoter's auspices, the first of which was with Bill Brennan, it was said the Argentine was promised $100,000 in the event he gained a title bout with Dempsey. The champion's end, it was figured, probably would be close to $500,000.

Firpo left late today to fulfil several engagements in the Middle West. He has signed to appear either in exhibitions or no-decision matches at Grand Rapids, Mich., July 27; Omaha, Neb., August 3; St. Louis, August 6; and Indianapolis, August 8. The latter date was closed today. He was not accompanied by his trainer, Jimmy DeForest.

ANNA BRADFORD'S GIRL WINS AT COLUMBUS

Columbus, Ohio, July 25.—(By The A. P.)—The champion sweepstakes for three year old pacers, the feature event of today's Grand Circuit card resulted in a victory for Anna Bradford's Girl, although she was not a straight heat winner. Kinney Silk won the final mile after Anna Bradford's Girl had gone into a break.

The most exciting race of the afternoon proved to be Shepard and Swisher $5,000 stake for 2.11 trotters which resulted in the first defeat of the season for Peal Benboe, the trotter for which Tommy Murphy recently paid $25,000.

Pearl Benboe, was not only beaten but also failed to win a single heat. This event a four heat struggle, was won by Bogalusa, owned by Walter T. Candler, of Atlanta, Ga., which won the second and fourth heats. Bogalusa's chances were considered so slight that not a single ticket was sold on him in the result book.

The first heat was won by Captain S., another outsider while the third was taken by Cupid's Albingen.

The strongly played Mrs. Yerkes, won the 2.15 trot in straight heats. Easter Belle, an outsider, won the 2.15 pace which went four heats. Miss Eagle won the first heat and Little George the second.

NUGGETS AND JAIL HILL PLAY TO A TIE SCORE

In the postponed game in the Twilight League on Wednesday evening between the Nuggets and the Jail Hills, these two teams battled to a 4 to 4 tie. The game was close and interesting although the Nuggets were handicapped by the loss of two of their best players. The make shift team did wonderfully well against the superb hurling of Shea for the Hillies.

TAFTVILLE FAVORITE OVER RIVERVIEW IN FIRST GAME

Taftville will enter the series with Riverview next Saturday a slight favorite over the Riverview boys owing to the former's record for the season. Taftville has played 17 games and lost 5 out of the number, while Riverview has lost a smaller number of games. However, baseball fans do not consider that Riverview has played the calibre of teams that have opposed the Taftville so they are boosting Taftville to win the first game of the series.

Riverview, according to the best dope has only a battery, the club depending on West and Reddy to bring them safely through. But too much dependence cannot be placed on a battery, so Manager Bill Donovan of the Riverview club has secured several outsiders to bolster up the weak spots. The newcomers are Sam Massey, Leo Fay and Jack Clabby, who are expected to fill in the gaps in the infield and outfield and contribute much to the hitting power of the team.

Taftville on the other hand is going to use the regular lineup with the exception of the pitcher. Manager Troland will either use Mike Morin, Canadian League pitcher or Davis of the Sub Marine Base team. With either of these hurlers in the box it will be a difficult proposition for the Riverview team to take the long end of the score. Whoever wins it is bound to be a bang-up game, full of pep and ginger from start to finish.

Lake Street Bulldogs Win Again.

The Lake Street Playgrounds team, now known as the Bulldogs, due to their pugnacious spirit, won another victory Wednesday evening when the team defeated the Falls Eagles 4 to 1 in the best game played at the playgrounds. For the first six innings it was a pitching duel between Clouthier of the Falls and Shea of the Bulldogs, the latter having the best of the argument getting 17 strikeouts. In the seventh inning the Bulldogs tore into Clouthier and pounded across their four counters. The Falls team fought hard but were only able to score one lonely run.

CRIQUI AND DUNDEE WILL BATTLE FOR FEATHERWEIGHT LAURELS TONIGHT

New York, July 25.—(By the A. P.) Eugene Criqui, French holder of the world's featherweight boxing crown, and Johnny Dundee, his Italian-American challenger, were pronounced tonight to be fit and ready for their championship match tomorrow night at the Polo Grounds.

Both boxers were well under the 126-pound limit today, Dundee, scaling 124 1-2 after a light workout, and Criqui a half pound less. They will be close to those figures when they enter the ring.

Boxing followers anticipate tomorrow one of the keenest title fights of a season that already has witnessed a half dozen championship contests. Among experts, Dundee has been a slight favorite but the Frenchman, who demonstrated his speed and punching prowess in knocking Johnny Kilbane from the throne nearly two months ago, has many ardent backers.

Both are clever ring generals and good boxers. Criqui is a year younger, has some advantage in height and reach and is a harder hitter but Dundee's supporters believe his enduring and aggressiveness will offset these advantages.

The advance sale reached $100,000 today, according to promoters, who announced they expected it to exceed $150,000 by tomorrow night. Arrangements have been made to handle a crowd of 65,000.

Measurements of the rival boxers were announced as follows:

BROOKLYN WINS FIRST GAME OF SERIES FROM REDS

Cincinnati, Ohio, July 25.—Brooklyn pulled Cincinnati back into a tie with Pittsburgh for second place by winning the first game of the series from the local team today, 6 to 3. Luque, who had won seven straight games, pitched invincibly until the seventh when three hits and a pass enabled the visitors to tie the score. In the eighth Brooklyn found the Cuban for four hits including a triple by Deberry which with a wild throw by Caveney gave them 4 runs and an easy victory. Vance pitched fine ball, scoring his sixth straight victory. The fast ground covering of Neis in center field helped Vance to keep down the Red score. The score:

EXTRA HOLE MATCHES FEATURE AT CLEVELAND

Mayfield Country Club, Cleveland, July 25.—(By The A. P.)—Two fast 18-hole rounds of match play today reduced the contestants for the entries for the Western Amateur Golf championship to eight players, including Chick Evans of Chicago, defending champion, who will meet Fred Lamprecht of Cleveland in the third round and Jess Sweetser of New York, national amateur champion, who will cross cleets with Dexter Cummings of Chicago.

Three extra hole matches today's play, Cummings winning a 20-hole contest in the forenoon from Harold Weber of Toledo, while in the afternoon, Clarence Wolf required twenty holes to down John G. Anderson, of New York, and Joe Wells of East Liverpool, Ohio, took 19 holes to eliminate Eddit Held of St. Louis, trans-Mississippi champion, and did so then only by holding a 45 foot putt for a birdie three. Wolf and Wells measure mashies tomorrow.

The other third round match is between Ike Couch of Chicago, who furnished the greatest upset of the day by trouncing Captain E. F. Carter of Chicago, formerly Irish champion and a favorite for the finals, 2 and 1, and W. H. Gardner of Buffalo, who rather unexpectedly ousted James Manion of St. Louis, two and one.

Evans had the easiest time of all the players today. Because he played the best golf of the 32 men who started this morning. He breezed out in 34, two under par, in the first round and was one under perfect figures in the remaining five holes he needed to defeat James Ward of Kansas City, 5 and 4. In the afternoon Chick took 36 to go out and was one under par for the remaining 4 holes he used to down Ellsworth Augustus, the phenomenal driver of Cleveland, six and five.

REDS WIN BOTH GAMES OF DOUBLE BILL

Pittsburgh, Pa., July 25.—Pittsburgh went into a tie with Cincinnati for second place today when they defeated Boston in both games of a double header, winning the first 5 to 2 and the second 10 to 3. In the first game Adams held the Braves safe until the sixth inning when a home run by Felix was followed by doubles by Southworth and McInnis accounting for all their runs.

The Pirates rallied in the seventh when Russell opened with a triple followed by sharp hits by Traynor, Marsville, Grimm, Schmidt and Adams for a total of four runs.

In the second game Pittsburg scored six runs in the first and four in the second inning but was held scoreless the remainder of the way.

Traynor hit a home run in the second game. The Scores:

Jewett Special Sedan—Perfectly Equipped

Comfort Adaptable to Every Need

The lines are good. The flash of full-nickeled bumpers front and rear; nickeled radiator and motometer; nickeled barrel-type head and side lamps—adds distinction. Trunk and trunk rack, at rear, against nickeled body-guard-rails, are smart, and useful.

There's an extra cord tire, tube, rim and cover, carried forward at left. Cowl ventilator. Adjustable sun and storm visor. Automatic windshield wiper. Rear-view mirror. Combination tail and stop-light. Smart upholstery. Taffeta shades at windows. Dome light. Handsome fittings. Heater. Not a thing to buy but gas and oil.

Comfortable, whatever the weather. All-side windows close easily—and tight—when the sudden storm breaks; open wide when balmy weather invites.

But it's when you sit behind the wheel that you get the real thrill of Jewett's performance. The Paige-type clutch and transmission insure quiet, easy gear-shifting; it is almost impossible to "clash" or jerk the car. And there's full fifty horsepower waiting the touch of dainty slipper on the accelerator. Jewett Six popularity shows that sixes do best fours in the opinion of thousands of satisfied Jewett owners.

Drive from 2 to 60 miles an hour in high—crawl along behind exasperating teams—then breeze quickly ahead when the opening comes. For Jewett accelerates from 5 to 25 miles an hour in 7 seconds in high gear. Up-steep any hill on high—fast or slow.

Owners have every confidence in Jewett due to its Paige-built motor; Paige-Timken axles front and rear; ball-bearing steering spindles; all-steel universal joints with sealed-in lubrication—good for 15,000 miles without oiling.

And Jewett stays good, because of the high-pressure, hollow crank-shaft oiling system which forces 2 gallons of oil per minute through all main and connecting rod bearings.

Jewett comes to you with this distinction—it is the only car of its class made by a builder of finest quality cars! You will sense the confidence this gives when you and your family have your demonstration.

PENALIZING THE SWINDLERS.

Many are the causes in which the government can get interested for the benefit of the people. When it undertakes to eliminate stock swindlers, insofar as it can be done by denying them the use of the mails, it is of course engaged in a most commendable effort.

It is not a new fight that is being waged by the department of justice and the postoffice department. Misuse of the mails by those who seek to get the money of others by crooked operations is an old offense, but the departments are now engaged in a new determination to discourage the practice. It is something that should not go by fits and jerks, except that the swindlers are more active at certain times than at others, but should be followed up persistently at all times. It is only by letting it be understood that the penalties for the misuse of the mails are real and that the violation of the postal laws carries an undesirable penalty that due protection can be given.

When it is declared at Washington that the drive against the swindlers has resulted in an increase of 100 per cent. in mail fraud cases in the past fiscal year and that it will show a gain that will approximate 300 per cent. in the next twelve months, it indicates that there is plenty of work to be done in seeking out and punishing the frauds and that the government has no idea of shirking its duty.

Great is the amount of money that is obtained from the confiding possessors of a little wealth by those who present alluring propositions. Too great is the faith of many in the sayso of the individual with whom they have no acquaintance. The more attractive the bait the quicker some fall, even to giving more thought to the possibility of losing the wonderful return from some gold brick scheme than to the safety of their dollars.

It is by no means a small class that the government has reason to protect. It is a service of great value that is undertaken when sincere endeavors are made to punish those violating the law and warn those who are traveling close to a violation.

HURTING THEMELVES.

That the legislature of the Philippines has demanded the recall of Governor General Wood and has made a direct appeal to President Harding doesn't necessarily mean that it is going to be granted.

There is no reason to believe that the country or the president has lost faith in General Wood or that it considers that he has wrongly used his authority. Rather is there reason for believing that he is exercising the authority conferred upon him and acting justly in the capacity as governor general and that such will be the reply to the demand that has been made.

The situation in the Philippines surrounds a condition which will require something much more substantial than the demand of the Philippine legislature for the governor general's recall. Efforts to suppress the gambling activities in the island have apparently displeased. Endeavors to discredit the leader in that work having failed, the assault is turned upon the governor general who stood by the official who had been several times acquitted by a Philippine court on a charge of accepting bribes.

Back of it all lies the efforts of certain leaders in behalf of the independence of the Philippines and their apparent dislike of the manner in which General Wood is proceeding to bring about the improvements which the survey before he took office showed that the islands needed. Whether they realize it or not, they are hurting themselves.

Governor Montinola of Iloilo apparently hits the nail on the head when advising against the action taken by the Filipinos points to politics as the cause of the trouble.

Fitness to govern themselves is what is required before the islands are turned over to the Filipinos. They are demonstrating through such leadership as is directing the present trouble that they haven't got to the point where the islands can be entrusted to their guidance. The demands they make call for only one answer.

A SANE RULING.

The commissioner of immigration at Ellis island has certain authority. He is expected to act in accord with the laws and yet it is not expected that he will be devoid of common sense. However difficult it may be for the commissioner at times to respect both, it must be agreed that he has made no serious error in ruling that a babe that was born to Polish parents on a British ship on their way to this country could be admitted, even though it was insisted that the babe was as British as if it had been born in the heart of London and the British quota is filled.

It was of course one of the many puzzling questions that confront the immigration commissioner from time to time. There was no obstacle to the admission of the rest of the family. Had it been a Polish ship there would have been no question raised. The whole trouble arose over the fact that the stork appeared on shipboard instead of waiting until the vessel had landed its passengers. To think that the innocent babe could be sent back or that the family ought to be returned or broken up because of the circumstances that prevail was out of the question.

Technically that may have been the thing to have done, but technicalities have a small place in a case of that kind. The commissioner of immigration at least takes that view and it will be highly surprising if such a ruling is upset by higher authority. Possibly it will not do to allow too much or any elasticity in some of the immigration laws. Stretching a point here and there may come to establish a precedent that will cause endless trouble in enforcing the immigration laws, but in this instance all the circumstances have been given due consideration and that degree of commen sense which is expected to be exercised has been used, and after all it is the same application of our laws that is desired.

FEDERAL TAXES.

In view of the fact that such an excellent showing financially was made by the administration during the past fiscal year, when a huge deficit was not only overcome but a sizeable surplus established, it is only natural that thought should be turned to the possibilities of reduced taxation. High taxes have been deplored for a long time. Conditions that will permit reductions are of course eagerly awaited.

Because there has been a surplus does not necessarily mean that there can be a wholesale slashing of taxes. It is to be remembered that there is a war debt that must be paid off and that is not going to be accomplished by the heavy cutting of revenue.

In the past one big help has come from the manner in which the expenditures have been cut. There is a limit of course to what can be done in that direction, although the elimination of waste is always desirable and the president is always stressing his policy of economy. Heavy contributions to the surplus have come from the federal taxes and the tariff. The latter has accomplished much more than was anticipated and it has done this without cutting off imports.

How much of a reduction in revenue there can be and whether it should come about through lower income taxes or in the reduction of other federal taxes must be governed by the facts and the pleasure of congress. However, when the question of taxation comes before the national legislators there should be due thought of a revision downward when changes are contemplated.

REBUFFING THE RADICALS.

The strike among the longshoremen in New York harbor indicates again the influence of the radical element which has no regard for a contract and no disposition to abide by an agreement.

That responsible leaders should declare that the strike is illegal or that there is no strike shows the injustice of the action that was resorted to by the irresponsible. Under such conditions it is clear what the public attitude is bound to be, and that the effort to impose unjustified demands is doomed to utter failure, though some trouble and ill feeling are bound to result.

The questions involved may be different but the attitude is much the same as that shown by the striking coal miners in Nova Scotia. Leaders that have no respect for established authority and demand the recall of those who are necessary for the protection of the people against lawlessness should have no place in the guidance of any organization.

Likewise those who have no intention of abiding by an agreement or contract should be ousted from any commanding office in a union if not from membership. They give a black eye to any body. They are imbued with the desire to make trouble where peace would otherwise prevail and unfortunately there are those who are willing to follow such leadership. The prompt display of opposition to such activities from within the organization where it starts is one of the best ways of dealing with such radical movements. Even then the trouble that can be caused and the harmful effects that are sure to be felt are deplorable.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The weatherman seems to be doing business under a St. Swithin influence.

The man on the corner says: The chap who tries to please everybody hasn't had much experience.

General Wood saw trouble coming in the Philippines but he was not the kind of a governor general to run away from it.

This government is reporting counterfeit ten and twenty dollar bills. We don't hear anything of the kind about German marks.

Those congressmen who have been to Europe will no more agree in their observations than they have on matters of domestic legislation.

There is a demand for a reduction in freight rates, and yet the railroad clerks want an advance in pay that will call for $24,000,000 yearly.

New York women are out for first prize in the clean-up campaign. They have gone about it by substituting the face cloth for the face paint.

Obregon predicts recognition of Mexico soon, is the report that comes from Mexico City. It has for a long time depended almost entirely on Obregon.

Russia is planning bigger exportations of grain. Does that mean a resumption of pleas for help to keep starvation away from certain sections of that country?

The appointment of Harvey P. Bissell, former comptroller, as collector of customs of this state makes certain that Connecticut will be served by a faithful, conscientious and efficient official. He will be a credit to the office and the state.

THEY DIALED

They were perfectly frank when they told the pleasant young woman who came to meet them across the heavy velvet carpet that they "wished to look at gowns," for at the end of half an hour they were still looking, the racks in front of them had been filled and emptied several times, and they had not been induced by even the most devious and subtle insinuations even to consider trying on any of the costumes.

They sat comfortably in deep chairs, their furs thrown back and the lights of the softly tinted room at just the correct rimness to cast flattering shadows on both themselves and the rich materials. The saleswoman, soft voiced and satan gowned, moved about among her wares, bringing out her precious possessions like so many rare jewels. When she had inquired, on their entrance, whether it was an afternoon or evening gown that they were seeking, one said "afternoon" and the other said "evening."

One gown at last seemed to meet with their equal approval, and as they admired its softness and exclaimed over its originality the saleswoman felt that the sale was made. In another minute one of them would decide to try it on. The more interested one turned it about, studied it critically and felt of the texture, putting her head on one side as she considered.

Then she turned to the clerk suddenly. "Is there a telephone on this floor?" Her companion brightened and exclaimed, "Oh, I must telephone, too!" and gathering up their belongings they hurried toward a desk phone which the clerk reluctantly pointed out.

Each insisted that the other telephone first, and finally they seated themselves. The one in front of the telephone began to take down the receiver, gave a startled look at the transmitter and exclaimed: "My goodness! It's a dial phone!" and she put the receiver back on the hook as if she had received an electric shock.

"Oh, I know how to do it," exclaimed the other, pulling the telephone toward her. "Tell me the number and I'll get it. I just love to do it. It's almost like magic. You turn things around and that's all there is to it."

The number was given and the woman who was going to perform the magic said, "My, that's a long number," and asked to have it repeated. Then, putting the receiver to her ear, she explained with a superior air: "You have to wait to see if there is a sort of sizzling noise going on before you get your number. Now, what did you say the number was?" and she posed a finger over the dial, preparatory to turning it. "This is going to be wonderful when we get accustomed to it. One day I just told one of the centrals I'd be glad when all the girls were—Now repeat the number slowly so I won't forget it. Oh, my goodness, I didn't do the exchange right. Now I have to begin all over," and she hung the receiver back on the hook.

"This is going to be such a time saver. Instead of telling central, all you have to do is to get the number yourself and then there won't be so many mistakes. Now, I'll try again," and she put the receiver to her ear and waited expectantly.

Then she commanded. "Now say it slowly. There I have it," and she dialed the number under the other's slow repetition. A moment later she gave a startled exclamation and took the receiver from her ear. "Now what do you think of that? Central came in! What right had she to do that?" and she looked in the mouthpiece resentfully and put the receiver back to her ear. Leaning nearer the transmitter she asked "Did I what?" And in an aside to her companion, "I'd like to know where she came from, anyway," and then inquired of the telephone vaguely. "Did I dial a big 'O' or a little 'o'? Well, how should I know?" and she laughed gentle sarcasm into the mouthpiece for the benefit of the intruder.

After a moment, she hung up the receiver. "She said if you dial a big 'O' that calls the operator, so now I have to begin all over. Now say the number again. Inventions are all right when they work, but just look at the time we've spent and the way this one has acted. There now! All we have to do is to wait until some one comes. Oh, some one is getting ready to answer," and she pushed the instrument toward her friend.

The other woman said, "Hello" and asked for her husband and then said, "Oh, all right," rather dejectedly and hung up. "Now, if that isn't just like a man. I told him I might call him up today, and he isn't in! Now you get your number!"

"No, I don't think I'll bother," replied her companion. "It takes too long. I think I'd rather go some place where I can just give the number to central. It's rather wearing to go through all that work. Let's look at furniture. I just adore that!"—Chicago News.

Wives of Famous Men

Mary Moffat, Wife of David Livingstone.

"Whither thou goest, there also I will go." These loyal words have been spoken by many people since they were first uttered by the Biblical Ruth, but never were they said more courageously and proudly than by Mary Moffat Livingstone, wife of the pioneer explorer of Darkest Africa. The love and devotion that existed between these two were pronounced. David Livingstone's career meant not a whit more to him, important as it was, than it did to his wife.

She traveled everywhere with her husband, suffering the same hardships, surmounting the same obstacles, that he did on their exploring expeditions. When Livingstone first decided to open the heart of Africa, he was in some doubt as to the wisdom of Mrs. Livingstone's accompanying him. It was at this time that she quoted the famous Bible passage, and her husband, of course, was proud and happy that she elected to go with him in the face of so much danger. Their companionship meant much in the long, dark days spent in African forests, and Mrs. Livingstone never regretted her decision, although it probably cost her her life.

Lost for a long time in the thickest of the jungle, Livingstone was finally found by his friend Stanley, but Mrs. Livingstone, brave soul that she was, had succumbed to the hardships encountered. She had been stricken with fever and the lack of proper care and medicines had hastened her death. At her burial, Livingstone broken with grief, said: "I would love to lie down with her would our Father but take me." He continued his work, but never with the same interest as when he had his wife's companionship and love.

Stories That Recall Others

He Couldn't Hear

While his mother was entertaining visitors Johnny found his way into the bathroom and, to amuse himself, turned on the water.

Mrs. A. upon hearing the noise, went upstairs and when she appeared at the room in question found the bath overflowing with water. She reprimanded Johnny for his action, saying: "Didn't a little voice inside of you tell you that you were doing wrong?"

"Yes, mother," replied Johnny, "but the water made so much noise I couldn't hear it."

Looking for Softer Place

He had been making an auto trip through a hilly section of the state in company with his brother, a doctor, who was visiting him. He was going at an average speed of about 50 miles an hour, much to his brother's discomfort, as the rather irregular road would through a wooded country.

Fast driving in the region would not have been so bad, the physician said, had it not been for the fact that the brother persisted in releasing his grip on the steering wheel to point out some picture of beauty in the landscape that unrolled before them.

"Did you see that rock ledge over there?" the entertaining brother asked as the machine shot up toward a hilltop.

"No, I didn't," the physician grunted. "I was looking for a softer place to light than that."

THIS LITTLE BABY GIRL

Pittsburgh, Pa.—"I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound before my little girl was born, and the effect it had was wonderful. This will be the first child I have nursed as I had to bring my two boys up on the bottle. I was very nervous and worried, tired all the time and after I read about the Vegetable Compound I tried it and kept on with it. I still continue its use and recommend it to my friends. You may publish these facts as a testimonial for your medicine."—Mrs. WM. KLINGE, 169 Plymouth S., Pittsburgh, Pa.

It is remarkable how many cases have been reported similar to this one. Many mothers are left in a weakened and run-down condition after the birth of the child, and for such mothers the care of the baby is well-nigh impossible. Not only is it hard for the mother, but the child itself will indirectly suffer.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is an excellent tonic for the mother at this time. It is prepared from medicinal roots and herbs, and does not contain any harmful drugs.

Discussion With Boys' Group at Y. M. C. A.

Just before the daily swim at the Y. M. C. A. Wednesday afternoon a group of junior members with Secretary Hill and Physical Director Fritz held an interesting discussion on the topic "What are we in this world for?" Various answers were given by the boys and the conclusions were that we are in this world to live a true, useful life, not alone to be good, but to be good for something; not simply to make a living but to make a life. The boys were urged to be helpful at home and to appreciate what their parents are doing for them. Similar informal discussions will be held probably during the summer.

SIGNS ON TAFTVILLE MAN'S AUTO BRING ARREST OF ERNEST LE BLANC

Whether a man can place his wrecked automobile along the roadside and plaster it with signs containing what he says are facts in relation to the accident in which the car was smashed into near-junk is a question that may be settled in the Norwich police court this (Thursday) morning, following the arrest late Wednesday afternoon of Eugene Leblanc of Taftville.

He was taken into custody by Constable Disco of Taftville on a breach of the peace charge and was brought to Norwich police headquarters, where he gave bail for his appearance in court. He will be represented by Attorney Josiah Greenstein.

Over a month ago Leblanc's Franklin touring car was in collision on the bridge at Jewett City with the Essex car of Dr. Harry McLaughlin of that place. The crash took place some time after midnight when Leblanc was returning from attending boxing bouts at Danielson and Dr. McLaughlin was on his way home from Norwich.

Leblanc has not yet obtained a settlement for the damage to his car, which had both front wheels crushed in addition to other damages. About ten days ago Leblanc had his damaged car dragged out from behind his service station on Norwich avenue, near Taft's station, and placed alongside the highway where it was plainly visible to all who drove by, attracting much attention as it sagged down at the front on its axles in its generally wrecked condition.

Mr. Leblanc made the car still more noticeable by hanging cardboard signs on it, beginning with a few and adding others from time to time until the car was covered. Each bore a statement, which Mr. Leblanc said Wednesday night was borne out by the facts in the case, and it is this display, which, it is understood, is the cause of his arrest. One of the cardboard signs said: "You said you would get me if I would publish this, Dr. McLaughlin, so now come. E. L." Another referred to a Massachusetts bonding company offering $200 in settlement, but all Leblanc wants is the car put back in the shape it was and that a representative of the company said the car was worth $600 before the smash. Still another of the printed signs contained a statement about Dr. McLaughlin being carried from his car to another by four men and gave the number of the car to which Leblanc claimed the doctor was carried.

Leblanc's novel method of advertising his troubles has attracted much attention and the outcome of his case in the police court will be followed with interest.

ROTARIANS ON OUTING AT BILL OAT'S FARM

Half a hundred Rotarians, strong and true, were the guests of Rotarian Billy Oat at his summer home, Ludlow Farm, in North Stonington, Wednesday. Lowry skies and an occasional fog shower brought no terrors to the sturdy band that made the sojourn over the rocky roads to Ludlow. After braving the nature-paved roads that wind in and out among and over the hills of Preston and North Stonington, the Rotarians arrived at Ludlow, perched on top of one of the glorious hills, where they filled their lungs with good pure, wholesome air and then proceeded to make things hum with activity.

The North Stonington hills echoed and re-echoed with the songs of Rotary and an impromptu quartette would bewail the scarcity of bananas and proclaim an abundance of string beans, cabbages and other delicacies tempting to the vegetarian. They came early and stayed late and although the clouds let down a sprinkling of water now and then there was not a dull minute during the day. Some found entertainment in roque, others in baseball, others in bridge and hearts, while others just contented themselves by roaming about the farm.

At noonday a delicious chowder dinner, prepared by Chefs Bert Loomis and Jim Fillmore, was served to the gathering whose appetite had been whetted by the outdoor air. The menu was:

Clam Chowder
Crackers Pickles
Potato Salad
Rolls
Coffee Lemonade
Cigars.

The regular business session was conducted by President Charles A. Saxton and Joseph C. Worth was chosen song leader after John J. O'Rourke had failed to qualify for the honor. At the business session matters of a routine nature were considered and it was voted that each member of the club make a donation to the Boys' Work fund in the name of the host of the day. In all $51 was contributed to this steadily growing fund. Just before the adjournment Arthur M. Brown expressed the pleasure of the club at being Mr. Oat's guests. Mr. Oat responded, expressing the pleasure which it gave him personally to be the host to such a bunch of good fellows and he said that he hoped that he would have the pleasure of entertaining the club on many more such occasions.

After the dinner an afternoon of solid enjoyment was spent with many diversions, the feature of which was the putting contest between George Carroll, Charlie Wells and Lew Carpenter, with Mr. Carroll as the chief putter. An impromptu ball game also provided no end of entertainment for some of the athletically inclined and was featured by the clever performance of Russ Clapp and Bill Park.

Just as the sun, which smiled on the Rotarians late in the afternoon, was slowly disappearing from view behind the purple hills the Rotarians called it a day and started home after one of the best outings of the club.

MAKING DEMONSTRATION FOR "LAW—NOT WAR"

Women's organizations throughout the United States will participate in a demonstration for "Law—Not War" on the ninth anniversary of the outbreak of the World war, July 28-29. Pageants, parades, international meetings and the display of thousands of "Law—Not War" posters will mark the demonstrations in this country.

Mrs. Nathan Gilman, president of the Bozrahville section of the Council of Jewish Women, is directing the effort in this section and is interesting churches and different organizations in this movement, which is under the National Council for the Prevention of War.

There are many indications that the growing power of women in the governments of the world will constitute the deciding factor in the long struggle to abolish war as a method of settling international disputes. Nowhere is the peace movement purely a woman's movement, but in every country where women now have political power they are demanding that their governments take definite action to eliminate the causes of war and to promote the peaceful settlement of international disputes.

Is Taftville Afraid of Sterling?

The Sterling baseball team is anxiously waiting word from Manager Troland of the Taftville baseball team in regard to a return game on the Taftville grounds. Taftville came to Sterling and was defeated 7-3 with the much touted Mike Morin in the box. Manager Troland named Sterling two dates for a return game at Taftville but cancelled both dates giving various excuses but continues to stage games on the Taftville grounds on Saturdays although he advised Sterling that Saturday ball was a losing proposition at home. All Sterling wants is the same guarantee as Taftville received from them and the rest will be decided on the baseball diamond and with a good chance of Taftville being on the losing end as before. If Manager Troland wants to have baseball he will help a good deal by living up to agreements and not sidestepping good baseball clubs. It looks as though he is backing up the statement of Manager O'Leary of Norwich in regard to Taftville having cold feet, says Manager Kelly of the Sterling club.

Thomas Avery Holmes.

After an illness of some duration the model life of Thomas Avery Holmes of this city came to a close Wednesday at the Odd Fellows' Home in Groton, where he had been a resident for several years.

Mr. Holmes was born in Norwich, N. Y., May 6, 1847, the son of Albert Holmes of North Stonington and Eunice Holmes of Preston, a sister of Avery Barnes, who lived to cross the 100-milestone in life. Mr. Holmes' father moved to Norwich, N. Y., where he engaged in farming, but when Thomas was 8 years of age he returned to this city.

In his younger days Mr. Holmes was engaged as a hack driver and later entered the livery business, owning his own stables. For six years he was a popular member of the old Norwich police force. For thirty years he was a traveling salesman for the late John C. Perkins and also for his son who succeeded him in the candy business. In the early years Mr. Holmes covered his territory with a two-horse team and later by rail or trolley, his territory being eastern Rhode Island. Becoming too old to follow the salesman business he retired and for some years has been a member of the Odd Fellows family at the home in Groton.

THOMAS A. HOLMES

On December 26, 1859, in the parlors of the Wauregan house, Mr. Holmes was united in marriage with Ellen Bonney Pike, the ceremony being conducted by Rev. Alvin Bond, D. D. All guests in the hotel were invited to attend the wedding and among them were many of the leading residents of the city. The couple received many beautiful presents.

Mr. and Mrs. Holmes celebrated their golden wedding anniversary in their home on Franklin street on December 25, 1908, many friends visiting them during the day and the couple received a great many valuable presents.

Mrs. Holmes passed away on January 1, 1920, aged 84 years. She was born in Waterford, Vt., and was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Minor Pike.

Mr. Holmes was a prominent in Odd Fellow circles in this city and was one of the oldest members of Uncas lodge, No. 11, I. O. O. F., of Norwich, and belonged to the Uniformed Degree of the Knights of Pythias.

Two children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Holmes, both of whom survive, Mrs. Edwin Fish of Lincoln court, this city; and Albert C. Holmes of New Haven. There are also four grandchildren, Mrs. Archibald F. MacDougall of Norwich, Mrs. C. C. Brown of Denver, Col., Harold H. Fish of Norwich and Stanley A. Holmes of New Haven; also two great-grandchildren, John T. MacDougall and A. Duncan MacDougall, both of Norwich.

Mr. Holmes during his lengthy life made a great many friends, all of whom he kept through life. He was cheerful at all times, a real New England type of man, successful in business and in life, a lover of his home and a model father and husband.

Miss Josephine Thurston.

The death of Miss Josephine Thurston occurred Wednesday at 34 Laurel Hill avenue, where she had made her home for some time. Miss Thurston had been in failing health for upwards of two years.

She was the only child of Joseph Taylor Thurston and Elizabeth Sly, both of Norwich. The family home was at East Great Plain. Her father was for years a successful teacher in the Norwich schools and her mother conducted a fashionable millinery establishment in town. Both were prominently identified with the business and social life of the city for a long term of years.

Miss Thurston was of quiet ways and refined tastes, which won her the affection of many friends. She was a member of Broadway Congregational church, now the United church.

Mrs. William W. Service

The death of Angeline Alice Carswell, wife of William W. Service, occurred Wednesday morning at 6:30 o'clock at their home in Preston City. She had been in failing health since January, the result of a nervous breakdown and her death followed a shock which she suffered three weeks ago.

Mrs. Carswell was born in Preston, August 29, 1877, the daughter of Robert and Sarah Carswell. She attended the Bridge district and Broadway schools and was employed as bookkeeper for a time by J. M. Young. Twenty-two years ago she was married to Mr. Service by whom she is survived with their daughter Elizabeth.

Mrs. Preston attended the Preston City Baptist church and belonged to the Preston City grange. She was a loving wife and mother whose interest was in her home and a sympathetic and helpful neighbor whose loss will be felt by a wide circle of friends.

Mrs. William W. Park.

Following a lengthy illness the death of Mrs. Martha Washington Park occurred Wednesday morning at her home on Chicago avenue, Groton. She was born June 24, 1848 in North Stonington, being one of six children born to the union of Denison Swan and Charlotte Bailey.

Mrs. Park spent her early life in her native town, and before her marriage taught school in nearby towns. On March 2, 1870, she was united in marriage with William H. Park of North Stonington and from this union were born four children, H. Caroline Crary, deceased wife of Albert D. Crary of Norwich, Elbert O. Park of Groton, Villa M. Rich of Putnam, wife of Walter Rich, and Arthur W. Park of Preston. Mrs. Park also leaves a brother, Sherwood R. Swan of Preston and three grandchildren, Mrs. E. Milton Terry of Norwich, Clifford S. Crary of Norwich, children of Albert D. Crary, and Wilfred A. Park, son of Athur W. Park, also two great-grandchildren, Milton and Harold Terry of Norwich.

Mr. Park died in 1908 at their home in Preston, and shortly after his death Mrs. Park moved to Groton where she made her home with her son, Elbert O. Park, for the remainder of her life. She had many friends in Putnam where she had spent several winters.

Mrs. Park was a member of the Baptist church of Preston City, later of the Groton Heights Baptist church. She was a quiet home loving woman, an ideal wife and mother and it was pleasure for her to give aid to others.

Although in delicate health for many years Mrs. Park never failed to enjoy life although she could not enter into the strenuous activities of the day. During her last illness she was confined to her bed only about two weeks but continued to follow her practice of years, never to find fault with others, and was cheerful until the end, tenderly cared for by those who loved her.

WINDHAM

CANTERBURY GREEN

Excitement ran high at Canterbury Green at about five o'clock Monday afternoon when it was discovered that the church had been struck by lightning and smoke was seen rising from the top of the spire. An alarm was sent in to the fire companies of Plainfield and Central Village and they, as well as the village people responded. Merritt Hawes made his way up the steeple and found a small blaze which was soon put out with the aid of a spray pump, fire extinguishers and chemicals. No great amount of damage was done. The bolt evidently ran down the northwest corner of the church, as clapboards were loosened and plastering torn off inside.

Miss Elize Hawes and several children were in the building at the time practicing some music and were startled by the crash and the falling plaster. All were relieved when the safety of the old church was assured. A typical New England meeting-house larger than most, surrounded by the maple shaded green, it forms a feature of this village that could never be replaced. Many thanks were expressed to all who helped, especially to those from the neighboring villages. A large number of visitors drove to the site of the fire during the evening.

Removes Wrinkles and Refreshes Tired Faces

As the skin tends to expand in warm weather, causing wrinkles to form, a good astringent-tonic lotion should be used these days. Dissolve an ounce of pure powdered saxolite in a half pint of witch hazel. Bathe the face in this and see how quickly the wrinkles and furrows will disappear—and how much younger you will look! There's nothing better for sagging cheeks or double chin, or for enlarged pores.

Use this harmless lotion during the heat of the day and you will find it wonderfully refreshing. You will lose that wilty, tired look. Be sure to ask the druggist for powdered saxolite.

RHEUMATIC PAINS GO SWOLLEN JOINTS VANISH

Thousands of sufferers have freed themselves from the bondage of rheumatism; rid themselves of the torturing pain; reduced the swollen joints; thrown away canes and crutches, and from helpless beings became able to work and be of use to themselves and their families.

Don't be skeptical about Rheuma. You will know in a few hours after beginning the treatment that the poisonous uric acid is leaving your system through the natural channels. You will feel better in a day; you will know you are going to be helped in less than a week.

There is no guess work about Rheuma bringing you back to health. That's why The Lee & Osgood Co. and good druggists everywhere sell it with guarantee of money back if it does not give quick and blessed relief at once.

DANIELSON AND PUTNAM NEWS

DANIELSON

Material for many omelets was spattered over the state highway on Reynolds street Wednesday morning, when a big Cadillac touring car driven by Percival Parrish, of Rosemont, Pa., a suburb of Philadelphia, came down the grade from Stearns Hill and smashed into the enclosed milk delivery wagon of George Paine of the Green Hollow road.

Mr. Paine and his load of eggs, milk and cream were hurled to the street as the wagon crumpled under the slap from the big car, which skidded and sideswiped the milk wagon as Mr. Parrish applied pressure to his brakes in an effort to prevent a collision. Mr. Paine escaped with no more serious injuries than a bump on the head and a general shaking up. His horse was cut some and his supply of commodities for the day was ruined.

Mr. Parrish later made at the office of Attorney A. G. Hill a cash settlement for the damage to Mr. Paine's property. He explained that he had seen while a considerable distance up the hill that Mr. Paine was turning around in the highway about opposite the residence of Thomas Bradford, but did not realize that the horse would be so slow, and was too close upon the rig to stop when he realized the imminence of a crash. The automobile was not badly damaged in the accident.

Mrs. Carrie Augusta Kies, 62, wife of Frederick E. Kies, is dead at the home of her son, Clarence E. Kies, in Baltic ville. Mrs. Kies, who had been in poor health for a considerable period, was born in Putnam, a daughter of Israel and Mary Harrington Wheelow. She lived in that city for years, also had made her home in Danielson, at East Killingly and other places in this vicinity. She is survived by her husband, a deputy game warden in Windham county, and her son.

Sportsmen who are interested in trap and rifle shooting have a treat promised for this afternoon when Captain Richards and Mr. Avery of the shooting team of Winchester Repeating Arms Company will come here to give an exhibition of their capabilities at the shooting lodge of the Danielson Rod and Gun club on Allen Hill road.

The exhibition is to start at two o'clock, and all who are interested are privileged to attend. Club members will also do some shooting during the afternoon, so it would appear that the meeting will be one of the most interesting of the summer period.

Rain forced a postponement Wednesday of the big lawn fete to have been held under the auspices of Killingly Woman's club for the benefit of the Nurses' Home fund of the Day Kimball hospital at the residence of E. E. Hopkins. In accordance with previously announced plans the fete will be held this (Thursday) afternoon, a fact pleasing to the large number who have become interested in the affair.

The work of distributing 62 cans of fingerling trout in brooks in the towns of Killingly, Brooklyn, Plainfield, Canterbury and a section of Pomfret has been completed by the Danielson Rod and Gun club in co-operation with the superintendent of the state fish and game commission. The fingerlings turned into the brooks number her between 10,000 and 12,000 and should figure largely in the better fishing that may be looked for a year from next spring. The spring of 1924 should find trout fishing hereabouts better than it has been for several years, for by that time many of the trout released in the fall of 1922 should be ready to take the hook. Heavy restocking of the brooks will continue until this section of the state has some real trout fishing to offer to sportsmen.

Wednesday morning the funeral of Mrs. Leopoldine Rene was held from her home in Ballouville with services at St. Joseph's church in Dayville at 9 o'clock, Rev. Ignatius Kost being celebrant of the high mass of requiem. There were many relatives and friends at the funeral. Burial was in St. Joseph's cemetery. The bearers were Henry Frechette, Henry Cusson, Delor Cusson, David Champagne, Paul Carnegit and Octave Cardinal. Louis M. Kennedy was in charge of the funeral arrangements.

Three big open type electric cars such as formerly were in use on lines of the Connecticut company in this territory are at the carhouse in Dayville temporarily. They are to be taken to Norwich. These cars arrived at Dayville by a circuitous route from Meriden, being taken via Hartford, Springfield, Southbridge and Webster, then southward into Connecticut.

As has been forecasted, the new state highway to Providence and through to Hartford is showing benefits to Danielson from tourists traffic. The present month has brought a sharp increase in the number of tourist parties making overnight stops here. They find the town and its accommodations to their liking and depart with an assurance that they will return and also that they will sent their friends.

Omer Desautles of Putnam will be in the town court this morning to answer to a charge of violating the motor vehicle laws in this town on a date the latter part of June.

This is Thursday and shoppers will remember that many of the borough stores will close today at noon for the weekly half-holiday.

Wednesday's rain was hailed with gratitude, by those who have growing crops that have been retarded in development by lack of sufficient water.

Considerable work has been done toward restoring the tennis courts on North Main, near Hutchins street to condition that will allow of playing. The court has been abandoned for more than a year.

There were no developments Wednesday in the seach for Frank Weeden, escaped maniac, and the belief has grown that he has made his way out of this territory.

Motorists noticed with interest Wednesday that three large gasoline companies distributing in the local field have made a reduction of one cent per gallon in the wholesale price in Connecticut. This reduction likely will bring gas down to 24 cents retail in Danielson.

Henry A. Amberley of Pawtuxet was a visitor with friends in Danielson Wednesday.

There will be several motor parties from Danielson to Canadian points during the month of August.

School street is one of the thoroughfares of the borough being excavated in pipe laying operations that have been under way in different streets here throughout the summer.

A suggestion was heard Wednesday that red reflecting glass such as the state has erected at many dangerous highway points in Connecticut, should be placed on the hill at South Killingly.

The condition of the Main street crossing of the New Haven road in Danielson is such that is small wonder that drivers say things that would not look well in print relative to such negligence, and most communities would not allow it to go unnoticed. The condition has prevailed for months.

PUTNAM

David Flagg, ac acting judge of the probate court for the district of Woodstock has given notice that an application has been made by Dr. Edward F. Perry of this city for administration of the intestate estate of Frank W. Gordon, a Civil war veteran who died suddenly last Friday evening at West Woodstock, following an attack of acute indigestion. The application is to be heard and determined at Woodstock in August.

Mr. Gordon lived alone at West Woodstock and when he became suddenly and seriously ill last Friday night made his way to the home of a neighbor, Moses Wilcox, where he collapsed. Members of the household summoned Dr. Perry by telephone, but upon the physician's arrival after a hurried trip he found Mr. Gordon practically breathing his last and he died within a short time.

Those somewhat familiar with Mr. Gordon's financial affairs say his estate will amount to $25,000 or more. His fortune was accumulated through long years of activity as a manufacturer and farmer and in more recent years through the purchase and resale of farms in Woodstock and Eastford. It is said that there are no known living relatives.

Since the death of his wife in 1914, Mr. Gordon had lived alone. Only about six months ago he purchased what is known as the Judge Fisher place, formerly one of the finest homes in West Woodstock.

He was born in Palmer, Mass in 1842 try and saw hard active service before and in 1862 enlisted at Monson, Mass. in the Massachusetts Volunteer infanhe was mustered out in 1864, when he returned to Palmer. Later he came to Eastford and still later to Woodstock where he has lived for many years.

In 1878 he married Miss Ellen F. Bishop of Willington. She died at East Woodstock nine years ago. There are no children.

Fred Bray, who for the past three weeks has been employed in the mill at Attwaugan, will have good reason to remember that he bears striking resemblance to Frank Weeden, the escaped maniac, whose supposed presence in this and nearby territory for a week has interested thousands of people and terrified not a few.

Bray came into the picture when he appeared at the railroad station here seeking a taxi to take him down to Attawaugan. Alert citizens were not slow to note that he answered the description of Weeden that has been broadcasted through southern New England and he was engaged in conversation until Captain William Jarvis could be summoned.

Captain Jarvis took Bray into custody, conducted him to the police station and felt certain that he had Weeden, for the prisoner's height and weight were identical with that of the missing man, his clothing and cap the same—and he had an eye missing. The only discrepancy was in the shade of his hair.

Bray insisted nevertheless, that he was not the hunted man, said that he had been working at Attawaugan the past three weeks and gave other information that was later checked up and found to be correct. So Bray was released and went back to his home and work.

A week from tomorrow, Friday, August 3, Registrars Hermon G. Carver and George Potvin will hold their first session of the year for the purpose of making an enrollment of voters and revising and perfecting the lists prior to the caucuses that will come in September and the annual town meeting on the first Monday in October. Similarly registrars in all towns hereabout will be in session on the same day and again on August 10. While this will be what is termed an off year in politics it may be so much as is ordinarily the case, for a presidential election comes next year and political activity seems destined to be much greater this fall than is customary in years when no state or national officers are to be elected.

The drought hereabouts was dented if not actually broken by the fine rain of Wednesday forenoon and the preceding night. The water shortage has become really serious in the agricultural districts hereabouts. Some ponds have practically dried up, rivers and brooks are unusually low and in numbers of instances farmers have had difficulty in getting sufficient water for their live stock. Streams and crops will both benefit through the rain, which was not sufficient though to bring the water supply back to its normal mid-summer level.

There is interest here in a car recently driven across the country from Oakland, Calif., to Putnam in 19 days. The owner of the machine is Charles Oatridge and he was accompanied by Mrs. Oatridge, who is a sister of Mrs. Emil John of North Woodstock. Mr. Oatridge is proprietor of a hotel at Oakland. With Mrs. Oatridge he is now at sea enroute to England for a visit with relatives.

There continues to be agitation among citizens over the extent to which Woodstock lake is being used for bathing this summer. Woodstock lake supplies water for domestic uses in the city of Putnam. Scores of campers who are at the lake from New York are bathing in its waters every day. One of the city's best known citizens expressed himself Wednesday as fearful that the bathing may result in a typhoid fever epidemic, in this city and said that he did not feel at all certain that even the best and most modern filters would be a protection against this possibility.

Attorney and Mrs. Arthur S. Macdonal were in Boston Wednesday.

Omer Desautels of this city has been ntified to appear in the town court at Danielson today to answer to a violation of the motor vehicle laws. He will be represented by Attorney Irving H. Miron.

Official attention will soon be given again to unlicensed dogs, several of which are said to be harbored about the city. Prosecutions may be anticipated in each case where the ownership of such dog is established.

Today brings another half-holiday for the store forces of Putnam and the customary outing regularly arranged for Thursday.

When a telephone company truck bound from this city to New London skidded and went into the ditch between Norwich and New London Tuesday, Joseph Driscoll of New London was thrown out and sustained a fracture of the leg. He was taken in a New London hospital.

Miss Lena Gibney, member of the traffic force at the Putnam central telephone station, has returned here after spending a vacation with her parents at their cottage at Newport.

Grangers from this city will be at Bates' grove, Webster lake, August 9, for the annual fild meet of Quinebaug Pomona grange. The event will bring several hundred people together.

Mr. and Mrs. Omer J. Milot are spending the week at Allerton, Mass. On Tuesday Mr. Milot attended a retail clothing merchants' conference in Boston.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Rich are spending a month with their daughter at Belmont, Mass.

The company will have an advantage over the other taxicab drivers in soliciting business for the drivers other than those of the taxicab company must stand within ten feet of the rear of their machines in soliciting patronage.

In the police court this forenoon, strangely enough, not a single penalization was imposed. The docket comprised 12 alleged automobile law violators, most of them charged with violation of the city ordinances relative to parking on Bank and State streets. In one instance, that of Calvin N. Edmunds of 42 Maple avenue, charged with reckless driving, the accused was not presented in court, the case having been disposed of without a trial. Edmunds operated his automobile through Main street last night at a rate of speed estimated by witnesses at 40 miles an hour, and while racing another machine, it is claimed. At the corner of Masonic street the machine skidded and before Edmunds could get the car under control it went to the sidewalk on the opposite side of the street and crashed through two show windows of the furrier store of E. M. Baline. This afternoon Thomas Ryan of 105 Blackhall street, owner of the automobile which it is claimed was racing with Edmunds' car, was ordered to appear in the police court tomorrow forenoon on a charge of reckless driving. Edmunds denied that he was racing and claimed that his car was not traveling at a speed greater than 15 miles an hour. Another case that was not heard, being continued, was that of Bernard Glassman of 244 Connecticut avenue, charged with reckless driving. Glassman, who obtained an operator's license but a week ago, operated his car on Bank street at such a speed that it skidded near the corner of Tilley street, finally going to the sidewalk and over it for a distance of 200 feet. Glassman was arrested by Sergeant Samuel Hick and while en route to the police station Glassman is accused of operating the machine at such a rate of speed that he was reprimanded.

Vincent Boragina of No. 107 Columbus avenue, New Haven, was arrested this afternoon by Sergeant Samuel Hick, charged with reckless driving. He furnished a bond for his appearance in the police court tomorrow morning. Boragina entered State street from Bank street and passed through the safety zone at a high rate of speed.

Miss Helen Gilmore of No. 13 Hope street, employed in the office of City Treasurer Herbert G. Huntley will begin her vacation of two weeks Monday next and will spend a part of her trip with friends in Boston.

Another hatchway on a business street was reported by the police this afternoon when Patrolman John Courtney discovered the metal covering to the entrance to the New London Salesroom, No. 90 Bank street, unsafe. The danger spot was reported to the highway commissioner. The hatchway at the entrance to the Akling Rubber company, which has been in a dangerous condition over a month has finally been repaired temporarily.

John Denney, 18, a prisoner at Mystic jail, made his escape this afternoon when he leaped from the window and plunged into Mystic river and managed to get away. The youth was under detention at the jail on a minor charge. He has an aunt, Mrs. Oddo of Shaw street, New London and it is among the possibilities that the escaped youth may come to New London. Sheriff James Brown of Mystic requested the New London authorities to be on the lookout for the boy.

Mrs. Florence Terrell of No. 13 Ashcraft road reported to the police tonight that she had suffered annoyance of late because of youths entering her garden and stealing and destroying vegetables.

The establishment of an office by the Yellow Taxi Co. has caused a grievance to be expressed by the owners of other public service machines and it is probable that these operators will endeavor to devise a scheme whereby they will be in a position to solicit passengers the same as the cab company.

New London's fire alarm went bad this morning at 5 o'clock. It woke up the sleepers and gave them a scare for a moment that there was a bad fire prevailing for the alarm sounded ten blasts, the signal of a general fire alarm. The bells on the fire houses were even more persistent in calling the sleepers out of bed for the bells tolled twenty times. The trouble was that electric wires had become tangled with the wires of the Gamewell system on the Northwest and had started the blasts of the steam whistle and the sound of the fire engine-house bells. The cause was soon found and the trouble remedied.

Police officers were stationed on Bank street between Golden and State street this evening to enforce what they termed a "joke" ordinance of the city council. Orders had been filed at the police station to instruct officers to notify automobilists who parked their cars between State street and Golden, on Bank street, not to remain more than thirty minutes, but the officers were told "not to make any arrests."

Ideas suggested by the councilors are not law until they are made into an ordinance and the existing ordinance is law until it is repealed or amended. Some automobile owners are understood to have defied the police last evening and allowed their machines to stand in front of or near the Capitol theatre all the evening. Such autoists were not arrested. The police said that the city councilors desired to try the ordinance as suggested on the dog and if the dog would stand it would be incorporated into law.

Darrow street has been improved by filling the street surface to the extent of more than a foot so that a grade for sidewalks may be established and cement laid for walks. The street has been a mudhole for years. It never should have been accepted in the condition in which it was when the city took it as one of the highways.

POETRY

TO WALDO EMERSON.

"We have the receipt of fern-seed; we walk invisible."

"I think you are more beholden to the night
Than to fern-seed for your walking invisible."

I smile—not better might I sigh than smile,
At my young, shywardness that wished to fly
"Receipt of fern-seed." For some little while
To walk unseen of any prying eye.
I said, 'Twas but detachment that I sought,
To better know my own good Comrade Thought!

I added, I had made—must keep—tryst
With Beauty, who had counseled Solitude—
I would be back again ere I was missed;
Whoever loved me would indulge my mood.
Nor would they strive the veiling charm to break,
Nor turn aside my hidden path to take.

And then, I moved untroubled by the crowd;
I softly stepped, and silence lapped me round.
I was but young—God knows I was not proud;
My venture was to me enchanted ground
Where I might pass unseen, but, soon as fain,
Into my human world return again.

I went my way, I kept me far from sight,
From jostling touch and ill-timed greeting free.
I, who was more beholden to the night
Than any charm that could requester me!
Now, deeper night and older solitude
Begin to close around my errant mood.

And when I walk invisible, indeed,
Who knows I may the genius be of all
Whom out of trodden ways their spirits lead?
Then I will answer to their lonely call
Who, straying, have strayed wider than they wise,
Who walk invisible—and are not missed.
—Edith M. Thomas, in Boston Transcript.

THE WRECK.

Its masts of night, its sails so free,
Had borne the scatheless keel
Through many a day of darkened sea;
And many a storm of steel:
When all the winds were calm, if met
(With home-returning prow)
With the lull
Of the waves
On a low, lee shore.

The crest of a conqueror
On many a brow was bright:
The dew of many an exile's eye
Had dimmed the dancing sight;
And for love and for victory
One welcome was in store
In the lull
Of the waves
On a low lee shore.

The voices of the night are mute
Beneath the moon's eclipse:
The silence of the fitful flute
Is on the dying lips.
The silence of my lonely heart
Is kept forevermore
In the lull
Of the waves
On a low lee shore.
—John Ruskin.

FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL

MARKET WAS DULL.

New York, July 25.—Evidently discouraged at their failure to bring about further liquidation, professional traders lifted the selling pressure after the first hour today and thereafter prices moved upward in extremely dull trading. Net changes of representative stocks were generally small.
Early pressure was leveled against western railroads, equipments, steels and oils, and while most of the rails closed fractionally lower on the day, partial recovery was made in numerous instances. Eastern rails moved briskly forward in mid-afternoon after announcement of the regular Delaware and Hudson dividend, in which there was a large short interest outstanding. Net gains, however, were largely fractional in this group.
Baldwin Locomotive led the recovery in that group, moving up nearly two points at one time and closing a point higher. American Car and Foundry Company also closed one point above yesterday's final quotations. Lima Locomotive yielded a point. Steel shares closed irregularly, net changes being confined to fractions.
American Can improved 1 1-2 points, Dupont 2 1-2 and numbers of miscellaneous industrials showed firmness in the late dealings. Atlantic Refinery closed five points off on the day.
Call money ruled unchanged at 4 3-4 per cent. Time money held firm at 5 1-4 per cent., and a fair volume of loans were made at this rate. Commercial paper rates continued at 5 to 5 1-4 per cent.
Demand sterling was steady around $4.59 3-8 and French francs were quoted at 5.93 cents, a one-point decrease. German marks established a new low at $1.50 or 1,000,000 and closed at .000015 cents.

GOVERNOR HAS SAGE FOUNDATION MAKE WOMEN'S FARM INVESTIGATION

The Russell Sage Foundation of New York has been engaged by Governor Templeton to make a study of the Connecticut State Farm for Women, to get to the bottom of difficulties which resulted in the resignation of Miss Anna M. Peterson as superintendent and offers by all but two of the directors to resign.

Rev. Dr. Hastings Hornell Hart, director of child helping, and Miss F. L. Hardy, one of his assistants appeared suddenly at the farm Tuesday and started their investigation, which is expected to be pushed to a speedy conclusion. Former Superintendent Peterson was in conference with the experts of the foundation for seven hours.

Mrs. Whitefield N. Thompson, of Hartford, chairman of the board of directors of the farm, confirmed a letter from Dr. Hart requesting an interview at her earliest convenience. Other directors have received somewhat similar communications. Mrs. Thompson, while courteously answering all questions, was reluctant to discuss the matter and emphasized that it was a "study" that the foundation was making as distinguished from an "investigation."

Reached by telephone at his home in Waterbury, following his return from an inspection of national guardsmen in camp at Niantic, Governor Templeton, while not denying the report, asked to be excused from any comment concerning the matter until the foundation's report of the study was in his hands.

It was learned, however, from an official of the state farm that the governor has given the foundation carte blanche in an effort to bring to the surface every particle of information having a bearing on the crisis caused by the upheaval in the board of directors and the refusal of Director Helen W. Rogers of Hamden to join her colleagues in a wholesale resignation movement. The governor has personally visited the farm three times in the past two weeks, officials admitted, and in conferences with officials of the Sage foundation, assured them that he would not permit any considerations, political or personal, to interfere with a complete analysis of the situation. They have been authorized, it is said, to require that any official books or other records of the institution be produced on demand.

In the stir caused by the disclosure that the foundation has been persuaded to interest itself in the case, it became known that Miss Helen H. Hazard, acting superintendent at the farm since Miss Peterson's resignation went into effect, had withdrawn her application for appointment as permanent superintendent. This Mrs. Thompson and Miss Hazard have confirmed. The reason given by Miss Hazard was that the requirements of the superintendency were greater than she cared to assume. She came to the state farm from her home in Rock Island, Ill., last year, and undertook the work of educational director, to which place she will revert upon the appointment of a permanent superintendent.

Miss Peterson will stay "on the ground" until the "investigation" is completed, having on that account abandoned, for the present, at least, plans for a summer course at Columbia university.

Dr. Hart, who needs the survey of the Russell Sage Foundation has made similar surveys in several other states in fifteen years that he has been identified with the foundation.

FORT HILL TRAFFIC WILL BE ONE WAY

Traffic will be restricted to one way on Fort Hill, Groton, next week when the Fred Kiess construction force begins laying trap rock on the road which is now being widened through orders of the state highway department.

The work, which began two weeks ago, is now shaping up so that the bed will be ready for the rock by the end of the week. The road at the corners is 22 feet wide and is sufficiently banked to insure some safety to the automobiles which pass down the hill on a wet day.

To enforce the one-way traffic while the trap rock is being laid men will be stationed at either end of the job 24 hours of the day and will stop traffic from both directions periodically in order that two cars will not have to pass while the road is closed on one side.

Checking State High'y Truck Speeders

After receiving numerous reports of speeding by motor trucks driven by employes of the state highway department, Highway Commissioner John A. Macdonald has taken steps to remedy the situation.

In letters to Superintendent Robert T. Hurley of the state police department and Motor Vehicle Commissioner Robbins B. Stoeckel, he urged them to strictly enforce the laws relating to speeding as far as the highway department automobiles were concerned.

Also, in letters to chauffeurs in the employ of the department, he advised them that if the state police or motor vehicle department found cause to discipline them for infractions of the law, their connection with the department would be immediately severed.

How to Rid the Arms of Objectionable Hairs

(Aids to Beauty)

A simplified method is here given for the quick removal of hairy or fuzzy growths and rarely is more than one treatment required: Mix a stiff paste with some powdered delatone and water, apply to hairy surface and after 2 or 3 minutes rub off, wash the skin and every hair has vanished. This simple treatment cannot cause injury, but care should be exercised to get real delatone

CONNECTICUT IS TENTH IN INFANT MORTALITY

The state of Oregon in 1922 won the distinction of having proportionately fewer deaths of infants under one year of age in cities of 11,000 and over, than twenty-six other states included in the United States birth registration area.

The figures, compiled by the American Child Health Association, show that in four cities of 10,000 and over Oregon had an infant mortality rate last year of 58.6. This means that in the cities referred to only 58.6 babies under one year of age died out of every 1,000 births in the same period.

Nine cities in the state of Washington came second with 58.9; Minnesota's eleven cities, third, with 60.3; and California, fourth, with 64.6 in twenty-five cities. The other twenty-three of the twenty-seven states, with the number of cities over 10,000 and the infant mortality rate were as follows:

Standing	State	Number of cities	Infant Mortality rate

Captain Nelson J. Huntley of Niantic, died Wednesday morning, the result of a shock which he suffered a week ago last Friday from which he never regained consciousness. He was 86 years of age. Captain Huntley was born in Niantic on Sept. 24, 1837, the son of Elisha and Mary Tinker Huntley. He was a lifelong resident of the village and at the age of 17 he went to sea, following the water more than 50 years.

Captain Huntley sailed many boats, mostly schooners for himself and for Fall River business firms, carrying cargoes between Boston and South American and to European ports.

He retired 15 years ago to spend the remainder of his life at home. Of late years he suffered from rheumatism which prevented him from engaging in his usual activities. He was one of the oldest members of Bayview lodge A. F. and A. M. and also a member of the Congregational church at Niantic.

On July 24, 1867, he married Ella A. Parker, and it was the day following his 56th wedding anniversary that he died. He is survived by his wife; a daughter, Mrs. Gurdon B. Coates, of Niantic; two grandchildren, Mrs. George A. Garrett of Hartford and Miss Marjorie Coates of Niantic; and a great grandson, George Coates Garret.

FINDS MILTON CARD NOT CRIMINALLY LIABLE

Milton Card of Groton, whose automobile on the evening of April 15 felled and fatally injured Mrs. Leo W. Brogan, wife of the assistant purchasing agent of the New London Ship and Engine company, in front of the company's plant in Groton, is "not criminally responsible" for the accident, according to the findings of Coroner J. J. Desmond.

Coroner Desmond said he regarded the accident as a "distressing" one but found no grounds to attach blame to the driver and owner of the car, who did not see Mrs. Brogan. Because of the heavy rain of that dark night, the coroner said, Miss Frances Morrison, who was riding with Card, did not see anyone in their path, while Card saw the young girl who was walking behind the couple for whom he swung out to the left side of the road but failed to see Mr. and Mrs. Brogan as he swung back to the right.

"I was working in a blind alley," Mr. Desmond said, "until the young girl for whom Card turned out offered her knowledge of the accident. Her parents had seen in the paper that she was wanted in connection with the inquiry and told her it was her duty to communicate with me, which she did."

Among the feminine crowned heads of Europe the queen of the Belgians is the most ardent and accomplished sportswoman.

STORRS COLLEGE STUDENT COMMISSIONED AT DEVENS

Six students of New England colleges, who are attending the Reserve Officers Training Camp at Camp Devens, were commissioned in the officers Reserve Corps Tuesday following a review before Major-General Andre W. Williams of Sunderland, Mass., also from the Massachusetts Agricultural College, went a silver cup for proficiency in pistol practice. His score was 83 out of a possible 100. Second in this judgement was M. E. Clark of Newport, Vt., from Norwich University.

Ralph S. Shaw of Lonsdale, R. I., of Rhode Island State College, was awarded a gold medal as the "best student in five platoon." Silver medals for the "best men" in each of the four remaining platoons were bestowed upon Edwin R. Guise of Brookline, Boston University; Luis A. Ferre of Ponce Puerto Rico; M. I. T.; Nelson A. Butler of Manchester, N. H., Norwich University and William H. True, Jr., of Portland, Maine, from the University of Maine.

While the training included in the First Corps Area includes the New England Colleges, students enrolled at these institutions at camp this summer included Maine, Mass., Vermont, New Hampshire, Illinois, Rhode Island, Conn., Penn., New York, Alabama, New Jersey, District of Columbia, Porto Rico, Cuba, New Mexico, and China.

LAWN PARTY FOR STATE HOSPITAL WOMEN PATIENTS

Some 500 women patients and the entire staff of the Norwich state hospital were entertained at a lawn party Tuesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Franklin S. Wilcox, at Brewsters Neck. The affair was a most pleasant one and the patients and members of the staff enjoyed themselves.

Games and dancing were enjoyed and an entertainment was provided. Miss Ruth Burdsall was charming in her interpretive dance, in costume, another feature being a gypsy dance rendered by her mother, also in costume. Mrs. Burdsall also took the part of a fortune teller and had her tent in one corner of the garden. A pleasing musical programme was rendered by Swahn's Orchestra, which also played for the dancing.

The refreshments consisted of hot dogs, pink lemonade and holly pops, and were prepared by John Vetter, the head chef of the hospital. Tables were set in the rose arbor in the garden, an excellent setting for the affair.

Mrs. Wilcox was assisted in serving by Miss Maude Adams, Miss Nettie Bryan, Miss Dorothy Rose, and Miss Lucy Wilcox, stenographers at the hospital, and about 20 of the women nurses.

SOCIAL WORKERS MET AT BRIDE BROOK TEA HOUSE

The Social Workers' association was organized at the state hospital in Norwich last May and its membership includes women engaged in social work in the two counties.

ONE MONTH IS LIMIT TO LEARN TO DRIVE

Any person who for any period of time exceeding one month drives a motor vehicle over the highways of the state accompanied by a licensed operator, but without a license of his own, can be successfully prosecuted under sections 15 and 20 of Chapter 400 of the Public Acts of 1921, commonly known as the Motor Vehicle law, according to an opinion rendered by Attorney General Frank E. Healy Tuesday.

The opinion was handed down at the request of Commissioner of Motor Vehicles Robbins B. Stoeckel, and for the first time places a definite time limit on the instruction period of a person learning to drive a motor vehicle.

The underlying purpose of the law, as viewed by Mr. Healy, is to provide a method whereby a person may safely learn to drive without affecting the liability of either the owner of the car in which he is learning, or of the person who is teaching him.

The intention of the legislature is clearly to make all persons over eighteen years of age secure a license before operating a motor vehicle on the highways of the state. It also planned to have competent authority pass upon the physical and mental qualification of the applicant in the interest of the safety of the public.

To permit an unlicensed operator to run a motor vehicle over the highways of the state for an indefinite time, when accompanied by a licensed operator, is not only reading out of the law the word "instruction," but is also a clear violation of the declaration of rights. It would grant to a certain class of people an exclusive right to free use of the highways without any supervision by constituted authority.

By DAVID CORY

THE GOOSE SENTINEL'S STORY.

Now, let me see where we left off in the last story. Oh, yes, now I remember! The Goose Sentinel was showing Little Jack Rabbit the statue of the marble goose squirting water out of his mouth. Yes, yes, that was it. Now I know.

"This is Goose Fountain," said the old sentinel. "Sit down and I'll tell you the story for we are very proud of our ancestry, let me tell you."

Hopping on a stone bench that ran around the fountain and while the water fell in sparkling drops from the bill of the big marble goose into the big marble basin where seven little geese swam around and around and thirteen gold fish darted hither and thither, Little Jack Rabbit kept very quiet and the old goose sentinel began his story.

"Many, many years ago—about two thousand three hundred years, the Gauls, a wild race who lived in the countries which are now France and Germany, defeated the Romans and entered the city of Rome. All the people in the city fled to the country except a few who took refuge on a steep hill called the Tarpeian Rock. But the Roman Senators who were very brave wouldn't leave their houses, and putting on their long robes, sat on their front doorsteps and quietly awaited the coming of the enemy. It must have been a very wonderful sight to see those old men awaiting in their beloved city the coming of the barbarians, who killed them all without mercy.

After that, the cruel barbarians made up their minds to capture the capitol on the high rock I've just mentioned, so one dark night they climbed up but just as they reached the top, an old goose named Cackles saw them and work up the Romans who hurled the Gauls down the steep hill. So you see, Little Jack Rabbit, if it hadn't been for that goose sentinel, who was wide awake and not sound asleep like the Roman sentinel, Rome would have been captured that night by the Gauls. Ever since that time, we have had a sentinel keep watch over Gooseville and I am very proud to be that Goose Watchman.

STORY OF THE STONEHAM LOAN TO E. M. FULLER & CO.

Former Sheriff "Tom" Foley Tells How He Was Importuned to Urge Stoneham to Advance $137,000—Had Lent the Brokerage Firm $15,000 of His Own Money Because of Friendship For Nellie Sheehan—Refused to Accept a Note—Has Lent Money to People All His Life, Has Never Taken a Note and Never Will.

New York, July 26.—The philosophy of an East Side politician, whose pocketbook was the common property of his friends, was expounded today by former Sheriff "Tom" Foley, veteran Tammany leader, testifying at a hearing in bankruptcy involving the defunct bucketing firm of E. M. Fuller and Company.

"I have been a damned fool at my life, sir," said the ex-sheriff, in trying to explain to Referee Harold P. Coffin why he had lent members of the shaky firm $15,000 of his own money and $137,500 belonging to Charles A. Stoneham, part owner of the Giants, just before the brokerage house failed for $4,000,000 a year ago.

Reiterating that he alone had come to the aid of Edward M. Fuller and his partner W. Frank McGee, because of friendship for Nellie Sheehan, McGee's former wife, Foley said:

"I gave the money to them. They asked me to help them out with a few thousand dollars to keep their firm alive, after a run which they said they paid out more than $2,000,000.

McGee hadn't talked to me three minutes when he had me $15,000." He offered me a note. 'Note,' I said, 'what the—good is a note? You just pay me back when you can.'"

"Mr. Councillor, I have lent money to people all my life and I expect to keep on. I have never taken a note from anyone and I never shall. I don't know the value of money today and I don't care anything about it. Whatever I have my friends are welcome to at any time. They know that, and so do you. And so does everybody that knows me.

"You ought to have seen them plead with me," said Mr. Foley, describing the actions of McGee and Fuller when they asked him to go to Mr. Stoneham and ask for money to lend them. "They grabbed me by the lapels of my coat and coaxed. Just a few more thousand, they said, would keep them alive.

"I fell for it and went to Mr. Stoneham. Mr. Stoneham said to me, 'Tom, for any other purpose but how to put into Wall street. Lay off that stuff, Tom. It's no good. I never want to see Wall street again.' I prevailed, however, and got Mr. Stoneham to advance the money.

"Why did Fuller and McGee pick on Stoneham," asked Mr. Chadbourne.

"Because they knew he had ready money," was the answer.

"Do you expect Charles A. Stoneham to ask you to pay him the $137,500 which he loaned you to advance to Fuller and McGee, he was asked.

"Of course not," he cried, "Mr. Stoneham and I are friends. He wouldn't ask me for the money, but I'm going to pay it to him. I'm going to pay it to him, some of it this very summer."

Under close questioning Foley said he was a good friend of Stoneham's and that Fuller and McGee "used my friendship."

"I'm sure there never was any agreement between Fuller and Stoneham," he added.

His questioners endeavored in vain to get him to admit he or someone for him had tried to use political influence to befriend the brokers.

Chadbourne then questioned him about his assertion that he never knew the value of money.

"You know when you put money in Liberty bonds the investment is not so high in returns as a risky investment?" the lawyer asked.

"I haven't invested in Liberty bonds," countered Foley. "Let me explain—I started saving so much a day when I was a young man. In three or four years, I drew it out and started a friend in business and later on another friend in business. Why, I've got the balance in the old Bowery bank since then—it was 1881 and its only $26."

Really "investments," of his lifetime, he said, consisted only of buying property for his old saloon and a piece of property in Brooklyn.

"I've given all the money I ever had away—it's an open book; ask anybody, they know," he added.

Resenting a question as to whether he had been under any obligation to McGee, Foley said:

"No, not to him or to any man. I've kept myself that way. I want it understood that I'm under obligation to no man. I've been helping them all my life, because I felt like helping my fellow men."

"How many times have you made $150,000 gifts?" he was asked.

"Never before. I just got hooked in this. Yes, I've never turned down any request for money, and I'll continue to do so."

Then came in a clash when Foley's counsel threatened a grand jury investigation of Referee Coffin for ruling out a bitter attack Foley had made on William Randolph Hearst, the publisher, and was finally silenced by a threat of being adjudged in contempt of court.

GERMANY IN NEED OF NEW CURRENCY SYSTEM

Berlin, July 26.—(By the A. P.)—Germany urgently needs a new currency system, in the almost unanimous opinion of the Berlin financial writers who are again indulging obituaries for the fast sinking mark. Now that the government has virtually abandoned its attempts to "peg" the mark by controlling the traffic in foreign currencies, the bourse and financial circles profess to see a cataclysmic collapse of the nation's currency already at hand or as a near eventuality.

With the withdrawal of the government's restrictive regulations, the last 48 hours have witnessed a hectic rise in the dollar and pound sterling, with an accompanying advance of prices in all branches of trade and commerce, the upward movement assuming such momentum that the government is apparently at loss for new corrective measures.

It is no longer a question of how things are to be reckoned, but in what they are to be paid for, says the Boersen Courier, which recalls that the roman empire collapsed because it ran out of gold.

Germany," it observes, "is indebted to modern technique for her ability temporarily to substitute paper for gold and to sustain her makeshift currency with her rapidly disintegrating credit."

In the opinion of the newspaper, Germany is worse off than the empire of the Caesars in that she is now a country without a currency. The government's duty in this transitional period, says the paper, is to devise a temporary medium of payment which would be covered by some variety of tangible assets or commodities.

Testing Problems In Aerial Warfare

New York, July 26.—Problems in Aerial warfare, such as would face the United States in the event of attack by an enemy fleet were begun today when a squadron of airplanes was launched from the naval aircraft carrier Langley in the North river. The airplanes visualized conditions that would be met in actual combat.

The demonstrations will be continued for the rest of the week. On Friday assistant secretary of the navy Roosevelt, Governor Smith of New York, Governor Sellser of New Jersey, Governor Templeton of Connecticut and Mayor Hylan will witness the exercises.

The airplanes hopped off from the flying deck of the Langley, a superstructure 484 feet long and 65 feet wide. The aircraft simulated conditions that would be faced in war by scout planes that search the sea for 500 miles from the coast and fighting, observation and bombing machines.

Captain S. H. R. Doyle, commanding the Langley, was in charge of the aircraft operations. The vessel is a converted collier, of 14,700 tons and 15 knots speed, can carry 30 fully equipped airplanes and has storage space for 100 unassembled machines.

The Langley is at present the only vessel of its type in the United States Navy. Two battle cruisers, the Saratoga and the Lexington, are now being converted into aircraft carriers.

Under the five-power treaty the United States and Great Britain were each allotted a total of 135,000 tons of aircraft carriers of between 10,000 and 27,000 tons. Japan insisted on converting two unfinished battlecruisers which were in excess of the tonnage limit, into carriers. That was agreed to, and the United States was permitted to transform the Saratoga and the Lexington These vessels, when changed to carriers, will each have a tonnage of 33,000 and a speed of 35 knots in heavy seas. Their flying decks will measure 825 by 100 feet each, capable of sending to battle between 100 and 150 planes.

The Saratoga is now at a shipyard at Camden, N. J., and the Lexington at Fore River, Mass. The Saratoga will probably be in commission by 1925. The new vessels, it was said, will be the fastest fighting craft in the world.

At present Great Britain has six carriers in commission and Japan one, with two others building. The Langley is recorded by naval authorities as merely an experimental craft. With the Saratoga and the Lexington in commission the United States will have 69,000 tonnage for aircraft carriers remaining unbuilt under the treaty. There is no limit to such craft under 10,000 tonnage.

On Monday the Langley will sail for Newport, R. I., where officers at the Naval War College will be shown the effectiveness of aircraft in warfare. Later the Langley will take part in the naval manoeuvers off the Rhode Island and Massachusetts coasts.

RUHR FRONTIER OPEN TO THE REST OF GERMANY

Dusseldorf, July 26.—(By the A. P.)—The frontier between the Ruhr and rest of Germany, after having been closed to ordinary travellers since July 1, was again opened at midnight last night. Thousands of Germans passed back and forth; many of them had been kept away from their homes when the closure order was put on by the Ruhr authorities.

The frontier was first closed by the French as a penalty for the bombing of a train at Duisburg, and applied only to private travellers. It was to have continued until July 16. Just before the expiration of this period, however, an incident occurred near Westofen, a member of a French patrol being kidnapped by German security police, aided by other Germans, who were suspected of attempting to evade the French customs officers. The Rhineland high commission, as a penalty, extended closure until July 26.

The unusual number of crossings today is attributed to rumors current in the last few days that the occupation authorities contemplated again closing the frontier, but thus far there are no indications that such a measure is being considered.

NEGOTIATING AMERICAN TREATY WITH TURKEY

Lausanne, July 26.—(By the A. P.)—The American delegation has asked the turks for some assurance in the proposed Turko-American treaty, or otherwise, that minority peoples, like the armenians and greeks, shall be properly protected. Ismet Pasha has submitted the matter to the Angora government, together with the question of arbitration of American claims, and awaits an answer.

Ismet pointed out that a minority assurance involves a unilateral act by Turkey, because the United States is not a member of the League of Nations, which supervises the minority treaties Turkey signed with certain powers.

The fate of the American treaty is still uncertain. The turks argue that the state department should present data relative to the nature and extent of the claims, and if unavailable at the present time the subject should be set aside for further examination.

Ultimatum in Miners Wage Negotiations

Operators Reject Miners' Demand of the Closed Shop And the Check Off in Anthracite Industry.

Atlantic City, N. J., July 26.—(By the A. P.)—An ultimatum, demanding establishment of the closed shop and the checkoff throughout the anthracite industry, with a strike on September 1 as the penalty for rejection, was flung into the joint wage negotiations conference today by the miners and refused point blank by the operators.

All that prevented the immediate collapse of negotiations after the miners' declared there was "No more use in confring," was their concession to the operators' petition for a truce and another session tomorrow in order that both sides might "sleep on the question and some one might have a change of heart."

The session was devoted wholly to a discussion of the miners' demand for "complete recognition of the union" including general inauguration of the closed shop and the check off system of collecting dues from the payroll.

After the conference Mr. Levis said:

"The making of a new wage agreement is contingent on the operators giving full consideration to the United Mine Workers of America. The relationship between the officers and the men engaged in the industry requires such recognition. Such a relationship has existed for a quarter century in the bituminous coal fields and the anthracite miners are within their rights in asking equal consideration.

"Granting this demand will not add a single penny to the cost of anthracite and concession on this point is essential to carry out the recommendations of the United States coal commission in the matter of penalties for breach of contract. The mine workers are insistent on this point and will continue in that attitude."

Operators contended that compliance with the demand meant the closed shop and would mean the enforced exodus of every non-union miner from the anthracite regions of Pennsylvania. S. D. Warriner, spokesman for the operators, said:

"We do have fully recognized United Mine Workers of America as a contracting party in accordance with the Roosevelt award after the 1902 strike, and the Wilson award of 1920. Their officers and agents are the recognized people with whom we do business and confer to settle disputes relative to labor matters, in accordance with our agreement.

"The agreement to which the union heretofore has subscribed has been one under which any one could work in the mines in accordance with his constitutional right so to do.

"If he elects to become a member of the union he is protected against discrimination by any employer. The recognition insisted upon by Mr. Lewis is on the closed shop proposition under which no one can work in the anthracite fields unless he is a member of his organization. Thereby depriving anybody who may not so elect of his constitutional right to earn a living at his chosen vocation.

"The operator is also to be compelled to collect from every man working in the anthracite industry, exclusive of clerical and managerial occupations such fines, dues, and assessments as the union may dictate."

TELEPHONE STRIKE HAS BEEN DECLARED OFF

Boston, July 26.—A rush of applicants for reinstatement in every local exchange in the affected territory signalized the ending of the New England telephone operators' strike this afternoon, officials of the New England Telephone and Telegraph company announced late today. Approximately 3,800 members of the telephone operators' department, International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, were affected by the order of the regional council declaring the strike ended at 3 o'clock. The girls left their posts on June 26 to enforce a demand for increased pay and a seven-hour dya.

Hundreds of the former strikers cannot be immediately re-employed, it was announced at telephone company headquarters. Every exchange in New England, according to company officials, with the exception of Lawrence and Lynn, is operating with a normal or greater than normal force. The absorption of the majority of the former strikers will be accomplished by replacing temporary operators and recruits unfitted for the work by the old employes, it was stated. The company has remained firm in its decision not to discharge recruits to make room for returning strikers.

TWO POLICEMEN SHOT AND KILLED IN NEW YORK

New York, July 26.—Two policemen were shot and killed tonight when they overtook a man and a woman in a taxicab after a chase that led over Queensboro bridge and ended at Sixty-fourth street and Second avenue. The screams of the woman drew another patrolman to the scene, but the assailants escaped.

The patrolmen were Charles Reynolds and Frank Romanelli. The shooting occurred not far from the society colony established on the upper East Side by leaders of New York's "Four Hundred."

Witnesses to the shooting said the man in the cab fired both shots, drawing his pistol as soon as the taxicab stopped, and giving the officers no chance to raech for their weapons. They said the man then pointed his pistol at the driver of the taxi, shouting "Go on, or I'll give it to you." The cab disappeared in the darkness of Second avenue.

BIG SEIZURE OF LIQUOR WAS MADE AT WESTPORT

Benjamin Gottlieb of 1134 Prospect place and Louis Epstein of 1837 Park place, Brooklyn, in charge of the truck, were taken into custody and with the truck and contents taken to Bridgeport. Arraigned before U. S. Commissioner Hugh J. Lavery, they were held in bonds of $1,000 each for hearing tomorrow morning. Bonds of $700 were fixed for the truck. It was one of the largest of recent seizures.

WOODROW WILSON BREAKS SILENCE ON WORLD AFFAIRS

Former President Warns That Neglect of Spiritual Life is the Real Cause of World Unrest—Declares That Our Civilization Cannot Survive Materially Unless It Be Redeemed Spiritually—It is a Final Challenge to Our Churches To Our Political Organizations, and to Our Capitalists.

Boston, July 26.—(By the A. P.)—Former President Woodrow Wilson, writing under the caption, "The Road Away From Revolution" for the August number of the Atlantic Monthly, sounds a note of warning that our civilization cannot survive materially unless it be redeemed spiritually.

This is the first time since his illness that Mr. Wilson has made public his views upon present day problems in the United States and throughout the world. They will be preserved in permanent form between covers.

"In these doubtful and anxious days when all the world is at unrest and look which way you will the road ahead seems darkened by shadows which portend dangers of many kinds. It is," says the one who commanded the ship of state during the world war, "only common prudence that we should look about us and attempt to assess the causes of distress and the most likely means of removing them."

Then avoiding the partisan as he analyses the existing state of American civilization, the writer goes briefly to the root of the matter by making essentially what is a religious appeal for a better understanding between the "haves" and the "have nots."

"Real ground for the universal unrest," he asserts, "Lies deep at the sources of the spiritual life of our time, and leads to revolution."

The cause of the Russian revolution, which he calls "the outstanding event of its kind in our age" was, in his view, a "systematic denial to the great body of Russians of the rights and privileges which all normal men desire and must have if they are to be contented and within reach of happiness."

What has this to do with America? "It was against capitalism." He declares, "that the Russian leaders directed their attack and it is against capitalism under one name or another that the discontented classes everywhere draw their indictment."

Everywhere, he says, there are thoughtful men who believe that capitalism is indispensable to civilization, but he goes on to ask: "Is the capitalistic system unimpeachable?"

"Is it not true," the inquiry continues, "That capitalists have often seemed to regard the men whom they used as mere instruments of profit, whose physical and mental powers it was legitimate to exploit? Ought we not to seek a way to remove such offenses and make life itself clean for those who will share honorably and cleanly in it?

"The world has been made safe for democracy. There need now be no fear that any such mad design as that entertained by the insolent and ignorant Hohenzollerns and their counsellors may prevail against it. But democracy has not yet made the world safe against irrational revolution That supreme task which is nothing less than the salvation of civilization, now faces democracy, insistent imperative. There is no escaping it unless everything we have built up is presently to fall in ruin about us, and the United States, as the greatest of democracies, must undertake it.

"The road that leads away from revolution is clearly marked, for it is defined by the nature of men and of organized society. It therefore behooves us to study very carefully and very candidly the exact nature of the task and the means of its accomplishment. . . . The sum of the whole matter is this, that our civilization cannot survive materially unless it be redeemed spiritually. . . . Here is the final challenge to our churches to our political organizations, and to our capitalists—to every one who fears God or loves his country."

TROLLEY HIT AUTOMOBILE STALLED ON THE TRACKS

Mystic, July 26.—Half way between Mystic and Noank as the 3.23 trolley this afternoon left Mystic for New London it collided with a Ford beach wagon transporting six workmen of Mistuxet Water company of Stonington to their homes. Where the accident occurred is known as Cedar road and just as the trolley came to the crossroad the motorman, Frank Porter, of Noank, blew the whistle of the car twice, as a Ford car stalled on the trolley tracks. The trolley was coasting along slowly and collided with the automobile and pushed it to one side, clear of the tracks.

The occupants of the machine were thrown out on the road and four men received cuts and bruises about the head. The two other men received cuts, a dislocated hip and shoulder. One man was taken to the Lawrence hospital at New London and the others were treated by Dr. Myers of Mystic, who was called, and then they were sent to their homes in Stonington by taxi. Both the motorman and conductor did everything in their power to prevent the accident. This trip was a regular one out of Mystic, the car having left on time and having been preceded by a trolley sent to New London from Mystic ahead of the regular car to take home the Methodist Sunday school members who had been on an outing at Ocean Beach. The first car reached its destination all right. At the time of the accident there were seven passengers aboard the car that collided with the machine. The beach wagon was demolished, the front wheels, engine, hood and radiator were bent, while the rear wheel, body and seat were smashed.

The conductor in charge of the car was Palmer Brown of Mystic.

But he did "knock off" long enough to attend the annual "Edison Pioneers" dinner, and to answer a million "Edison questions" put by the reporters.

WARD AGAIN INDICTED FOR FIRST DEGREE MURDER

White Plains, N. Y., July 26.—Walter S. Ward, wealthy baker's son, today was indicted for the second time for first degree murder in connection with the shooting of Clarence E. Peters, of Haverhill, Mass., an ex-sailor, near the Kensico reservoir on May 16, 1922.

With the confident smile that never has deserted him, Ward appeared in court and pleaded not guilty. He was held without bail for trial September 4.

The first time that Ward was indicted was June 15, 1922. After a complicated legal battle, he obtained dismissal of the indictment when the county prosecutor's office declined to go to trial. That was last January.

Recently Peter's parents appealed to Governor Smith to re-open the case, and an extraordinary grand jury was sworn in to hear evidence presented this time by Attorney General Carl Sherman.

The handing down of today's indictment was not unexpected, as it had been reported yesterday that the state had closed its case and that Supreme Court Justice Wagner would take the bench this morning to receive the juries report.

The reading of the indictment was dramatic.

Ward, entering the court room with his lawyers, one of whom carried a brown bag belonging to his client, shook hands with an attendant he had known in New Rochelle and took his seat. Justice Wagner handed deputy sheriff a warrant to be served on Ward, the warrant was served, and a copy of the indictment was handed Isaac N. Mills, of defense counsel.

The clerk of the court then read the indictment. Ward meanwhile displayed no motion.

Mills then demanded a speedy trial, asking that the case go on the calendar two weeks from next Monday.

"A few weeks will make a great deal of difference to a man seeking more daylight," said Mills.

Mr. Sherman said he also desired a speedy trial, but that it would take time to subpoena witnesses. Justice Wagner then fixed on September 4 and ordered 150 talesmen drawn. He added that his court would be continued until the date of trial so that either side could submit motions to him.

Ward then was led to the Watchter county jail, in which he once before had been briefly imprisoned. Cameras recorded his march.

Fitch today ordered all law enforcement officers of Mason county to stop all tourists attempting to enter or cross the county Sunday, when a local campaign to enforce the state's all but forgotten "blue laws" is to be started at the behest of local church workers.

Under the Prosecuting Attorney's order all theatre performances, dances, swimming, boating, fishing, baseball and automobile riding will be forbidden on the Sabbath.

No purchase will be made of any sort. Soda fountains, drug stores, garages and every other place of ousiness is to be closed from midnight Saturday until the same hour Sunday.

The state law has been on the statute books for years but has been ignored in recent years.

STEPPED IN FRONT OF TRAIN AND WAS CUT IN TWO

Meriden, July 26.—Peter Lupkevich, 39, of 84 Veteran street, factory worker, was killed on the New Haven road here by a New Haven-Hartford commuters train at 7:20 this morning. Dr. E. T. Bradstreet, medical examiner, said that circumstances indicated suicide. The engineer, Frank Brown, of Springfield, said that he saw the man on the tracks as the train neared the depot and when the engine was about a dozen feet from him the man stepped in front of it. He was cut in two. He leaves a wife and two children.

Eugene Baribeault, 17, Charles Carpentier, 18, and Howard Stone, 17, of East Providence, R. I., were in the local police court Thursday morning charged with the theft of an automobile belonging to Edward C. Lincoln of 98 Maple avenue, this city. The act was committed Monday night and the machine was captured Tuesday morning in Manchester, after an exciting chase by the police of that city who fired five bullets into the rear tires of the pursued car before it was brought to a stop by the culprits. Baribeault and Carpenter entered pleas of guilty and Stone pleaded nolo contendere. Judge Frank H. Foss fixed bonds of $500 in each case and the three were bound over to the next criminal term of the Windham county superior court. Stone's parents were present at the court session and furnished bonds for their son. Carpenter and Baribeault are being held at the police station to await bondsmen.

AUTO THIEVES ESCAPE FROM WILLIMANTIC STATION

Willimantic, July 26.—Charles Carpenter, 18, and Eugene Baribeault, 17, two members of a trio of East Providence, R. I. young men who were bound over to the next criminal term of the Windham county superior court at the session of the local police court this morning, broke jail shortly after 4 o'clock this afternoon and were still at large at the time this story went to press. The two escaped convicts and Howard Stone, 17, were charged with the theft of an automobile, the property of Edward C. Lincoln of 98 Maple avenue, this city on Monday night, the car being taken in Manchester. Carpenter and Baribeault pleaded guilty to the charge and Stone nollo ontendre. Bonds of $50 in each case were fixed by Judge Frank H. Foss. Stone's parents furnished bonds for his release and the other two men were being held at the local police station.

The escape was made through the rear door of the cell room corridor leading into the police court chamber where the men left the building through a window in the rear of the structure. Acting Chief Allan MacArthur stated that it was the duty of the day officer to lock the door leading in to the corridor in question, immediately after the session of the police court each morning. Presuming that the door had been locked in the customary manner, the chief official allowed the men to roam about the corridor. He went in and spoke to the men about 4 o'clock but when he returned again some forty minutes later they had disappeared.

Police officers were despatched to search the city and vicinity and telephone calls were sent to the surrounding towns. At the time of the escape Baribeault wore a blue suit with light stripes and black shoes and Carpenter wore a light shabby suit and tan slippers. The men had talked some of joining the navy and it is probable that they intend to enroll at some station.

By DAVID CORY

JACK RESCUES THE PRINCE.

Now, let me see where we left off yesterday. Oh, yes, I remember. Little Jack Rabbit was in Gooseville sitting on the stone bench that circled the fountain where the big marble goose squirted water through its bill

"I want to save your beautiful rose."

"You are very kind to tell me how the geese saved Rome," said the little bunny boy to the Goose Sentinel, "but now, I must be on my way,
For he who tarries much too long
Will find he has been doing wrong.
One must be up and on his way,
And not spend too much time in play."
and, with a bow, he hopped away and soon Gooseville was far, far behind.

By and by, he came to a little house in the center of a garden. On a big red rose, the witch pushed her head Little Jack Rabbit didn't know that this beetle was really a prince under the spell of a wicked witch who lived in the little house.

Just as Little Jack Rabbit was about to knock the ugly insect off the lovely red rose, the witched pushed her head out of the window:

"What are you doing in my garden?"

"Nothing wrong," answered the bunny boy, lifting his khaki cap with the flaming gold feather in it, "I want to save your lovely rose." and he shook the stem until the ugly beetle fell to the ground.

This made the old witch so angry that she jumped right through the window into the garden.

"If you don't leave my garden, I'll turn you into a blackbird or maybe a goat!" she hissed, and leaning over she tried to pick up her wand, but would you believe it that wand turned into a little green snake and glided away through the bushes.

All of a suden, the poor beetle said in a sad, sad voice:

"Once I was a handsome prince
With eyes of blue and yellow hair.
And in my castle by the sea
I sang to ladies fair.

But now, alas, this wicked witch
Has held me in her spell,
And I must be a crawly thing
And in this garden dwell."

"Be quiet!" screamed the wicked witch and she tried to stamp upon the poor beetle, but Little Jack Rabbit was too quick for her. Leaning over, he touched him with the gold feather and the next instant a handsome prince stood before them.

With a howl of rage, the wicked witch jumped on an old broomstick and flew away, over the treetops and over the steeples over the villages crowded with people and the last I heard of her she, had fallen into a pond and turned into a fresh water crab with a big ugly claw that pinched the little fishes' tails and made them cry, and in the next story I'll tell you more of little Jack Rabbit's adventures.

DUNDEE'S AMBITION IS REALIZED AS HE WINS WORLD TITLE FROM CRIQUI

Polo Grounds, New York, July 26.—(By the A. P.)—The featherweight championship of the world, in French hands for less than two months, came back to the United States tonight when Johnny Dundee, grizzled Italian-American veteran, battered his way to victory over Eugene Criqui, gallant ex-poilu, in a gruelling 15-round struggle that was never in doubt from start to finish.

Dundee, rising to the greatest heights of his long and embattled career, won decisively all the way, but only in the face of a game and courageous stand that will go down among the most thrilling in prize ring history. The judges' decision crowning Dundee as the new titleholder was drowned in a wild outburst of cheering, but in defeat the little Frenchman was accorded an ovation that rang out above even that for the victor.

A Hopeless Battle.

Criqui's was a hopeless battle from the first round. Floored for a count of nine hardly before the initial bell had sounded, he somehow managed to weather the storm only to be knocked down twice, once for a count of seven and again for nine seconds in the seconds in the second round. It seemed that Dundee had a knockout within his grasp but try as furiously as he would the mauling Italian-American could not swing over a finishing blow.

Holding the upper hand, while Criqui tried gamely but vainly to stem the tide of battle, Dundee let up his terrific pace somewhat until the seventh round. Then he lashed out again with a volley to head and body, but Criqui, though he was staggering, kept his feet. The end again seemed in sight in the eighth when Criqui, blood dripping from his nose and mouth in a crimson stream, reeled about the ring under a spectacular barrage of blows.

Again in the ninth Dundee failed to bring the Frenchman down, so he switched his tactics in the next few rounds trying for a fresh opening. The twelfth saw him unleash another battering drive. He swung as hard as he could with both fists to Criqui's head but through a blood-smeared face, the Frenchman smiled grimly as he backed to the ropes. He had taken Dundee's hardest and kept his feet and when he went to his corner the crowd gave the battered champion a thunderous ovation.

Criqui's defensive tactics saved him in the thirteenth and fourteenth, but in the final round he again was on the verge of going down. Dundee tried savagely to land a knockout blow while Criqui swung wildly about his head, but when the finishing bell rang Criqui, groggy and bloody, under a pummeling attack, was still doing his best to fight back.

Criqui, a Born Fighter.

Only the heart of a fighter, the instinct of a courageous ringsman enabled Criqui to stand up under that withering fire. He had held his patch of ground in the dark days of Verdun and in that squared circle tonight he held his ground to the end. The jaw that had stopped a German bullet in the front line proved equal to the hardest shocks human fists could bring to bear upon it. He met defeat battling to the finish.

The Fight in Detail.

Round One.

They met in the center of the ring and started in fighting, Criqui landing right to body. Dundee landed a first real blow, a long left to the head. They kept exchanging body blows in the clinches but neither was doing much damage. Criqui landed two hard lefts to head. Dundee sent a solid left hook to jaw and Criqui countered with the same hand to the body. The Frenchman hooked a right to the jaw that hurt. Dundee sent Criqui to the floor with a hard right to jaw and the Frenchman remained on one knee while the referee called off a count of nine. Dundee got in a relentless attack when Criqui gained his feet, slashing with both hands to the body and punishing the champion severely. Dundee was cracking away when the bell stopped him.

Round Two.

Criqui came out a little bit unsteady and fell into a clinch. He hooked a left to Dundee and the challenger leaned back and swung hard lefts to head making the Frenchman waver on his feet. Dundee sent Criqui to the floor with a count of seven. Dundee laid back for a knockout, punishing Criqui severely. Although he was wavering Criqui fought back, taking left after left and clinching when his blows failed to land. They were sparring lightly in the center when the round ended.

Round Three.

Round Four.

Criqui started the attack but he was either short or over and a series of clinches resulted. Dundee was a little slower and they sparred more but when he chose to whip his left it came out savagely. The challenger dodged a half dozen leads, and then Dundee started bouncing off the ropes and dancing across the ring. Criqui struck at the flying target but it was no use. They were in a slight clinch when the bell ended the round.

Round Five.

Criqui spat up blood while his handlers worked feverishly. Dundee wasn't easily annoyed. Johnny landed half a dozen lefts and they fell into a wrestling clinch. Criqui landed a wide right but was too wide on his next sally. Dundee pounded the champions kidneys and they clinched, and slashed over three stiff lefts. Criqui poked his left to Johnny's head. The pace had slowed but still Criqui could not solve his opponent. He was warned for hitting on the breakaway. Dundee began chopping uppercuts when the gong sounded.

Round Six.

They came together fighting, Criqui taking the lead. Dundee battled toe to toe and his left had the better of it. Dundee was puzzled by Criqui's maneuvering but occasionally he slipped over that pop gun left. They exchanged punches, but there was not much to choose from. Criqui was getting the better of infighting. They were sparring at the bell.

Round Seven.

Dundee came out furiously, landing his left so rapidly it was impossible to count. The crowd booed the Frenchman for hitting low in a clinch. Dundee kept whipping over his left like a pile driver. Dundee made several slashing attacks with his left, but Criqui only kept crowding him. They were in a clinch at the bell.

Round Eight.

Round Nine.

Criqui was in probably bad condition as he sat in his corner, but Dundee appeared fresh. They fought in the center, then Dundee stepped back and began pummelling with his long left. With marvelous courage, Criqui continued stepping in, though his legs were so wobbly he could hardly stand. The Frenchman vainly shot out his left, but he was very tired. Dundee's repeating left tapped him a half dozen times and he clinched. Dundee now came in with both fists tearing away, but still Criqui walked on, strikingly wildly. They fought toe to toe, in a slashing body exchange and Dundee as he walked to his stool, was plainly perplexed.

Round Ten.

Criqui sent a left to the face in return for a left to the stomach, Criqui was leading with his left but it was invariably wide and he fell into Dundee's arms. Dundee pounded his adversary's head with both hands in a neutral corner, the crowd cheered Criqui as he resumed his undaunted advance but his blows were woefully feeble. He nearly fell over the challenger when he swung a hard right and Dundee swayed back to measure him, but they clinched. Dundee fell back from the advance, shooting his left up and over as Criqui gamely came in to the slaughter. Dundee was at it as the bell ended the round.

Round Eleven.

Criqui was wide with a left but he hooked a short left to the head and jabbed with it three times. Dundee, who was less affected now, went grimly to his work, retreating now and hammering again. He landed both hands to the jaw in a clinch. Dundee was falling against the ropes and bouncing out when Criqui stood by with glassy eyes. All he could do was wave his hands at his scooting opponent. Criqui missed a wide uppercut after Dundee was short with lefts. Dundee had slowed down and they were sparring quietly when the bell rang.

Round Twelve.

Criqui tried to smile with his shattered jaw. Criqui still was leading but Dundee was getting in the blows, hefty lefts. Dundee rocked the champion with a two-fisted attack that seemed would batter down a post but Criqui, wobbling on his feet, stood his ground. Criqui weathered that storm and lowered his head for another advance. The action slowed for a minute then Dundee plied both hands again, hitting Criqui in every vulnerable spot but the Frenchman smiled derisively and tried to put over an uppercut. The crowd was on its feet in a tempestuous roar, as Criqui gave another derisive smile, going to his corner at the bell.

Round Thirteen.

They clinched. Dundee began his attack earnestly but Criqui fought back and Dundee clinched. Criqui backed Dundee into a neutral corner, but had difficulty keeping his blows high. Dundee staggered him with a right cross, but Criqui advanced again, heaving a great sigh. The Frenchman ducked a wide left and was wild with two more. Dundee planted his feet and ploughed with his left, but he kept waiting, and Criqui was leading another advance when the gong rang.

Round Fourteen.

They sparred a minute, a full minute. They fought at long range, and danced about before Dundee whipped over two lefts that forced a clinch. Criqui caught Dundee nuah as he bounded from the ropes, but Criqui could not break in egg now. He didn't refrain from the attack, however, and was mixing with his adversary when the bell rang.

Round Fiftsen.

Criqui nodded his head negatively to a friend at the ringside, showing he knew it was hopeless. Landed came from his corner very determined but they clinched three times. The challenger got in two-fisted attack to the head and body and Criqui sighed again before he clinched. They sparred a minute, exchanged at arms length and then clinched before Dundee began his next foray. He swung both hands to the head with all he had and Criqui could not hold his gloves against his face but he had strength enough in his legs to walk in again. Dundee thumped the Frenchman's body and Criqui danced away. Dundee pounded his head unmercifully with both hands and was whaling away when the bell rang.

Criqui walked away, refusing Dundee's hand.

The Preliminaries.

Charley Glazer, of Chicago, was awarded the judge's verdict over Davey Jones of New York, in a four-round bout. Glazer floored Jones in the first round for a count of nine, but they fought on close to even terms after that. Glazer weighed 124 and Jones 126 1-2.

Tony Vacarelli, of New York outpunched Harry Zerbey, of Jersey City, N. J., in the second preliminary, obtaining the judges' verdict after six rounds of brisk battling. Vacarelli weighed 126 and Zerbey 127 1-4.

Mixer Mitchell, of Syracuse N. Y., who began his professional ring career as a school boy, was awarded the judges' decision over Leon Poutet, the French sparring partner of Criqui, in the third preliminary of six rounds. It was a nip and tuck battle most of the way, each scoring knockdowns in early rounds, but Mitchell landed the cleaner blows.

Danny Edwards, of California, negro bantamweight, received the judges' decision over Mickey Delmont, of Newark, in the semi-final contest, cut to three rounds to permit the final contest to go on at scheduled time.

TRAYNOR'S HOMER IN 12TH WINS FOR PITTSBURGH

Pittsburgh, Pa., July 26.—The Pirates won their first extra inning game of the season today when Traynor hit a home run in the twelfth inning, after two were out, giving Pittsburgh the edge over Boston by a score of 8 to 7.

After the locals had tied the score in the ninth the Braves pushed a runner across in the tenth on a double by McInnis and Ford's single, but the Pirates again evened the count in their half on hits by Bigbee, Maranville and Grimm. Traynor got his homer when Felix tried to make a shoe-string catch of his low liner, but the ball passed him and rolled to the fence. Score:

EAST ENDS TIE FOR FOURTH PLACE IN LEAGUE

The East Ends won their third straight victory Thursday evening at the Fairgrounds, when they defeated the Atlantics by the score of 12 to 2. Harris was in his usual good form, holding the Atlantics to six scattered hits and two runs, while the East Siders were slamming four of the Atlantic pitchers for eleven safeties. Tanglefoot Risley, the hard hitting third baseman of the East Ends cleaned the bases in the third inning with a long double to the road in center field. Spalding was the real shining light getting a home run with two men on and did some classy fielding that would make Ty Cobb turn green with envy.

Ellsworth played his usual fine game at short contributing several sensational catches. This game completed the East Ends schedule and gave them a tie for fourth place. The score:

WIFE AN INVETERATE GOLFER, HURD ASKS DIVORCE

Pittsburgh, July 26.—Jack V. Hurd, prominent in club circles, today was recommended a divorce from Dorothy I. Campbell Hurd, former woman golf champion on the United States, Great Britain and Canada, in a master's report filed in common pleas court here.

Evidence introduced at the hearing indicated that Mrs. Hurd was an "inveterate golfer," who preferred outdoor life on a golf course to the duties of housekeeping. "I believe it certain," the master said in his report, "that she loves golf and indulges in it to the exclusion of her marital relations, and that she is determined to discontinue the latter."

About two years ago Mrs. Hurd filed a petition for divorce but when she failed to press her action Mr. Hurd filed a counter petition.

WESTERN GOLF TITLE LIES BETWEEN EVANS, SWEETSEY, GARDNER AND WELLS

Cleveland, Ohio, July 26.—(By The A. P.)—Chick Evans of Chicago, defending champion, will meet Jess Sweetser of New York, national amateur champion, and Hamilton Gardner of Buffalo will play Joe Wells, of East Liverpool, Ohio, formerly West Virginia and Ohio champion, tomorrow in the semi-finals of the western golf championship at Mayfield Country club, as a result of today's rounds.

It will be a renewal of the recent battle at Brookline between Evans and Sweetser, the Yale student having won his title in that tilt from Evans three and two. Sweetser outplayed Evans during the medal rounds of the present meet, but in the match play thus far the Chicagoan has been playing better golf than his youthful opponent.

Sweetser won his way to the semi-finals today by defeating his schoolmate, Lexten Cummings, of Chicago, inter-collegiate champion, four and three.

Evans met a surprise in his rounds today, having to extend himself to better than par this forenoon to be three up to Fred Lamprecht, of Cleveland, but the young player broke toward the setting of the sun, and Evans sauntered home with a six and four victory.

Gardner had a runaway with Ira Couch, of Chicago, who fell off sadly from the fine golf he displayed in ousting Captain E. F. Carter, formerly Irish champion. Stopping at noon with the comfortable margin of nine up, the Buffalo star settled the argument on the 26th green, winning by the wide margin of 12 up, and 11 to play.

The other third round match was the closest of the four until Wells unleashed better than par golf on the third nine, and increased his lead from one up on the first eighteen to four up at the 27th, an advantage he retained by perfect playing until he finished four up and three to go over Wolf.

A large crowd is expected to watch the battle royal between the Veteran Evans, the only man who ever won the national open and amateur titles in one year and who has won the western championship seven times, and the youthful Sweetser.

YANKS TAKE CLOSE GAME FROM ATHLETICS

Philadelphia, July 26.—Ability to hit in the pinches gave New York its third straight victory over Philadelphia today 4 to 3.

The home team led until the fifth due to a home run by Miller with one on base in the second. A rally in the fifth gave the Yankees two runs and the lead. Ruth left the game after the first inning due to a stiff neck that has troubled him lately. Score:

RED SOX SPLIT DOUBLE BILL WITH SENATORS

Boston, July 26.—Boston defeated Washington 7 to 6 in the first game of a double header here today but the visitors took the second easily, 15 to 3. What proved to be the winning run in the first game came in the eighth on a walk to Flagstead, a bunt by Burns and Reichle's double to right. Piercy and Murray were ineffective in second game. Walter Johnson was losing pitcher in the first game but in the second evened his day's score. The score:

REDS WIN EASY GAME FROM THE DODGERS

Cincinnati, July 26.—Ruether was hit freely and Cincinnati easily won the second game of the series with Brooklyn, 9 to 2. Donohue was in excellent form having perfect control and not allowing a man to reach first base after the fifth inning. CUBS BEAT GIANTS WITH NINTH INNING RALLY

Chicago, July 26.—Chicago came from behind today and by staging a ninth inning rally defeated New York, 11 to 10, in the first game of the series. It was the first game of the season which Bill Ryan lost, and he pitched only two balls. The game was one of the widest played here in some time, thirty-two men participating. After the hitting of Emil Meusel, who drove in seven runs, gave the World's champions a good lead, the Giant pitchers became wild, one inning seeing three hurlers on the mound.

Friberg was banished for disputing Umpire O'Day's decision on a third strike. The score:

FARMERS' WEEK.

It is necessary to keep up to date in farming as well as in any other line of business. There are new ideas being advanced all the time. Improvements and experiments are being made that mean much to the tillers of the soil, the raisers of chickens and bees, the dairymen, the fruit raisers and even those who have a certain amount of their land devoted to the raising of a crop of timber.

Such knowledge is available in various ways. But one of the admirable plans that has been developed is that of holding a Farmers' week at the Connecticut Agricultural college for the purpose of bringing the farmers of the state together and in touch with the leading agriculturalists and other experts that there may be imparted to them first hand points in regard to the farm problems.

Farmers have all had their experiences and yet there is none but what is interested in what the other fellow is doing and what results he is getting. It is important that as big results as possible should be obtained from the various lines of effort to which the farmer turns his hand, whether he is a general all around farmer or specializes in some particular branch of the industry.

Farmers' week is as its name denotes, for the farmers. It is therefore an effort that should receive due appreciation from them in the way of attendance. It has been arranged at the time of year when some may be busier than others, but a day or two days at the college will serve to put them in touch with facts which they should be eager to get for the proper advancement of their business.

Much is gained by keeping up with the other fellow. The exchange of ideas, whether it is done over the mowing lot fence or elsewhere, is important. The aim of the various agricultural associations that are cooperating with the state college is to help the farmer. It is a commendable idea and it behooves all farmers who can to make the most of it. Connecticut should come nearer raising what it consumes. Such efforts should do much to help it along.

SNUBBING THE LEVIATHAN.

When the Leviathan started from this country on her first trip to Europe since being reconditioned mention was made of the large amount of mail that was carried and the fact that under the regulations it was held a day for the Leviathan, the fastest of liners.

When the same vessel reached this country on its return trip it was learned that it had brought but 31 sacks of mail while a slower boat leaving the day after and getting here 58 hours after the Leviathan had been loaded down with 6600 sacks of mail.

In sending mail to Europe from this country there is discrimination in behalf of the American vessels up to a certain point. Mail is not held for such ships over 24 hours except it is a case of sending the mail by vessels that have mail clerks aboard and in that case only a 48-hour delay is allowed, and that is countenanced because the work that is done on the mail aboard ship practically counteracts that extra wait through eliminating such work in the offices abroad.

When, however, the British insist upon holding mail and sending it by slower vessels it of course means a desire to favor their ships. Hitherto it has been possible for them to claim that they were favoring British ships because they were faster than American vessels. With the Leviathan on the run that is now impossible. There aren't any speedier vessels to be had.

What this clear case of intentional delay that a slower steamer might be favored is going to result in is already shown. It is a situation that calls for some definite understanding among the nations relative to the transportation of the mails with the least delay. What one does it is to be expected that others will do, if it means that they will profit from such action. But when there is a determination to get that benefit regardless of how much delay is caused in the delivery of the mail it indicates that conditions can be expected to grow worse instead of better if allowed to continue.

THE LAUSANNE RESULT.

When the Lausanne conference was called and the delegates assembled there was none too much enthusiasm over the possibility of a successful outcome. When the first conference broke up without getting together it was regarded as the barometer of the final outcome.

The second conference, however, has resulted in an agreement. It was made possible by the spirit of compromise, but it means progress where it was hardly believed that progress could be made.

The Turks are again back in Europe after it was believed that they had been excluded for good. Whether the Kemalist government is going to be any improvement over its predecessor remains to be seen. There is a wonderful opportunity and yet there is the inevitable drawback. Turkey is still Turkey, or it is until it has proved itself otherwise.

That the Turks have been able to get such a favorable treaty, and one which they were willing to sign, after refusing to abide by the treaty of Sevres, is due to the success of the Angora government. There wasn't a country that was much nearer the ragged edge than Turkey when the war closed. By its insistence, by the situation that developed over Greece, and by the victories of the Turks over the Greeks the Angora government forced recognition.

As the result of the World war Turkey has lost. It does not regain much territory that was taken from it but it has succeeded in reestablishing itself in a remarkably short time and strange as it may seem considering the situation following the armistice it is again numbered among the civilized states of Europe.

There are advantages which the nations of Europe and those of the world have gained, but the Turks must be given credit for a remarkably quick and successful comeback which wasn't believed possible and which comes partially as the result of the delay in dealing with the near east situation.

ABANDONING RAILROAD SERVICE.

In the past decade the electric railways have experienced serious competition from the automobile. Roads which were once paying expenses if not dividends have been obliged to quit business because the patronage was insufficient. Others have suffered the loss of much traffic and in each instance it is recognized that the auto has had its part even though it may not be entirely responsible.

But it is not the electric railway alone that the auto is affecting. It is also having a similar influence upon the railroads. Those who formerly traveled by train, now go by machine, while goods that were once transported by steam roads are being handled by auto trucks, especially where there are short hauls.

Such being the case there can be no surprise that the interstate commerce commission has just given the New Haven road the right to abandon about seven miles of railroad, constituting a branch line at South Deerfield, Mass. The business that was formerly done on that line has been gone for years. The total tonnage the last year it was operated amounted to an average of only a little over a ton a day and the total receipts for passengers were but $5.74.

A community that seeks no more service from a railroad than that certainly would not object to the pulling up of the rails. It is evident that it is getting all the accommodations it seeks from the autos, whether it is the transportation of travelers or freight. The wonder is how long it will be before there are petitions for the abandonment of other lines because of the same lack of patronage.

"LAW—NOT WAR."

Demonstrations which are scheduled by women's organizations throughout the country on Saturday and Sunday in behalf of "Law—not war" make it evident that the desire and efforts for peace are not dormant.

The recent war with all its horrors served to awaken in the minds of the people the need of doing away with war and replacing it by a more sensible method of settling disputes. Well do they ask why there should be such sacrifices of the young manhood of a country.

The idea of substituting law for war is in keeping with the effort that has long been made in the adjustment of labor and other troubles. Instead of resorting to force and getting benefits through the distress caused others, or forcing distress upon a great number, the aim is to maintain peace at all times and accomplish it by respecting the laws recognized by all nations.

Such a day may be far off but it is nevertheless a day that is much desired and whatever the movement that can develop thought in that direction or get action to such an end is most praiseworthy.

The demonstration for "Law—not war" on the ninth anniversary of the outbreak of the World war is well timed. It is a movement that should gather strength with the years and it is an undertaking that deserves not only the participation of the women but the earnest and active cooperation of every citizen who places life above bloodshed, law above force, peace above war.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

If we let Magnus Johnson tell it this country stood on the brink of ruin till he was elected.

It is only the farmers of the middle west who are kicking at the low price of wheat and flour.

The man on the corner says: Did you ever notice that most radicals have nice, quiet, hard working wives?

Is there any significance attached to the fact that on the eve of the return of Hi Johnson from Europe his state was all aquiver?

Nothing but fear could have caused the British to think that the twelve-mile limit dealt with the search for anything but liquor.

The general wish is that Lieutenant Maughan may have better luck next time but it is a bit uncertain now when the next time will be.

Those parking cars on hilly streets where there is only sufficient room for two machines to pass are not actually contributing to increased safety.

The farm bloc maintained that it got all it wanted in the last session of the legislature but the wheat farmers give the impression that they were slighted.

Now that it has been decided by geologists that Plymouth rock was brought from Canada the dominion government will probably hasten to declare an embargo on any future deliveries.

There are those who think we do not get aliens enough. And there are statistics to show that our institutions for the insane, sick and feebleminded are filled mostly with aliens or their offsprings.

GRANDMA HELPED

The not so very young clerk with the jolly, round face laid a plump hand on the arm of her companion in "the handkerchiefs."

"Say girlie, listen," she chuckled. "I laughed last night till I just about died. You'd oughta seen me." She laughed reminiscently. "Say, kiddo, look-it here," she continued. "I guess I never told you what a swell gramma I got and how she's bugs on girls gettin' married, what? She thinks it's fierce me just traveling around with a bunch of janes and having such a swell time like I do.

"For quite a while back she's been tellin' me about how there was a fellow in her home town that her and his ma was chums when they were young and how swell he was to his ma and reel well fixed and everything.

"And a couple months back this here guy his ma up and died and while gran was reel kind of put out, with her old friend dying on her and everything, right away she begun to sit up and take some nourishment.

"Well, say, kid look-it. A coupla weeks ago she phoned me about how this Matt Smithers guy was headed for Chicago and the very first night he was there I was to come over to her place and have supper with her and him.

"Yesterday this Matt Smithers he came to town all right and so I beat it over to gran's along in the afternoon and here was the Smithers guy and her setting there together when I breezed in. He didn't look so awful good to me, but, land, I just thought maybe after he had his supper perhaps he'd loosen up and get a little human. Well gran made us acquainted with each other and we set around a while, and then gran she says would I go out in the kitchen and make us some of my swell muffins and mix up the coffee and fix the salad.

"Well, the Smithers party come to bat, and says he didn't never drink no coffee at night and he'd rather have tea. Can you beat it, kid. If I ever you knowed what I think of guys that drink tea!

"Say, kid, listen. It sure was my hard luck day, all righty. I beat up the muffins and put them in to cook and gee, they looked swell till they started not to rise and I found the baking powder setting on the table, nice as you please, and seen I hadn't put it in. Well, after I got the muffins in, but before I knew they wasn't no risings in 'em, I hustled out to the pantry to get the dressing for the cabbage salad that gran had all fixed. I grabbed up a little kind of dish that was setting in the icebox and fox trotted back and dumped it on the salad. It did look kinda funny, but it was just about then I went to give the muffins the once over. Gosh, kid, they looked like somebody had sat on their head!

"It would a been bad enough the muffins being all on the blink and gran not having no fresh bread in the house and us having to eat some funny old scraps that was left from the year before last, but if ever you'd tasted that salad you wouldn't never a thought no more about the bread. It wasn't no salad dressing I put on at all. It was some pancake batter gran left in the icebox from breakfast time and not her swell salad dressing at all, that was sitting out on the back porch waiting all the time! And say, I left the tea sit till it was black in the face and just about cold at that.

"I guess I'd oughta felt awful bad, but it just struck me funny and I couldn't do nothing but laugh.

"And say, the Smithers guy took me home on the 'L,' I guess he thought it was a good riddance to bad rubbish—and, gee, he had a swell time all the way telling me what a grand girl he had back home, that he asked her to marry him the night before he come up to Chi, and what a swell housekeeper she was.

"But, honest, kid, I felt awful sorry for gran.

"And when I blew into our place here was ma at the phone—and couldn't wait to tell her. She's got one of these voices that come right out the phone like some folks do and a person can hear her all over the room, and she was saying when I come in, 'Oh, Katie,' she says, 'I didn't never suppose she could a made such a swell cook and all,' she says 'and could a stood the muffins being so fierce,' she says, 'but it did seem like she could a-give him a good cup of tea,' she says.

"Oh, boy, I sure thought I'd croak! But the joke of it is I don't know as gran ever will get cured of trying to land me a meal ticket. I bet right this minute she's trying in to think who she can line up for the next time.

While practically unknown in America, he has had an unusual career in Germany and is now an active leader of the socialist democratic party in the republic. He was the first minister appointed to Poland after the war, retiring when Poland broke off diplomatic relations with Germany. Wives of Famous Men

Ester Jane Ogle, Second Wife of Richard Brinsley Sheridan

It is seldom that a man is fortunate enough to find romance in two marriages, but such was the luck of Richard Brinsley Sheridan, of whose marriage to Elizabeth Linley reference has been made in this column before. Three years after the death of this lady, Sheriden's grief was assuaged by Ester Jane Ogle, eldest daughter of the Duke of Winchester. Miss Ogle was a capricious young woman of 20 when first the brilliant writer, then 42, made her acquaintance. The story goes that when she met him her first remark was:

"Keep away, you fright, you terrible creature!" Being piqued, Sheridan exercised his powers of fascination with the result that Miss Ogle gladly consented to marry him. She was spending her dowry of 5,000 pounds and the additional 15,000 pounds that Sheridan had settled upon her. Still, she had charm, which rendered him blind to her defects. He was deeply in love with her, and she with him.

"As to my husband's talents," she once wrote a friend, "I will say nothing of them, but I will say that he is the handsomest and honestest man in all England!"

Sheridan's pet name for his wife was Hecca, and he took delight in originating odd little salutations in the numerous letters he wrote her. The marriage seemed, in truth, as Moore said of it, to renew the youth of Sheridan.

NEW BOOKS

Tomorrow About This Time. By Grace Livingston Hill. Cloth, 12 mo. 345 pages. Published by J. B. Lippincott Company, Philadelphia. Price $2.

Mrs. Hill's new novel is of a character different from anything that she has written before, yet possessing the same element of wholesome entertainment which is the outstanding feature of her previous books and which won for her a growing popularity as a writer of stories for all members of the family.

Patterson Greeves returns to his childhood home after service in the war and making noteworthy discoveries in science only to find that his now nearly grown daughters are about to come to live with him. Alice returns to him after having been raised by his first wife's parents and Athalie, a typical flapper, is returned to him by the court after the second wife is divorced. Neither knew each other. Athalie arrives first and shocks her father by her bold manners and freedom of speech. Greeves sought to escape the burden of responsibility and dreaded the arrival of Alice. She proved to be an entirely different type, sweet, unselfish and evidently anxious to win her father's love.

It is inevitable that Athalie should hate her half sister and resent the greater favor shown her. Affairs go from bad to worse until Greeves is driven almost to distraction though deriving immense comfort from the companionship of Alice. Alice believes that she can best serve her father by going away, which plan precipitates a crisis that is the means of bringing happiness to all. It is a fine portrayal of opposite types that is exceedingly well done.

This is the initial compilation for popular circulation of a guide to the airplane landing fields throughout the United States. The book, which also includes a most complete directory of camp sites for automobilists, were especially published for the National Aeronautic association and the United States army air service lent its cooperation in making the list of landing fields as complete as possible. In cloth cover and convenient pocket size the new guide contains besides the informative text a large map of the United States showing the location of landing fields in all states and on the reverse side all the established auto camp sites. It is a book that is bound to be extremely useful to those touring by auto.

The Charm of a Well Mannered Home. By Helen Ekin Starrett. Cloth. 194 pages. Published by J. B. Lippincott company, Philadelphia. Price $1.40.

The author, late principal emeritus of Starrett school for girls at Chicago, also wrote The Charm of Fine Manners deals with an atmosphere which braces and inspires the life. It has been said of the late Mrs. Starrett that "no one who came within the charmed circle of her inspiring influence could go away without a feeling of uplift, a realization of the relative importance of things."

The Charm of a Well Mannered Home possesses much of that inspiring influence which so endeared her to her many friends. It offers real help to those couples who would accomplish a well mannered home and thus attain a true and lasting happiness. The book should prove particularly appropriate at a time when people seem to be drifting more and more away from the ideals of family life upon which the very strength of the nation was originally founded. Altogether, it is a book for both men and women to read, mark, learn and inwardly digest."

IN THE SUMMER

A fool there was, and he went away—
Even as you and I.
His home was a pleasant place to stay—
A dandy place for a holiday—
But the fool was a fool, and he went away—
Even as you and I.
O, the wits we've lacked, and the grips we've packed
In the Summertime and Fall,
And the time when, having had our fling,
We've come home gravely wondering
Just why we went at all!

A fool there was, and his savings spent—
Even as you and I.
The roof of a Pullman for his tent,
And lived the life of an emigrant—
But a fool will follow his natural bent—
Even as you and I.
O, the fools we meet, and the dust we eat,
And the tendency to roam;
The hardships that we all abhor—
And the rest that we were looking for Awaiting us at home!

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Never Mind New Bibles.

Mr. Editor: As there is much being said in these days about peace and plans for peace between the nations, and as all plans have so far failed, as we who read to understand God's word have said they would, and as we hold now they will continue to fail, the good book tells us all about it. Isa. 8:9-10 are words of dear warning, which apply and are fulfilled at this time: "Associate yourselves, O ye people (in peace conferences, church confederations, etc.), and yet shall be broken in pieces; and give ear all ye of far countries; gird yourselves and ye shall be broken in pieces. Take counsel together, and it shall come to naught; speak the word, and it shall not stand." How plainly it is set before us. A short time ago I read an article in a magazine which set one to thinking, and wondering what is the significance of this new plan of rewriting the Bible. The article said that a meeting was held at the home of J. P. Morgan (by certain divines, and big business men) to talk over and plan the rewriting of the Bible. I would advise these men to read and heed Rev. 22:19. If they would heed the true word and teach it, instead of changing it to suit their ideas, they might even at this late day save much of the trouble and themselves. But we know they will not heed. The Good Book tells us this, too. To these things that are in the minds and heart of these people, the world will suffer. And blind Sampson is even now reaching for the pillars to bring the whole structure down upon their heads. And although all are more or less in the wrong our sympathies must ever be with those whom the Lord is in sympathy with. And we can only pray for these days to be shortened (the days of His wrath) and He has promised that this shall be so. Jesus speaking of this great time of trouble says: "Except those days should be shortened, there should no flesh be saved; but for the elect's sake those days shall be shortened." The conclusion must be drawn, then, that many human beings will be saved and pass through the trouble. This is corroborated by the prophet Zechariah, who says that many will be brought through the trouble and participate in the blessings that the Lord has in store for the obedient ones. And now let all who will, grasp the only life preserver, Jesus Christ, and hold on tight. Never mind new Bibles or creeds of men.

Fall River Contractor Says Trouble Is Over

"Tanlac helped me so much that now I'm feeling even better than before I got sick," recently declared John J. LaFever, contracting electrician, of 345 Rodman St., Fall River, Mass.

"My troubles started over a year ago with indigestion and loss of appetite. No matter what I ate, gas always formed, causing awful pains in my stomach and pressing against my heart until it palpitated so as to almost cut off my breath. Often at night I had to sit up in bed for an hour or more to keep from suffocating and then was so nervous I couldn't half sleep. I was also troubled with constipation, awful headaches and frequently got so dizzy I could hardly stand up. I lost fifteen pounds in weight and my strength left me completely.

"Since taking Tanlac I have gained back all my lost weight and several pounds besides and everything agrees with me perfectly. In fact, I haven't an ailment and always feel fine. Tanlac hasn't an equal."

Tanlac is for sale by all good druggists. Accept no substitute. Over 37 million bottles sold.

learned that quick and permanent relief can only be accomplished with internal medicine. Neither cutting nor any amount of treatment with ointments and suppositories will remove the cause.

Bad circulation causes piles. There is a complete stagnation of blood in the lower bowel and a weakening of the parts. Dr. J. S. Leonhardt was first to find the remedy. His prescription is HEM-ROID, a tablet medicine, taken internally, that is now sold by druggists generally. Dr. Leonhardt tried it in 1,000 cases with the marvelous record of success in 98 per cent. and then decided it should be sold under a rigid money-back guarantee.

When the girl was found by the Webster police and held for the Norwich officers, it was learned that the couple had already made preparations to take out a marriage license in Webster. After she had been brought here Thursday and restored to her parents, it was learned by the police that her mother had withdrawn objections to the marriage if it could be performed in this city.

WEDDING
Goldfarb—Mopsik

The garden at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Mopsik of 69 Mt. Pleasant street formed the setting Thursday night at 8 o'clock for the wedding of their daughter, Minnie Mopsik, and Louis Goldfarb of 88 Washington street, the service being conducted by Rabbi Max Stamm.

The bride was attended by Mrs. Benjamin Krieger as matron of honor, Miss Ella Goldfarb of Charleston, W. Va., sister of the groom, as maid of honor and Miss Sadie Mopsik, a sister, and Miss Rae Nowick as bridesmaids, and the best man was Nathan Goldfarb, of Charleston, W. Va., brother of the groom.

The bride was most charmingly gowned in tan canton crepe, her coronet veil being caught up with orange blossoms, and her shower bouquet was of roses and lilies of the valley.

Following the wedding a reception was held at the home of the bride and a wedding dinner served to over 100 guests. The bride received many beautiful gifts from relatives and friends.

Later in the evening Mr. and Mrs. Goldfarb left on a honeymoon trip and are to return to the home of the bride for a brief visit before leaving for Charleston West Virginia, where the groom is engaged in business.

On Wednesday evening at the home of Miss Rae Nowick of 79 Mechanic street a miscellaneous shower was tendered the bride-to-be, over forty friends gathering to wish her joy in her married life. Many gifts of linen cut glass, china, silver and household articles were received. During the evening a mock marriage afforded an entertaining feature, the participants being Miss Eva Blinderman, the groom; Miss Marcia Goldblatt, the bride, and Miss Bessie Yalen, who performed the ceremony.

GIVEN $5 FINE FOR DISPLAYING OFFENSIVE SIGNS ON AUTOMOBILE

Ernest Leblanc of Taftville was before the Norwich police court Thursday morning on a breach of the peace charge which made one of the most novel cases of this kind before the court in a long time. The offense alleged against him was for placarding his wrecked automobile and publicly exhibiting threatening and offensive matter against Dr. Harry McLaughlin of Jewett City.

Leblanc was found guilty and was fined $5 and costs by Deputy Judge H. H. Pettis. The whole fine and costs amounted to $14.50. He took an appeal and furnished a bond. He was represented by Attorneys Josiah Greenstein and V. P. A. Quinn.

Prosecuting Attorney Lee Roy Robbins appeared for the state, bringing the case against Mr. Leblanc under the following statute in the crimanl law:

"Every person who shall disturb or break the peace by tumultuous and offensive carriage, noise or behavior, or by threatening, traducing, quarreling with, challenging, assaulting or striking another, or who shall disturb or break the peace, or provoke contention, by following or mocking any person, with abusive or indecent language, gestures or noise, or who shall, by any writing, with intent to intimidate any person, threaten to commit any crime against him or his property, or who shall write or print and publicly exhibit or distribute, or who shall publicly exhibit, post up or advertise any offensive, indecent or abusive matter, concerning any person, shall be fined not more than $500 or imprisoned in the county jail not more than one year, or both."

Some time ago the automobiles of Leblanc and Dr. McLaughlin were in collision at night upon the Jewett City bridge and it is alleged that Leblanc placed his car along the roadside at Taftville about ten days ago and placarded it with the threatening and offensive signs.

The signs that appeared on the car were the following:

"Dr., you told me if I publish this case you would fix me. Now come. E. L."

"Mr. Lathrop of the Franklin Motor Co. claims it's worth $600 to repair it. All I ask is to replace it as before or pay. Dr., some-ins. co., ah, ah, ah, ah."

"I've heard of seeing double when drinking. What must they been when I was hit?"

"As it is night all good people go to sleep without light. They do not go on a spree and endanger lives they meet on the Jewett City bridge."

"Mass. bonding and Ins. Co. has offered $200 to settle. Some nerve. Is the damage worth it?"

"Mr. Day says that Dr. McLaughlin says that he was in his rights. Who told the Dr. so? It took four men to carry him from his car to car No. 98153 while——"

"It took four men to carry him. A regiment could not wake him. What ailed him?"

"Mass. bonding and insurance Co. thinking I was broke offered a low settlement. No, I am only badly bent."

"Dr. McLaughlin's car hit me while rounding curve at high speed. Who will pay?"

In the police court Thursday the testimony for the state was brief. Dr. McLaughlin and Frank L. Farrell testified to seeing the location of the car by the roadside and to several of the signs that appeared on it.

Mr. Leblanc testified in his own behalf, alleging the truth of the statements on the signs which he had placed on the car, and said that at the time of the accident Dr. McLaughlin was not driving but was asleep in the seat next to the driver. Others testified for him as to the collision and the wreck of his car.

Quite a number of automobile owners and drivers attended the session.

The continued case of the state vs. Henry Laplant, who was arrested on June 13th for driving an auto while alleged to be under the influence of liquor, was called up and was again postponed to July 30.

ARREST TWO MORE ON CHARGE OF CLOTH THEFTS

Two more alleged thefts of cloth by bleachery employe were uncovered Thursday by Capt. John P. Nowell of the Watts detective agency of Boston, when with local officers he seized 32 yards, valued at $44, at the home of John Krzwsak, 422 North Main street, and 13 yards, valued at $2.55, at the home of Peter Przezop, 16 Hickory street.

At the North Main street house much cloth was found that could not be identified by Raymond R. Sherman of the United States Finishing Co., who went with Capt. Nowell and officer Charles Smith to search the houses about noon. While the motor patrol wagon stood in front of the North Main street place, which is a short distance from the main entrance to the bleachery, the operations of the officers attracted a crowd that filled the street.

Both men who arrested at the mill after the cloth had been found in their homes and both gave $200 bail for appearance in court.

The Mercantile Protective service, organized and protected by the Watts detective agency, Inc. of Boston, has a large corps of operators constantly at work and is showing a marked decrease in loss from theft and destruction of property from manufacturing concerns throughout the country. A week ago Capt. Nowell located another lot of goods stolen by a bleachery employe.

OHIO GRANTS RECIPROCITY FOR AUTOMOBILE DRIVERS

The state motor vehicle department has been notified by Secretary of State Thad H. Brown of Ohio that under the provisions of the Ohio automobile laws that state "will grant the same reciprocal period to motor vehicles of another state as that state grants to motor vehicles operating under Ohio licenses."

The result of this arrangement will be that any duly licensed Connecticut person will be allowed to operate a motor vehicle in Ohio for a period of 15 days, or parts of days, not necessarily consecutive, in any year, without taking out an Ohio registration, and, in the case of a chauffeur, without obtaining an Ohio operator's license.

The state of Ohio does not require owners of cars to have operators' licenses, but such licenses are required of regular chauffeurs. Consequently, Connecticut people driving their own cars may operate indefinitely in Ohio under their Connecticut operators' licenses, provided they have complied with all Connecticut and Ohio regulations; but if Connecticut cars are to be operated in Ohio after the expiration of the "15 day period" they must have Ohio registry and paid drivers, that is chauffeurs must take out Ohio driving licenses.

Connecticut has similar reciprocal arrangements with neighboring states which in effect give to our motorists the same privileges in those states as we allow their motorists here.

GIVES JUDGMENT IN TWO SUITS IN COMMON PLEAS

Judgment for the plaintiffs in both cases of the Modern Electric Co. vs. Edward J. Raymond and John J. Murphy vs. Edward J. Raymond, all of New London, were handed down Thursday by Judge Charles B. Waller of the court of common pleas. The suits in each instance were actions for bills due the plaintiffs for work done on a house built by the defendant, Raymond, and conveyed to his wife before the bills were paid.

The court found the indebtedness of Raymond to the plaintiffs admitted; that the conveyance to his wife was voluntary and without consideration. Judgment was awarded John J. Murphy for $288 and to N. R. DeBiasi and Michael DeBiasi for $116. Attorney Thomas E. Troland was counsel for the plaintiffs in each case. Attorney George C. Morgan was counsel for the defendant.

SWAM MYSTIC RIVER ESCAPING FROM LOCKUP

Escaping from the Mystic lockup, John J. Denny 18, jumped into the Mystic river, swam the stream and landing on the opposite side of the river, Wednesday afternoon. Denney, who was being held for court on the charge of theft, assaulted the watchman when he entered the cell with food for the prisoner. Denney knocked the watchman down and jumping over the prostrate man, sprang through the cell door and opening a window, left the building, jumped into the river and swam for all he was worth.

Had Three Children.

In the obituary of Thomas A. Holmes published in The Bulletin of Thursday morning, there was one omission. Mr. and Mrs. Holmes were parents of three children, not two as was stated, a daughter, Lizzie E. Holmes, wife of E. S. Tweedy of Norwich, having died a number of years ago.

RETURNED FROM A. O. H. CONVENTION IN MONTREAL

Daniel J. O'Neil and Mrs. Julia Brock, delegates to the A. O. H. convention at Montreal, Canada, have returned home. They were the only delegates from New London county at the convention, but found 25 delegates from Hartford county, state officers, and delegates from other counties in the state. Mr. O'Neil, who is county president, returned last Sunday, and Mrs. Brock, who is county president of the A. O. H. auxiliary, returned Wednesday.

The convention numbered about 500 delegates, and many members of the A. O. H. not delegates, were also present. All business conducted showed the order to be progressing and indications are that with peace in the Emerald Isles the growth of the order will be repaid. It was the first convention of the order to be held in the Dominion of Canada.

The delegates were given a royal welcome and treated generously by the residents of the city. The trip included a wonderful sail on the St. Lawrence river and auto rides to historical places in Montreal.

Delegates O'Neil and Mrs. Brock report that the railroad station of the Canadian railroad system, in Montreal, is a massive structure and houses a display of all kinds of Canadian products, has printed matter advertising the benefits of residing in Canada, and that the display would take over a half day to cover completely. The display is only a part of the great advertising system of the Dominion, visible to every person passing through the station.

In Canada the sale or liquor is well in hand and the government derives all possible income and the regulations are strict. It is impossible to get strong drinks in the hotels before 9 a. m. or after 5 p. m.

Mr. O'Neil and Mrs. Brock returned home enthusiastic, after the convention and feel that Canada is a well governed and progressive part of the continent. Both are planning to make extensive and interesting reports on the convention at the meetings of the local A. O. H. in the near future.

BOY'S FOREHEAD CUT IN AUTOMOBILE ACCIDENT

Fred Miller, the 3 year old son of Mr. and Mrs. F. R. Miller of Norwich Town, received a painful cut on his forehead Thursday afternoon about 4.30 o'clock when struck and knocked down by the automobile owned and driven by C. E. Carpenter of 76 New London street. The child was immediately rushed to the Backus hospital in the Southern New England Telephone company truck driven by Mr. Kearney, and the 3 inch gash in his forehead was closed with stitches, the child being removed to his home by his mother who did not want him to remain at the hospital.

Mr. Carpenter stated that he was operating his car at low speed and when about to pass Wightman's switch at Norwich Town, he noticed a truck owned by the Shetucket company backed up against the curbing, standing out well into the road. He saw one boy playing near the truck and proceeded with caution and as he was passing the truck the boy ran out from behind the truck, followed shortly afterwards by the Miller boy, who ran into the right side of Mr. Carpenter's Cadillac car and was knocked down.

Mr. Kearney who was nearby imrushed him to the hospital.

ORGANIZE LIONS CLUB OF NORWICH MEN

Thursday noon at the Wauregan hotel a temporary organization of the Norwich Lions club was effected and plans formulated for permanent organization.

The business session followed a luncheon at which H. M. McKinnon, field director for the Lions, took charge. There were some 12 members of the New London Lions club present and they took charge of the singing and entertainment. Field Director McKinnon at the close of the dinner spoke briefly on the history of the organization and the accomplishments of the club in various cities. He stated that the Lions club was practically identical to the Rotary club and that both clubs worked harmoniously in all civic works.

After solos by "Joe" Schwartz and New London Lions, the parent organization departed for home and the Norwich men remained to form the organization.

George A. Finn, of the Bankers' Trust company, was elected organization president, and Clarence E. Carpenter made organization secretary and treasurer. The executive committee chosen comprises the president, secretary, and Frank A. Sisk, druggist; Louis J. Fontaine, insurance, and J. P. Cummings, undertaker.

The committee is to carry out the balance of the work of organizing and it is expected that the second meeting will be held Thursday, Aug. 2, at the Wauregan hotel when there will be about 15 or 16 members present. There have already been eight representative business men who have signed for membership in the club.

PICNIC ANNIVERSARY OF WOMAN'S RELIEF CORPS

Sedgwick Woman's Relief corps, No. 16, observed its 37th anniversary Thursday with an all day picnic at the home of Commander and Mrs. Orrin M. Price of Lafayette street, the corps having been organized in 1886. There were 34 members present. One of the entertaining features were charades on bells, including the Liberty Bell, Christmas bell, and wedding bells. The gathering also joined in singing many of the old time songs. At noon a basket luncheon was enjoyed.

Mrs. John Irish, a charter member of the corps and the second president of the organization, gave a resume of the charter members during the afternoon, the history being most interesting to the present members.

The affair broke up shortly before dusk, voting thanks to Mr. and Mrs. Price for their work of making the anniversary celebration a success.

Ocer 150 members of the German Lutheran church and Sunday school enjoyed the annual picnic Thursday at Ocean Beach, two cars being needed to convey the members to the shore. The programme for the day included the playing of games and enjoying the attractions of the resort.

At noon refreshments were served by the committee headed by Rev. H. Hunzinger, pastor of the church, comprising Mrs. Frank Decker, Mrs. Herman Redkowski and Mrs. Charles Schlinz.

The party arrived in Norwich at 6.45 o'clock in the evening after having spent an enjoyable day at the beach where many enjoyed swimming and boating.

Automobiles In Collision

Automobiles driven by Edwin L. Burnap of this city and Rev. W. D. Hetherington of Preston City, were in collision Thursday evening about 6.30 at the corner of Franklin and Bath streets. The Burnap car was coming down Franklin street when the other man came out of Bath street into Franklin and struck the Burnap car, damaging a fender.

PARIS AND BRUSSELS TO MAKE SEPARATE REPLIES

London, July 26—(By the A. P.)—The news from Paris and Brussels that France and Belgium will send separate replies to the British government's reparations proposals arouses no strong interest here except as affording a sense of relief that France has not adopted a non-possumus attitude, of not replying, or curtly rejecting the proposals, but that the negotiations will continue.

Open diplomacy, if it ever existed, is in the present case in abeyance, and it is said that the same secrecy will be observed over the French and Belgian replies as over the British overtures. The absolute silence on both sides of the channel is quite a new thing in the protracted negotiations arising out of the Versailles Treaty and is in strong contrast with the system prevailing under the Lloyd George administration.

There will likely be no opportunity for the British parliament to discuss the negotiations, for no date has yet been set for the receipt of the Franco-Belgian notes, and parliament rises August 3 until November.

STEAMER GROUNDED WITH 1,500 EXCURSIONISTS ABOARD

New York, July 26.—The excursion steamer Sirius, which went aground today in Prince Bay, a quarter of a mile off Staten Island, with 1,500 members of the Lyceum Athletic Club, of Perth Amboy, N. J., on board, was floated late today with the aid of two tugs and a high tide. All the passengers had previously been taken off, and had continued on the Pegasus, another steamer of the same line, to Palisades Park, for a day's outing.

The excursion boat had just got under way, and was proceeding slowly, when there was a grinding sound and the vessel came to a sudden stop. The engines were immediately reversed, but were unable to pull her free. The accident was laid to an unusually low tide. No one was injured.

"Well?"
"I am getting too fat for the stage."

GOOD HEALTH SECRET OF BEAUTY

Beauty lies in the care a woman bestows upon herself and in keeping at bay those dread ailments peculiar to her sex, which drag her down and leave telltale traces upon her countenance. Sparkling eyes, the elastic step and a clear complexion never accompany organic troubles. Distressed expressions, a sallow complexion, dark circles under the eyes, lassitude, headaches, and mental depression are the telltale symptoms of women's ailments. Women so troubled should not lose a day in taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, the most successful remedy known to overcome woman's ills and restore health and beauty.

DANIELSON AND PUTNAM NEWS

DANIELSON

While fishing off an abutment of the North street bridge over the Assawaga river, Thursday afternoon, Theodore Bousquet, 11, lost his balance while trying to untangle a snagged line, fell about ten fee into the river, and was drowned. Several hours later the body was recovered by State Officers Keith and Bigelow who were using grappling irons.

The body was taken in charge by L. E. Kenntdy. The drowned boy was a son of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Bousquet, of Franklin street.

Postmaster E. H. Keach and the members of his force were more or less perturbed Thursday morning for for the second consecutive day evidence was found that the office had been occupied during the preceding night.

Visions of safe blowers, mail robbers and various other types of crooks passed in rapid success across the mentalities of the postmaster and his taff and it wa then and there decided that a complete and thorough search of the office should be made at once and forthwith the decision was put into execution.

No one would be likely to guess in the course of a week just what the office force found, so it will be promptly set forth here that after diligent search one full grown police dog, apparently in the best of health, was located comfortably curled up behind one of he sorting tables where uncalled for packages of parcel post and other such matter is laid aside.

Howard Withey, a clerk in the office volunteered to evict the intruder and proceeding to do so awakened the log into activity and the animal oched out a rear door. How the dog got into the office and when and who he belongs to are questions still unsolved.

But there he was and, without doubt, had been there all the night before and all day Wednesday, also all of Tuesday night. His presence was not suspected during Wednesday in spite of the fact, as has been said before, that there was evidence of some one having spent the night in the office. Not a sound was heard from the dog during Wednesday, and he gave no evidence of being any more noisy during the hours of Thursday when the office was opened.

This is a week in which sport items are winning a prominent place in the news. Thursday the state fish and game commission sent a motor truck into this territory with crates containing 350 pheasants. Officials of the Danielson Rod and Gun club were consulted by the men with the truck as to the best natural locations hereabout for pheasants before the birds were released.

Taken out into favorable locations the birds were released a few at a time and gradually made their way off into their new haunts. The distribution of these birds covered the towns of Killingly and Brooklyn, Plainfield and Canterbury and a portion of Pomfret.

The released birds were of good size and will be practically full grown by the time the shooting season opens in October. Scores of pheasants were were released in the surrounding country the past fall and it is now evident to observers that such of them as did not fall before hunters' guns during the hunting season of 1922 have multiplied materially during the past spring season. Pheasants should be abundant this fall and the restocking operations will continue until the hunting of these birds hereabouts will be great sport for those who like to go afield with a gun.

Recently the South Killingly Ecclesiastical society adopted resolutions lauding the remarkable service rendered the Congregational church in that place by Charles T. Preston, now a resident of Danielson, who has been clerk of the church for more than 51 years. Although a resident of Danielson since 1862, Mr. Preston never allowed his interest in the church at South Killingly to abate and his service to it, throughout the years for more than half a century, constitutes a record of faithfulness that has few equals.

PUTNAM

Governor Charles A. Templeton was an honor guest Thursday at Camp Woodstock, where the tri-county Y. M. C. A. has established an ideal camp for boys and where youths from Windham, Tolland and Hartford counties are having a delightful time these summer days.

Upwards of 1,000 invitations were issued prior to the coming of the chief executive of the state and many responded and enjoyed the opportunity to meet the governor, inspect the camp and hear the addresses and participate in the program.

Commander Thomas Bell of Anselm Mayotte post, American legion, of this city, Past Commander Dr. Edward F. Perry and other members of the post were at Camp Woodstock to act as a guard of honor and escort for the governor.

Events of governor's day started at 9.30 a. m., when there were track and field events. At 11 the governor and his party were received. Dinner for the boys of the camp was served at 11.30, with the governor as a guest of honor, and dinner for the guests and visitors at 12.30 o'clock. A "shore" dinner was provided as a special feature of the occasion. In the early afternoon there was a program of music by the East Woodstock orchestra.

At 2.15 there was a program of speaking. W. E. Moss of this city presided at these exercises. The invocation was by Rev. Simeon E. Cosad, pastor of the Second Congregational church of this city. Governor Templeton and State Treasurer G. Harold Gilpatric of this city were among those who made addresses.

In the late afternoon there was a carnival of water sports and a historical pageant. The evening was spent in singing camp fire songs, giving cheers and awarding camp honors, for today marks the end of a second two weeks' period of the camp, into which scores of boys will be pouring today for a third two weeks' period.

The historical pageant presented on Thursday was prepared by Clarence W. Bowen and written around outstanding historical events in the history of Woodstock, one of the oldest towns in Connecticut and to which settlers first came from Roxbury, Mass., late in the 17th century.

A month hence—August 25, to be exact—another delegation of Fresh Air fund children is scheduled to arrive in this city from New York to spend a period of two weeks in the homes of the good people that will be opened unto them. The children—boys and girls—will be between 4 and 14 years.

Such children have been coming out of the great city to Putnam and vicinity for several years past to spend a vacation period, and many are the delights that have been experienced by them while guests in homes here and hereabouts.

Next month's visitation will simply be a repetition of those of other years In the meantime an opportunity is being offered to interested people here to make known their willingness to take one or more of the little New Yorkers into their homes for a two weeks' period.

A quartet of boys who left Camp Utopia in Woodstock earlier in the week for a three days' hike made their way back here Thursday. The hike of this particular group covered much more territory than the ordinary man could get over on foot in the course of a three days' period.

This alert group of youngsters, all residents of New York, visited Hartford, New Haven, New London, Fishers Island, Norwich and were back in Putnam at 11 o'clock Thursday morning. How did they do it? By a modern but simple process that allows of covering much ground in short order if you only know how. These boys picked up rides from touring motorists. One night out was sufficient to land them with relatives in New Haven. The next day they picked up rides back to New London and arrived there in time to go over to Fishers Island, where they spent a night with the garrison. Getting back to New London bright and early Thursday morning they picked up more rides and made Putnam—only four miles from Camp Utopia—in what they termed three hitches and using only two hours time.

Other groups of boys from the camp covered Rhode Island and Massachusetts territory during the same period. All of the boys who were out are now in camp for the week-end.

As the first of August approaches, even the casual observer in this section is able to note the unmistakable signs in nature that so surely indicate the passing season. All about the goldenrod and Joe pye-weed are nearly ready to blossom. The few martins that favor the local boxes will be getting away in less than two weeks.

Thirty years ago great colonies of purple martins came to Jewett City for their summer housekeeping. The late Frederick H. Fanning and William G. Duce, by a coincidence both master mechanics, provided boxes on poles. For years every tenement was taken and martin broods were raised. It is believed that continual harassing by the English sparrows is responsible for their practical disappearance here.

A writer in the current number of The Auk tells an interesting story of how the little town of Greencastle, Pa., was once a martins' paradise. Then for 15 years not one came. George Blosses conducted a jewelry store on the square, in front of which, erected on a pole, hung a large wooden watch that was the trademark of his profession. One April morning a solitary purple martin alighted on the stem of the watch. Mr. Blosses rushed to his cellar and brought out one of the old martin boxes. The solitary Mr. Martin looked it over, found it to his liking, and flew away, to return in three days, accompanied by a large flock that took up all the available boxes, as though a break of 15 years had not occurred.

WESTERLY

"Besieged" was Westerly today. Off her south shore soon after 11 o'clock this morning hovered in close formation and in sight at one time with low elevation a fleet of 23 seaplanes of the United States government. In some way this fleet must have sent back information of her defenceless condition (the gun in front of the state armory on Dixon street has not yet been mounted) and soon after 1 o'clock there was a clatter at the Pawcatuck river bridge and Troop B, 3rd Cavalry, 63 enlisted men, with 70 horses, 4 wagons, with 14 mules, all in command of Capt. H. L. Nielson, with Lieut. R. H. Garity, came into Westerly. Clattering up High street, causing the shopkeepers to rush to their doors and even the summer visitors to pause, the troop proceeded to the rifle range grounds of the 249th Co., R. I. C. A. C., where the picket line was stretched, the pup tents pitched and the troop encamped for the night on the west shore of Burden's pond.

On the arrival of Troop B, at the camp site near Burdon's pond the 250 picket line was stretched while the horses were driven to water. The 17 pup tents were pitched on the side hill parallel to the picket line. When the horses returned they were given feed while the men partook of the following "chow" prepared by Mess Sergeant Solates; veal luncheon loaf potato salad, cold tomatoes, cocoanut cookies, bread and coffee. These were prepared with the aid of a camp kitchen.

The 3rd Cavalry is one of the oldest regiments in the army being authorized in 1845 and took part in over 200 engagements in the Civil war, Indian expedition, Spanish war and punitive Mexican Mexican war and was the first cavalry regiment to go to France, leaving October, 1919. The insignia of the troop which has been adopted six months ago, a cavalry bugle with a signet 3, above it, metal shield worn on the bugler's hat, "Brave Rifles, you were baptized in fire and blood and you came out steel!" The words of General Winfield Scott at the battle of Chapultapec, Mexico, is the motto of the troop. Accompanying the troop is Lieut. B. M. Creel U. S. A. instruction officer of the Connecticut national guard and stationed at Hartford who remained at Quansett Point to instruct Mass. state troops which will arrive July 28 and R. I. troops arriving August 14. Troop B broke camp at 5.30 this Friday morning and will make camp at Wakefield on Friday night.

Theodore Bodenwein of New London was a visitor in Westerly and Charlestown Tuesday evening.

The household goods of Charles H. Gavitt were removed from his residence, 108 High street, on Thursday.

The fire alarm at C. B. Cottrell & Son's plant blew 52, the box located at Moss and Palmer streets, about 4.15 Thursday afternoon for a fire in a chimney of the house owned and occupied by Raymond E. Stillman, of 30 Moss street. Sparks, coming from the chimney lighted on the shingled roof and a hole was burned through. By the help of a couple of garden hose the flames were kept down until the arrival of P. S. Barber Hose Company, which used chemicals to extinguish the blaze. At the same time the fire was fought underneath the roof. The damage amounted to $50.

Wednesday afternoon at 3 o'clock fire was discovered in the house in Pawcatuck owned by D. C. Hinckley and occupied by Sampson Spry, 15 Lincoln avenue. Henry Brooks, who was unloading lumber made his way into the home and with the aid of buckets of water extinguished the fire which had started in a basket of clothes near the window. The curtains caught fire and were badly burned. Mrs. Spry was at the Episcopal church at the time and no one was in the house.

At the home of the bride, Mrs. Flora Isabelle Turtis, 57 School street, on Wednesday afternoon took place her marriage to Nicholas Mooney of Pawtucket. The wedding was performed by Rev. Byron U. Hatfield, pastor of the First Baptist church, the double ring service being used. The bride is the daughter of Patrolman Albert C. Lamphere and Isabelle (Kinney Lamphere, of Watch Hill. The groom is a well known operator of the Norwich Westerly bus and is the son of Simon and Guiseppa (Elonaggio) Mooney of Italy. Mr. and Mrs. Mooney will make their home at 57 School street.

Chief of Police Thomas E. Brown arrested a man on Pierce street Thurday morning. When brought to the station house the man apparently could not understand English for on being asked question he would bow his head "yes" in answers to all queries. The man may be a Russian or a Poiander as an effort is being made to find some interpreter who can obtain information from him, who was roaming about Pierce street. Printed in ink on the in side of the man's vest was the name C. Obuckowaki.

Passing Pleasant View at 11.10 Thursday morning were a fleet of 22 airplanes which were in one fleet and headed east. The leading plane was closely followed by a second in single line, following came two groups in the formation, a group of two more with the remainder in formation. Assistant Secretary of the Navy Theodore Roosevelt is believed to have been a passenger in one of the planes. The clear atmosphere and low altitude caused the wherring of the motors to be plainly heard so that the beaches which were lined with bathers were augmented by the occupants of the cottages all along the south shore of Rhode Island.

STONINGTON

Thursday, members of the U. S. regiment regulars, Company B, Cavalry, composed of one troop of 65 men, with their horses and a large number of ten and supply wagons, under command of Captain Neilson, passed thro Stonington, en route from Fort Ethan Allen, Vt., bound for Quansett Lake, R. I. They spent Wednesday night at Niantic, Conn., camp and Thursday night was spent at the armory at Westerly, R. I. The troop is to spend a few weeks at camp.

The Jitney players, who appeared and Mrs. E. P. York, Tuesday pleased at the Hill, the summer home of Mr. a large audience, the proceeds are to go into the treasury of the community house.

Our harbor for the past week, has been unusually illumined, by several houseboats that have been in our harbor. The yachts have been here have made the place look like a small Venice, by their shining lights. The Dorinda, is the latest one that has laid in here, having come from New York.

Lord's Point cottages had a scare Wednesday when a stranger was caught stealing from one of the cottagers, while Mrs. Johns, who has a summer cottage, with with her guests returning from the Lord's Point Inn, where she had taken her dinner, and entered the cottage, Craig-Y-Mor, she heard some one in the house, and gave the alarm. Her son ran from the street to the rear of the house, and Lewis Wilcox who was shingling a house near by, ran and overpowered a man seen coming from the Johns house. They knocked him down and he surrendered a gold watch prized by Mrs. Johns as it belonged to her dead son, $16 in paper money and some change, and a diamond ring. Sheriff Brown of Mystic and Officer McWilliams were sent for, and the young man was taken into custody and placed in the lockup, and a keeper, Patrick McGrath, was placed over him. Thursday the lad escaped, having overpowered the man in charge. There were two others with him, who came to the point to sell blueberries, and advertising signs were placed all over the old Cadillac car, which was a 1905 model. The man who broke in, was described as an Italian, about 25 years old, dark complexioned, and about five feet tall, and wore only a shirt and a pair of trousers. It is believed that he swam out away from shore and made his escape. Mrs Johns is a daughter of ex-Governor Tener, of Pittsburgh, Pa.

WHY FARMERS ARE TURNING TO NOSTRUMNS AND QUACKS

(Written Specially For The Bulletin.)

I don't recall ever having seen a sadder example of the blindness which leads into the ditch than in a recent advertisement of one of the big New York city banks, printed in a New York city paper. The main part of the advertisement runs as follows:

"We look over the business world and find it full of promise. There is practically no unemployment. Our steel and iron industry is working full blast, our crops of all kinds are bountiful, our mills are preparing for big fall trade, our railroad earnings are making records, labor and capital are coming together upon agreeable terms. Our automobile factories are turning out product unprecedented, our building on every side is beyond conception. Our gold is of record volume, our money market is easy. Our banks are liquid and so-called frozen credits are things of the past. Check clearings, denoting record business, are amazing, our merchants have small inventories and big cash on hand."

And yet, despite this simply bee-you-tee-ful outlook which gladdens the banker's eyes, he admits that the country is in a "morbid condition." People are "groping and worrying and ducking and dodging." They are "skirmishing to find reasons for unrest." The atmosphere, he finds, is charged with fear of "something hanging over us." And he can't understand it. He thinks our troubles "local and silly," and doesn't hesitate to say so.

In my very much younger days, I remember having been deeply moved, almost fascinated by a rude wood-cut in one of my child's books, representing a goggle-eyed gentleman reaching out and up after a will-o'-the-wisp which floated tantalizingly just over his head—and directly above a horrible morass into which his next step was sure to plunge him.

I pictured in imagination the hopeless death which awaited him, strangling in that repulsive slime, and used to call out to him to watch his step, as if he were a real person and could hear me. Even to my childish mind it seemed incredible that any human being could become so intent on a floating and fleeting deception in the air as to pay no heed to the ground under his feet.

I'm not sure, now, but I've found his flesh and blood incarnation in a New York city banker.

Please read over again that bank-inspired "blurb" of his which I have copied above. In doing so, kindly notice just what sources he openly draws his optimistic visions from. The steel and iron industry is in full blast; the mills are expecting big business; the railroads are making money; the automobile factories are humming; building projects are innumerable; our banks are "liquid," (whatever that may mean); our money market is easy; our check clearings are "amazing"; and—"our crops of all kinds are bountiful." Only in that one seven-word clause does he so much as refer to the basic industry of all, the industry on whose prosperity not only all other prosperity but national life itself depends—the industry of farming.

He points out a round dozen of twigs on which his fecund imagination sees green leaves bourgeoning to the breeze, and utterly fails to note the disease which is draining the big trunk of its life and rotting the roots of the tree.

With the exception of that one misleading reference to bountiful crops he leaves out as of no importance the one greatest factor of the whole problem. And what boot "bountiful crops" to the farmer who produces them, if he is refused sufficient pay for them to reimburse the cost of growing and harvesting them? So far as the farmer is concerned, he would be dollars better off if his crops weren't nearly so "bountiful." If there were not enough wheat and corn and potatoes to go 'round, he might get paying prices for such as he has. But with a big supply "the market" will play its old trick. He will be compelled to sell for a song or else let his crops rot in the fields. He will be shoved a few more furlongs down the road which leads from bankruptcy to beggary.

The city banker utterly fails to realize that the prosperity, the welfare, the very existence, even, of our civilization depend upon the widespread and attractive prosperity of the one fundamental industry, that of the farmer. He has much to say about the boom in mills and factories and railroads and automobile shops and banks, etc. But he can't see the slump in farming.

Yet they reckon ill who leave that out.

The New York Tribune hit a big nail squarely on the head when, the morning after the late senatorial election in Minnesota, it said:

"Dollar wheat and $16 a day for bricklayers elected Magnus Johnson senator from Minnesota. These two facts illustrated to the farmer's mind the gross inequality in the process of post-war deflation."

That is an exact statement of the truth. It seems a bit queer that even a New York city banker can't understand it.

Those two facts also explain why a red-eyed radical like La Follette seems today to sway a more effective influence than really constructive statesmen and surplus-producing executives. They also explain Brookhart's almost insolent demand for the immediate calling of a special session of congress to "do something more" for the farmer.

They also explain why the atmosphere is charged with that fear of "something hanging over us," which the New York city banker, with his eyes firmly fixed on his own particular fill-o'-the-wisp can't seem to visualize.

If he and his like-blinded compeers and the LaFollette-Brookhart-Johnson circus keep on long enough and far enough they'll all find themselves in the swamp-hole before they know it.

This, perhaps, might not be wholly regrettable, if they should tumble in alone. But they won't. They'll carry the rest of us with them. The wise will have to lose as well as the ignorant; the innocent will have to suffer with the guilty.

That's the hard thing about it.

I have small liking and less admiration for the old line politicians of either party. But one must give even the devil his due, and whatever one may think of the "peanut politics" too many of them play, few of them have been guilty of throwing monkey-wrenches into the machinery, under the pretense of oiling it up.

That last is exactly what the woozy-brained radicals whom the west is sending to congress altogether too freely want to do, however.

They would comprehend it better if they could be compelled to spend the next few years farming for a living—and getting no living except that which they won from the farm.

They would then begin to see how "big business" and "organized labor" are combined in a joint crusade for bigger profits and higher wages—all to be wrested by force or cunning from the farm-lands and the men who still try to work those lands.

They would begin to comprehend why so many farmers are growing wild under what The Tribune calls "the gross inequality" of price and wage movements since the war. In truth, "gross inequality" is a mild term for the facts. Most farmers describe them in shorter and uglier words. And the number of farmers who are themselves growing ugly is daily increasing. Nothing else explains why those ordinarily sound-headed farmers of the west are turning in desperation to the nostrums of economic quacks and political fanatics.

It is today a fact, known to practically every farmer in the country, that he can't sell his major crops for enough money to pay the wages asked by his hired men. Nor can he raise any crops without first paying treble prices for the seeds and the tools and the fertilizers required in production, to say nothing of food and fuel, and clothing bills.

Very few of the things the farmer raises, either east or west, bring him in markedly higher prices than they brought him ten years ago. But practically everything he has to buy costs him from two to three times as much as ten years ago.

A man can smile at rising prices if his income keeps rising in equal proportion. But it's a different proposition when his income clings to about the same old levels, while his outgo bounds high and ever higher, like an escaped balloon before a thunder-storm.

"Heads I win; tails you loose" say business and labor together to the struggling old hayseed, whose pockets both are trying to pick, even while they are feasting on his bounty.

I don't wonder that they are, many of them, beginning to see red.

I don't wonder that they're discarding turfs and small sticks and are picking up stones to throw at their orchard-robbers.

Do you?

What I do wonder at is the fatuous folly of blurb-writing bankers and stall-fed political economists and pettifogging politicians in pretending to cry "Peace, peace," when there isn't a sniff of peace in the air which blows over the farm-lands.

Considerable contempt was once expressed by an admitted authority for the wiseacres who could discern the face of the sky, but couldn't discern the signs of the times.

Perhaps there were city bankers and farmer-labor senators, even in those days.

The historical fact which should give us pause is that, not very long after the rulers of Jerusalem were thus characterized, the city fell. And great was the fall thereof.

THE FARMER.

(Special to The Bulletin.)

New London, July 26.—An automobile, owned and operated by Lee E. Page of Ellington avenue, Burnside, was wrecked this morning when the machine and a trolley car of the Connecticut company were in collision at the corner of Neptune and Pequot avenues. The automobile sustained a smashed radiator and fenders and was put out of commission completely. The trolley car was damaged to such an extent that it was taken from service. Page escaped injury except for trivial bruises. Traffic on the main line of the trolley company was interrupted a considerable length of time because of the accident. Page started for Ocean Beach shortly after 8 o'clock and took the Pequot avenue route. As the automobile was approaching the corner of Pequot and Neptune avenues and at an estimated speed of 25 miles an hour. Page did not observe the trolley car approaching the curve from Neptune avenue. As the automobile rounded the curve it came upon the trolley car the two vehicles crashed head-on. The trolley car was derailed and a wrecker was dispatched from the car barn to replace the car on the iron, this work occupying about an hour.

William Moran, a former sailor in the service of the government, was arrested at Ocean Beach this morning by Sergeant Nelson Smith and Patrolman John Sullivan, charged with being a deserter. Moran was taken to the police station, together with a Norwich woman, with whom Moran had been residing at the Diamond lodging house as man and wife. At the police station Moran was locked up, but later was delivered to the military authorities at the submarine base. Moran, it is alleged, deserted three years ago and during the greater part of that time resided on Mahan street, but recently transferred his residence to Ocean Beach. The Norwich woman was detained about two hours, after which she was released upon her promise to return to Norwich. The woman declared that she had become estranged from her husband, who had deserted her and her child and that she went to reside with Moran because he always had treated her with kindness and consideration. She declared that it was her intention to marry Moran as soon as it was legally possible for her to do so.

There is no change today in the condition of Joseph Epstein, Holyoke, Mass., shoe merchant, who with his wife and son, thrown from their automobile on the Hartford turnpike, near Colchester, Sunday, at Lawrence hospital. Epstein's condition was considered critical. Epstein sustained among other injuries a punctured lung. Mrs. Epstein sustained abrasions and contusions but her condition is considered excellent. Sidney, Mr. and Mrs. Epstein's nine-year-old son, who received a fractured skull and who was operated upon Sunday evening, is said to be resting comfortably and his condition is considered favorable.

An automobile owned and driven by Ludwig Sornowski, of Montville, and a machine, owned and driven by Oddino Mantaneri of No. 135 Ashcraft road, collided this morning at the corner of Lincoln and Connecticut avenues. Both cars were damaged and one of the occupants of the former automobile sustained slight injuries. Montaneri was arrested by Sergeant Nelson Smith, charged with reckless driving. When the case was called in the police court counsel for Montaneri requested a continuance, which was granted, the case being assigned for trial Saturday. The machine operated by Sosnowski, was loaded with employes of the Bloom silk mill, who reside in Montville, en route to their work when the accident occurred.

Joseph Scroggie of No. 46 Fremont street complained to the police last night that his 12-foot hrowboat that had been moored in the rear of No. 493 Main street, had been stolen.

James H. Hanley of Pawtucket, R. I., today requested the New London police to assist him in locating his son, Lester J. Hanley, who is missing from home. The father was of the opinion that his son left home to join the Sells-Floto circus, which recently exhibited in New London.

Vincent Borgina, a New Haven pedlar, drove out of Bank street yesterday and kept right on up through the safety zone into which no automobile is allowed. He might as well expect to get into King Tut's tomb as to get into the area between the cement posts with the flashing lights and get out again without being arrested. Sergeant Hick grabbed Vincent and hailed him to the police station where he gave a bond for appearance in the police court this morning. He was there at the time and after he explained how confused he became and didn't realize until he was in the maze, Judge Prince suspended judgment.

Robert Hanson, charged with turning his car on State street, admitted he was guilty. But he erred by mistake, for he mistook the turning point. Then it was discovered that he had no registration for his car, though he had paid for it and had received markers from the state. It is supposed the registration papers were lost in transmission in the mails.

Miss Eleanor Dray of Terrace avenue, Edward Riordan, Bank street; Miss Mary Kane, Pearl street; George Schellens, Groton; Andrew Richards, East Lyme; and Miss Mabel Buckingham, patients at Lawrense hospital, were discharged today.

Thomas Ryan, of No. 105 Blackhall street, a letter carrier, whose automobile is alleged to have been the machine which was racing with a car owned and driven by Calvin N. Edmunds, of No. 42 Maple avenue, on Tuesday night, when Edmunds' car skidded on the pavements of Main street and crashed through two show windows of the furrier store of B. M. Baline, was not tried in the police court this morning on the charge of reckless driving. Ryan's case will be heard at the session of court Saturday forenoon. Witnesses declare that both Ryan's car and Edmunds' automobile were traveling at an estimated rate of 40 miles an hour a few yards from where the crash occurred. Edmunds was not presented in the police court yesterday morning, the prisoner being discharged prior to court. It is understood that both Edmunds and Ryan had been at the clubhouse of the hook and ladder company at Richards' grove and were returning to the fire company's headquarters when the accident occurred.

It is believed that John J. Denney, the New York Young man, who made his escape from the lockup at Mystic early last evening by jumping into the Mystic river and swimming ashore, is the crook that entered the summer residence at Ocean Beach of Charles B. Ware of Hartford on the 14th inst., at which time $5, a string of gold beads, a pair of diamond earrings and a crescent pin, were stolen. When Denney was locked up following his being charged with burglarizing a cottage at Lord's Point, Deputy Sheriff James Brown found a pair of diamond earrings and a crescent pin in possession of the crook. Late last night when Sergeant Louis Green of the force of special agents of the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad, was making his rounds in the station yard he came upon a young man, but believed the fellow was simply passing through the yards to the depot. Later upon seeing the same fellow, Green questioned him and decided to take the fellow to the police station to determine whether the New London police could identify him, especially when the suspected fellow stated that his aunt, Mrs. Oddo, resided on Shaw street and Patrolman Howard Sloan was the officer on that beat at night. On the way to the stationhouse the crook bolted from alongside Green and passed through North Bank to State street and disappeared. Green continued to the station house and made known the incident and it was then revealed that the description tallied with that of Denney. Denney had related to Sheriff Brown that he had an aunt named Oddo living on Shaw street. Had Green been in possession of this information he would have taken the customary precaution against the escape of the prisoner. When Denney escaped from the Mystic lockup he wore only shoes, stockings and a pair of khaki trousers. When Green intercepted Denney he had provided himself with a coat and hat. At the home of Mrs. Oddo this morning it was stated by her that she had no relative named Denney.

Miss Emily Norris of New York, is the guest of her brother, Dr. Van Horn Norrie at the latter's summer home at the Pequot.

Mrs. Edward Harkness of Waterford, the Great Neck section, opened her grounds today and charged an admission to all who desired to inspect them. There were 149 such persons who paid a fee of $1 each to view the grounds and the display of plants and blooms. The money goes to the Waterford Nurses' association.

It isn't known yet whether the city will find a customer for the ferryboat Mohegan that has been running on the river a number of years. The sale of the boat is desired and parties have been in this city to inspect it, but they have not reached a decision whether they will give the price the municipality's representative ask for the craft. The Mohegan was purchased originally by the Thames Ferry company, which was the Messrs. Chappell. They operated the boat during the years it was a great money earner and when the lease expired they sold it to the city. Now the city wants to get rid of it as it is a source of expense to operate it.

Mrs. Dora Backus of Brooklyn, N. Y., has returned home, having been entertained several days by Mrs. Mary Dias.

The wedding of Glen Drake of Flint, Mich., and Miss Loretta Hannigan of Steward street, will take place in Flint next month. Mr. Drake, who was formerly employed at the Monte Cristo garage, is now employed by the Buick Motor Co., at Flint. Miss Hannigan was until recently employed as bookkeeper by the Monte Cristo garage. Wednesday afternoon at the home of Miss Jane Walsh at Best View a linen shower was given Miss Hannigan.

Joseph Keenan, son of Mr. and Mrs. Matthew Keenan, has recovered his bicycle, stolen yesterday from the basement of Saltonstall school. This afternoon Patrolman Timothy C. Sullivan discovered an abandoned cycle at Ocean Beach and had it taken to the police station, where it was later identified and claimed by the youth.

The first refusal of an autoist to comply with a request of a policeman to refrain from parking on the west side of Bank street, between State and Golden streets, occurred this evening when a member of the police force drove to a point in front of the Capitol theatre. An officer on that beat requested the policeman owning the car to recognize the request of the city manager and to move his car south of Golden street. The owner of the automobile told the requesting policeman where he could go to, and it wasn't a place where overcoats or serges are a requisite towards comfort.

Troop B, Third cavalry, of Fort Ethan Allen, Vermont, left on a continuation of their hike this morning when the troop left Niantic en route to Quonsett Point, R. I. The soldiers, who received instructions two weeks at Niantic, passed through New London about 9 o'clock.

David H. Seaman, manager of the railroad hotel at Midway, has sold a house in Webster, Mass., in which Mrs. Seaman formerly resided, and has purchased the residence at the corner of Pequot avenue and Thames street, formerly owned by Byron A. Fones, a former resident of New London, now residing in New York, where Mr. Fones is employed by the Merritt-Chapman-Scott Wrecking company.

About eighty attorneys, members of the Connecticut State Bar association, held their annual luncheon this afternoon at the Hotel Griswold. The affair was informal, with no business or speechmaking. The afternoon was spent in a social way. Attorney Philip Z. Hankey of New London was in charge of the arrangements for the event.

Sergeant Samuel Hick, armed with a search warrant, and accompanied by six patrolmen, went this evening to No. 6 Chelsea street, a two-family house, owned and occupied by Joseph Belsini, where it was believed a quantity of liquor for the bootlegger traffic would be found. The officers reached the house about 7 o'clock and made a thorough search, but were not rewarded in finding a solitary drink. The information the raiders possessed was that a quantity of alcohol and liquor, part of the cargo of the fishing smack Bertha E., seized in port several nights ago, had been placed in storage at the Chelsea street house. The police were given the wrong tip, or else they overlooked the hiding place of the alcohol and liquor.

Joseph Perry and Joseph Silva, both of Stonington, are patients at Lawrence hospital, having been admitted to the institution early this evening, the automobile in which they were riding being struck by a Groton and Stonington trolley car on the Old Mystic road, between Mystic and Noank. Both Perry and Silva were thrown from the automobile, which was wrecked. The extent of their injuries has not been determined, X-ray pictures having been taken, but not seen yet by the attending surgeons. It is believed that Perry has a fractured hip and Silva injuries to his shoulder and upper part of the body.

QUALITY CORNER NORWICH, CONN.

New Discovery Makes Table Cloths Look New Again

No Matter How Stained, They Wash Out Spotless and Lustrous White.

It has been found that when just a little NACO, the wonderful new discovery, is added to the wash water with the soap, the table cloth you thought ruined emerges spotless, white and lustrous as when it was first taken from the hope chest. NACO is the preparation now used by textile manufacturers to give new linen and cotton goods that marvelous white sheen you so admire in goods that have never been used. It is now available to every housewife, so that Monday after Monday, year in and year out, she can bring back that snowy whiteness that usually disappears at the first touch of the tub.

No matter what the spot or stain, it cannot stand before NACO. And dirt and grime are quickly loosened so that the washboard is hardly needed. Think what that means in the longer life of the garments—the sheerest that you ever saw without wear on the flimsiest fabrics.

Not only in the washtub, but also in the scrub bucket the housewife has in NACO an ever-present help. It cuts the grime and grease everywhere—on doors and walls and woodwork—on tiling and porcelain—saves scrubbing and rubbing—and will not injure the most delicate surface.

Your grocer has Naco—15 cents the bottle.—Adv.

FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL

Day's total sales, 827,000 shares.

MARKET WAS IRREGULAR.

New York, July 26.—Stock prices generally moved within narrow and irregular limits during the greater part of today's session. Quiet strength characterized the early dealings with a number of good gains being recorded in the steel, equipment and automotive groups and by the hard coal carriers. Prices sagged in the early afternoon, rallied feebly and then reacted again in the last hour with gains slightly exceeding losses at the close.

The final decline was precipitated by heavy short selling of the Northwestern rails, based on the recent unfavorable developments in the wheat market and the application for a receivership for the Minneapolis & St. Louis railroad. The growth of the farmer-labor movement in the northwest, as reflected in the recent election of Magnus Johnson as United States senator from Minnesota, and the expected demands for higher wages by the big brotherhoods also have had a depressing effect on these shares despite the unusually favorable June earnings statements and the continuation of record car loadings. Northern Pacific and Great Northern Preferred each closed more than two points below yesterday's final prices.

Strength and activity of the Reading railroad issues reflected speculative expectation of benefits that would accrue to stockholders under the segregation plan recently approved by the federal district court. The common advanced 1 1-2 points and the two classes of preferred each showed a net gain of about 2 points.

Trading in the steel shares was rather quiet pending an official announcement on the U. S. Steel corporation's plan for putting the eight-hour day into effect in its mills. Declaration of the regularly quarterly dividend of $1.25 by Bethlehem Steel set at rest rumors that the dividend was in danger, the stock gaining 1 point on the day.

Peoples Gas was heavy on reports that the Illinois commerce commission had ordered the four large public utility companies in the state to put into effect new rates which will materially lower their gross income. Oils yielded moderately on announcement of another cut in the price of Gulf Crude coincident with the report of continued record breaking production.

Call money held steady at 5 per cent. Business in the time money market was quiet with a few 60 and 90 day loans arranged at 5 1-4 per cent.

The feature of the foreign exchange market was the further collapse of the German mark to .000125 cents, or 800,000 to the American dollar, on the announcement that German printing presses were now adding more than two trillion marks daily to the note circulation. The other European rates advanced slightly on the announcement of a reopening of the Ruhr frontier. Demand sterling was quoted around $4.59 1-2 and French francs around 5.98 cents.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET.

Chicago, July 26.—Assertions that 400,000 bushels of wheat bought for shipment from gulf ports to Great Britain had been sold back, and had been replaced with wheat from Argentina, did a good deal today to make wheat prices here average lower. Despite a sudden upturn at one time, the market closed heavy at 1 to 1 1-2 cents net decline, with September 97 1-8 to 97 1-4 and December 100 1-2 to 100 5-8. Corn finished at a range varying from 3-4 to 7-8 off to 1-4 cent gain, oats 1-8 to 1-4 cent down, and provisions at 2 cents lower to 7 cents advance.

Re-selling of wheat purchased for export to Great Britain was said to have been done at a discount of 1 cent a bushel under the current market price and this fact, together with apparent absence of any important new export business today, had a decided bearish effect. There was gossip, too, that some Canadian wheat which had been taken by exporters also was returned. Rains that led to downturns in the price of corn likewise were indirectly responsible for some of the late weakness in the wheat market. Besides, hedging sales were persistent and estimates were circulated that the 1923 wheat crop of North America, would total 1,342,000,000 bushels compared with a forecast of 1,156,000,000 bushels a month ago.

Blackrust reports from Canada and damage by heat and rust south of the international boundary were largely effective in bringing about a sudden bulge in wheat prices shortly after the opening. At this juncture also news became public that the French and German blockade in the occupied areas of Germany had been lifted. On the other hand predictions of cooler weather in Canada contributed to the subsequent downward slide of values.

Rains in Iowa and a forecast of showers elsewhere caused the corn market. Oats followed corn.

CURB MARKET.

New York, July 26.—Considerable irregularity developed in today's quiet session of the curb market but most of the active shares showed small gains on the day.

One of the features of the market was the strength and activity of reading new stock and rights, traded in on a "when, as and if issued basis," each touching new top prices. Reading stock touched 50 5-8 and the rights got as high as 23 1-4 but fell back later to 22 1-2, where they were up 1 on the day. Armour preferred dropped 1 point. Gillette Safety Razor dropped 5 points to 245.

Oils were mixed. Standard Oil of Indiana improved fractionally with Imperial of Canada and International Petroleum. Magnolia Petroleum advanced 4 points and Standard Oil of Ohio dropped 5 but the turn-over on each case was small.

Mining shares fluctuated within narrow limits.

BOND MARKET.

New York, July 26.—Except for a bad break in the issues of the Minneapolis & St. Louis railroad following reports that the road had consented to a receivership, there was little interest in today's quiet and irregular trading in the bond market. Minneapolis & St. Louis Refunding 4s dropped 7 1-8 points to 22 1-2 and the refunding 5s yielded 1 5-8.

Other ordinarily active shares moved largely within narrow fractional limits, one of the few outstanding changes being a gain of 1 point in Cleveland, Cincinnati, Chicago & St. Louis 6s, Series A.

Changes in the foreign group were small and unimportant. U. S. government bonds held steady.

Most of the active public utilities lost ground, new Gas & Electric Light Heat & Power 5s dropping 1 -8. In the industrial group, Colorado Industrial 5s lost a point and Wilson & Company 4 1-2s gained 1.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

The Strand.
A well filled house was thoroughly satisfied yesterday with the program that was offered the patrons of the popular Strand theatre.
The feature attraction was The Capitol Revue consisting of five people in a cycle of songs, dances and comedy, with James Gorman and Lew Mosinger. The revue is along minstrel lines and was very pleasing.
The Shelbey Bros. opened with "Dancing Differently", an act comprising some fine eccentric contortionist dancing.
Pauline Saxon and Carleton Grimm in A Box Office Attraction, proved to be a good comedy skit with some bright comedy and songs.
Agnes Ayres' latest Paramount starring vehicle, The Heart Raider, proved to be a delightfully entertaining production at its premier at the Strand theatre last evening.
This picture, a light comedy of love and adventure, directed by Wesley Ruggles, is an ideal vehicle for Miss Ayres. The star, in the role of Muriel Gray, a speed girl member of the fast social set at Palm Beach, is known as one who gets everything she sets her heart on. And when she decides to win John Dennis, a wealthy bachelor, he turns her down. When he decides to escape in his yacht, she swims out to the vessel, and on getting aboard induces the captain to permit her to remain. When Dennis discovers her the next morning, dressed in a bathing suit and sou'wester, he decides to put her ashore. A severe storm arises and then follow several thrilling scenes and a decidedly novel climax.

Breed Theatre.
Lives in danger! The chance of fortunes being wiped out. The oil fields of Oklahoma, with their towers ever reaching skyward, are the scene of action. Will the fire reach the oil wells? What can prevent it? The tragedy seems inevitable. Then one man, standing forth like a giant in the confusion, shows the way to safety. This is an exciting moment in the Fox production, The Footlight Ranger, starring Charles Jones, which is the feature at the Breed theatre today and Saturday.
In addition to the element of adventure the story has several touches of comedy and romance. The climax saves a startling surprise for the audience. The tale retains the skein of human interest and is directed with care. The photography has not been neglected.
The work which Charles Jones has previously done for the entertainment of motion picture enthusiasts warrants the belief that his next appearance on the screen will be equally satisfying. The feminine lead has been entrusted to Fritzi Brunette, who has already won recognition with her charming personality.
We have word from the producer stating that this picture portrays Jones in a role different from that in which he has been shown before. The screen actor will be given the opportunity to prove his ability again in this new part.

"Yes! We Have No Bananas"
This expression needs no introduction—it's the answer of a nation. And the song which features it is positively irresistible—especially if you hear Furman and Nash put it across on a Columbia Record with their ludicrous spontaneity.

is on the other side—so silly that you'll play it twice.

HORSES WILL RACE FOR $6,000 IN PURSES ON NORWICH TRACK

At a meeting of the Norwich Bay State Cicuit committee held this week at the office of Gilbert S. Raymond at 20 Shetucket street the ten men who backed the circuit races last fall, when a rainy season spoiled the success of the events, agreed to back the races again this year and bring the fastest horses of New England to Norwich for four days, August 8, 9, 10 and 11th.

Officers were then elected as follows: President, Elmer R. Pierson; vice president, Thomas F. Burns; race secretary, Albert J. Bailey; treasurer, C. V. Pendleton, while the racing committee comprised Elmer R. Pierson, Albert J. Bailey, Charles F. Charon, Joseph G. Bedard, William F. Bailey, Charles D. Greenman, Gilbert S. Raymond and Lyman L. Chapman.

All entries for the races were closed on Thursday, over 80 entries for 10 events being made, with more to come for two events not yet completed. The stables this year are to include horses entered by the best known racing men of New England among them "Joe" Johnson, headliner of the circuit last year; William T. Crosier, Harry Brusie, W. R. Fleming, David Warman, and "Kingfisher" Martin of Rockville.

The races include both trotting and pacing cards, the 2.11 pace and trot being the fastest cards slated. Entries have been large this year and there is every indication that the track will be taxed to the limit. The races are to be run off three each day, in all twelve races for purses of $300 each, a total purse of $6,000 for the four days' card.

A summary of the entries in the various classes turned in on Thursday, the closing day for entries, shows a number of horses entered for ten events with two big events yet to be selected. The entries are as follows:

Class	Entries
2.11 trot	15
2.14 trot	10
2.16 trot	13
2.19 trot	12
2.24 trot	12
Free for All Pace	5
2.11 pace	6
2.14 pace	12
2.17 pace	13
2.22 pace	7

In speaking of the return of the Short Ship Circuit to Norwich the following editorial of complimentary nature was recently published in the American Horse Breeder, a large horse racing publication:

"The eleventh-hour change of the Bay State Circuit meeting, week of August 6 (week after Worcester and preceding the meeting at Combination Park), from Woonsocket to Norwich, due in the main to the impossibility of completing the resurfacing of the Rhode Island track in time for the meeting, brings back into the circuit fold a track and a community of which the circuit stands in need, and the comity of the Connecticut folks in stepping into the breach, taking over a possible idle week, should be considered by the circuiters most appreciatively, meaning thereby that every possible entry should be given the meeting at Norwich.

Norwich, a most thriving city just south of Worcester, was a Bay State Circuit member last season for the first time. It was a stranger to the majority of the campaigning hosts, but those who entered there and went there to race were delighted with its racing plant, a most complete one, and with the enthusiasm of the community in its welcome to the harness horses. Unfortunately, the meeting was curtailed by continued rains.

Last winter when the circuit stewards met at Boston to assign dates for the current season a week agreeable to the Norwich sponsors was not available. An available June week would have been in conflict with the collegiate boat races on the Thames at New London, this being the big annual event in the Norwich territory, while an available August date preceded the annual fair at Norwich, Labor day week, by too short an interval. In consequence, the Norwich folks courteously withdrew their application for dates although retaining circuit membership, and were content to hide their time for a more convenient annual week. Their gracefulness in taking over the Woonsocket dates of next month is in keeping with their sincere efforts to make of their town an important link in early-season New England racing.

The same subscribers who endured the rainy week last season are sponsoring the meeting in August and they deserve the fullest support of the Bay State Circuit patronage."

Y. M. C. A. BIBLE CLASS ENDS SESSIONS

The final meeting of the Men's Bible class at the local Y. M. C. A. was held Wednesday evening, when the usual good number of young men gathered for lunch and study. The scripture used was first Kings, 17th chapter, the first 16 verses. The topic was "A Wonderful Demonstration of God's Care." It was suggested that there were two important things about God's promises: first that the God who makes the promises is abundantly able to make his promise good, and second, the promise is usually accompanied by a condition which must be met in order to make the promise operative. The most important element in faith is obedience, and this element was certainly demonstrated in the faith of Elijah and also in the widow's faith; they obeyed the command.

Some men say "the world owes me a living," but this is not really true; God gives every man a chance to earn a living, but he expects him to do his part. There are some who would like to have the ravens feed them always. God does not usually do for us what we can do for ourselves. There are two kinds of people in the world—those who get all they can out of the world and those who put all they can into it; the latter class pleases God. Moody said "the Dead sea is dead because it is all the time receiving and never giving out anything." This attitude will deaden the moral and spiritual life of any individual. Elijah enjoyed the loving favor of God and he in turn showed loving care for others. He passed it on; so should we.

RECEIVER WANTS COURT TO GIVE HIM ADVICE

In the suit of James W. Hillhouse and others of Willimantic against Giosue Duca and others of New London, the National Bank of Commerce of New London, which is receiver for Duca, has petitioned the superior court for advice as to whether or not it is to pay certain interest and taxes.

The petitioner asks whether he is to pay $2,800 interest due June 30, 1923, on a first mortgage of $80,000 held by Lomas & Nettleton Co., of New Haven which threatens to foreclose unless the interest is paid. There are also taxes due to the city of New London on July 31, 1923, for both of which the receiver has on hand a sufficient sum to pay from rents collected.

WOODSTOCK MAN DIRECTED FEEDING AUSTRIAN CHILDREN

Gardner Richardson of Woodstock, Connecticut, who has just returned from Vienna after closing up the work of the American Relief Administration in Austria, reports that the child feeding will be carried on in that country under Austrian direction throughout the school year 1923-24, a large part of the foodstuffs for the feeding of 34,000 children having been turned over to the local committees by the A. R. A.

Actual contracts have been concluded between the American Relief Administration and four of the provinces of Austria for the continuation of the child-feeding program. From the estimates made it is expected that by this arrangement about 12,000 children will be fed on this basis and in addition there will be 20,000 children fed in institutions from the A. R. A. allocation the same as last year, and the model kitchens in Vienna feeding about 2,000 children will also be continued next winter.

"It is safe to say," Mr. Richardson reported, "that as a direct result of the A. R. A. work in Austria and supported in large part by A. R. A. foodstuffs, over 30,000 school children will be fed in Austria next winter. The idea of child feeding has certainly taken root in several of the provinces and it looks as if this work would become permanent."

It's Easy Now to Curl Hair to Stay Curled

To curl the hair to stay curled, nothing equals the simple silmerine method. If a little liquid silmerine be applied with a clean tooth brush before doing up the hair, the loveliest wavy effect imaginable will soon be in evidence, and this will last the longest time, regardless of temperature or humidity. The curliness will look perfectly natural, and the hair will be beautifully glossy, yet without the least greasiness or stickiness.

Liquid silmerine is quite inexpensive, costing not more than twenty cents an ounce at any drug store.

Wonderful for Piles Says Peterson

If you received every week a dozen or more letters like the ones below from people who have suffered torments from piles, wouldn't you feel happier than the man whose life is devoted to money grabbing?

"Gentlemen—I have been suffering with a fistula for the past twenty years. During that time I have tried numerous remedies, all of which have failed.

"Two months ago I determined to give Peterson's Ointment a trial. The improvement was so decided after using one box, that I have continued, and on the completion of the fifth box am now entirely cured.

"This is written with the view of passing along the good word to other sufferers." Very truly yours, Chas. E. Caswell, 282 Third St., Albany, N. Y.

Here's another from Mr. Edgar Thomas, age 76, of Hemlock, N. Y. He writes:

"I had the itching piles, also high blood pressure. I saw Peterson's ad in the paper. I used one box and a half of Peterson's Ointment for itching piles and the piles disappeared, also the high blood pressure." 35 cents a box at all druggists.

ASKS WHY TOWNS CAN'T ESTABLISH FOREST PARKS

The state park and forest commission is ready to assist any town in the state in the acquisition of a town forest park according to a letter that state forester R. F. Hawes has sent to all the town clerks in the state. He advocates the establishment of town forest parks with the double object of timber raising and providing beauty spots, camping and picnic places.

The following is the state forester's letter:

Dear Sir:—

Do you ever stop to think of the amazing change which is taking place in Connecticut? You and I can remember when there was no good roads in the state and when the people of one town knew very little of the people in the next town. Yesterday at the underpass at Yalesville I saw a Ford from Quebec crash into a limousine from New Jersay. You know that underpass and the other points of the Connecticut roads. Everyone is travelling by auto now. Thousands of people touring the state want to picnic by the roadside, many of them want to camp over night. But many of our roads are continuous villages. One can hardly find a place for a secluded picnic such as we used to enjoy. Landowners object to camping parties because so many of them are careless about cleaning up before they leave. Every year the traffic is heavier and the places for public uses are more restricted.

This is the reason for the new movement for town forest parks. We have had city parks for a long time and a few towns in Massachusetts have had forests. The town forest park is a new development. It relieves the farmers by furnishing public places for public enjoyment and it adds to the beauty of the landscape. By combining the forest feature on the more inaccessible sections, it furnishes an object lesson in proper forest management and incidentally will become profitable to the town. A town forest park does not have to be very large. A few acres will do, but on the larger areas there is naturally a better opportunity for timber raising. A good deal of bridge timber has to be purchased by every town. This could just as well be raised in the town forest park. Why not follow the example of Petersham, Mass. and turn the wooded portion into a town forest? In other towns there are public spirited citizens who would donate small areas to their towns if they were properly approached. In still other cases the towns can well afford to purchase lots for this purpose. Some beauty spot in your town may be threatened with destruction by lumbermen. Why not save it and attract people to your locality? They may buy land and become good citizens. There should be protected just as much as the railroad banks covered with crimson ramblers.

Connecticut has reached the stage where it can capitalize its beauty and raise timber profitably for its home purpose. This office is ready to assist any town in the state in the acquisition of a town forest park and to advise on the development of such areas after they have been acquired.

OPERATORS AND MINERS BREAK WAGE NEGOTIATIONS

Have Adjourned Without Setting a Date For Another Meeting—Each Side Charges the Other With Responsibility For the State of Affairs—The Final Break Was Preceded By Miners' Ultimatum Demanding "Complete Recognition of the Union"—The Operators Promptly Refused to Grant Complete Recognition.

Atlantic City, N. J., July 27.—(By the A. P.)—Refusal of anthracite operators to grant the demand of the United Mine Workers of America for installation of the check-off due paying system throughout the industry resulted today in the sudden collapse of contract negotiations.

After a bitter contest of words, in which each side charged the other with responsibility for the state of affairs and declared its opponent was making an unfair bid for public support of an unjust cause. The joint committee of eight adjourned sine die. At the last moment a resolution was passed authorizing the secretary to reconvene the committee if either side indicated it had anything worth while to concede.

There was no indication, however, that miners or operators saw any week spots in their own armour of that of their opponents which would be apt to justify a resumption of negotiations. Since the union already had publicly declared it would not submit to arbitration, the only possible peace agency seen in the way of the threatened strike on September 1 was a government intervention.

The final break was preceded by the miners' ultimatum demanding to know the operators' attitude toward "complete recognition of the union," including "the closed shop and check-off system. Before they would proceed with the discussion of their other demands for higher wages and improved working conditions, the operators as promptly made plain that they would refuse to grant such "complete recognition."

OBSERVERS EXPECTED BREAK IN NEGOTIATIONS

Philadelphia, July 27.—The adjournment of the wage conference of miners and operators at Atlantic City without fixing a date for the resumption of the parley did not come as a surprise to observers in the anthracite fields who are keeping in touch with the situation.

An early agreement was not expected, it was said, and this was indicated it was pointed out, when the operators in the preliminary meetings proposed that the miners remain at work after August 31, in the event that a new agreement had not been reached. The miners refused to agree to the proposition on the ground that there was plenty of time to reach an agreement.

The present contract has exactly five weeks to run.

A suspension is looked for by those who have been following the negotiations closely as it was believed that neither side would yield without a show fight.

According to those familiar with the anthracite coal trade, a suspension this fall would not be as serious as the long period of non-production last summer. The fuel has been going up the Great Lakes in normal quantities, it is said, and the New England trade is also being normally supplied, assuring a coal supply to both sections during the early winter months. In addition, the movement of coal to the anthracite consuming communities of the Atlantic seaboard has been above normal this summer because of the campaign of retailers urging patrons to lay in their coal in anticipation of a shut down and because of last winter's experience.

There is very little domestic size coal in storage as it is being absorbed by the public as rapidly as produced, but steam sizes, which come in competition with bituminous coal, are piling up.

LIVES IMPERILLED WHEN AMMONIA PIPE EXPLODED

New York, July 27.—Hundreds of tenement house dwellers in the vicinity of East Seventieth and Exterior streets were imperilled late today when an ammonia pipe exploded in the plant of the Knickerbocker Ice Co., spreading the powerful fumes through several blocks.

The fire department rescue squad, equipped with gas masks, was rushed to the scene and began the work of getting persons out of the danger zone. Ambulances were called out to remove those overcome.

No one was believed to have been killed by the explosion. A similar accident occurred in the plant about a year ago, driving the inhabitants of the tenements to the street. Consequently they covered their faces with towels, knowing by experience that his was the safest way to escape the fumes.

Twenty employes were in the plant when the explosion occurred. Six were carried to the street by the others, but later were able to go to their homes.

Quick work of employes in a nearby laundry aided the rescue squad. When first warning of the explosion was given they snatched great packages of towels and ran through the tenements giving them to the occupants, telling them to soak them in vinegar and hold them to their faces when they ran to the street.

The chief engineer at the plant managed to stop the escaping fumes and in an hour residents of the district returned to their homes.

THEODORE ROOSEVELT PRAISES NAVAL RESERVE

New York, July 27.—"There are no camouflaged tango-tea sailors in the Navel Reserves," said Assistant secretary of the Navy Theodore Rosevelt, this afternon, following a review in the Hudson River of Naval Reserve vessels of the third district, embracing New York, New Jersey and Connecticut.

"These men are the real thing," he added, refering to 1000 citizen-sailors on six eagle boats and five subchasers. "Officers and crews are highly efficient, able to handle themselves at sea and ready for anything."

He said the navy department, viewing the naval reserve as the nucleus from which it may expand in war to five times its peace strength, planned to develop this branch and knit it closer to the parent organization.

With the asistant secretary as he reviewed the fleet from the dispatch-boat Privateer, were Admiral Edward W. Eberle, in honor of whose recent elevation of chief of naval operations a salute was fired, and Rear Admiral Charles P. Plunkett.

Within a radius of 50 miles of New York there are enoug skilled engineers to run the entire navy, and we want them in the reserves," said Rear-Admiral Plunkett.

THIEF BADLY BEATEN AFTER SNATCHING PURSE

New York, July 27.—Harry Gordon, known to the police as "The Snatcher," was badly beaten by a crowd of nearly 400 people at the Grand Central Station of the Interborough subway this afternoon when he snatched a purse from Mrs. Delia O'Keefe, 60. Gordon was rescued from the angry mob by a patrolman and special agents of the Interborough, but he was a sorry sight. His clothes were torn almost off and he was badly bruised up. Police say he has a record of ten convictions for purse snatching.

Putnamville, Ind., July 27.—One hundred and forty-eight inmates of the state penal institution here became suddenly ill today after eating breakfast. SEARCHING FOR SLAYER OF NEW YORK POLICEMEN

New York, July 27.—The entire police department and all the taxi drivers in the city today were put on the trial of a man and a red-haired woman charged with having shot two policemen to death in a taxi after they had been captured in a thrilling auto chase. In addition, several detectives have been recalled from vacation, acting police commission announced.

The police theory of the shooting tonight was that policemen Charles Reynolds and Frank Romanelli, who were killed while off duty, had heard the woman scream for assistance as the car swept by. They commandeered another car and after a pursuit over the Queensboro bridge; caught the taxi at 64th street and second avenue, near society's colony on the east side. Then they were shot while taking the taxi to the nearest station house.

After the shooting, the taxi sped away, the man and woman, as well as the driver, disappeared, and the car later was found abandoned.

The police based their theory that the two policemen had gone to the assistance of the woman on testimony given by the occupants of the car which the patrolmen commandeered for their pursuit. These occupants—two men and a woman—said they heard the woman say to escort: "Don't kill me."

The police are also of the belief that the man they are seeking was the same who recently shot Police Sergeant John J. Harrison of Scarsdale on July 19, when he attempted to arrest a band of automobile thieves.

LABOR LEADER SCHLEIFER MUST FACE NEW TRIAL

New Haven, July 27.—Records were broken in the supreme court of errors in session here today in the number of decisions handed down, New Haven county judgements alone numbering 23.

Ernest Schleifer, labor organizer and an official of the railroad shopmen's union, who was active in the strike of New Haven road shop workers last fall and winter, will be brought here to face trial in the criminal side of superior court under a ruling by the judges of the supreme court of errors. They court finds error in the decision of the superior court and orders the judgement set aside.

Schleifer was charged with conspiracy to assault in connection with the railmen's strike. When his case was heard in superior court Judge James Webb allowed a demurrer to the information and that threw the case out of court. State's Attorney Arnon A. Alling then appealed to the supreme bench.

The state still has a bond for Schleifer, but his present whereabouts are unknown.

In the case of Ernest C. Adams, of Bridgeport against the county commissioners of Fairfield county the court, in a decision by Justice Beach, finds no error. In this action the lower court allowed the recovery of the unexpired portion of saloon licenses paid to the commissioners. These licenses became invalid after enactment of the prohibition laws.

DECLINES CONTINUE IN THE COTTON MARKET

New York, July 27.—Another loss of 78 to 108 points was added today to the big declines already sustained by the cotton market this week, all new corp positions plunging below the 23-cent level.

October contracts reached 21.50 at the close, which was lowest of the day.

Increased offerings of new crop cotton at a low basis, together with fears of a complete German collapse added to the weakness, which was further stimulated by forecasts indicating relief from heat and drouth in Texas and Oklahoma. American mills have thus far ignored the new crop southwest offerings, but a fairly large business has been done with Europe, for early shipment from Texas points.

Not Guilty Verdict Denied in Morse Trial

Washington, July 27.—Justice Stafford declined today to grand prayers of the defense in the Morse case that the jury be instructed to return a verdict of "not guilty." This ruling was in line with those made by the court of the motions to squash the indictments.

All of the court's time was taken up today in considering the defense prayers on instructions to the jury and it was the first day since the trial began on April 20 that the presence of the defendants in the court was not required. Some of them were on hand part of the time, however, to hear arguments of District Atorney Gordon anounced that the government would not offer any prayers as to instructions as the court in tentatively approving 44 of the 197 filed by the defense had taken the same view of varous features of the case as held by the prosecuton.

Thirty-eight additional prayers for instruction were filed by the defense today and these will be taken up tomorow. Final decision with respect to all of them will be made by Justice Stafford before the arguments before the jury begins Monday.

Was Tempted, Fell, And Was Fined $1,000

New York, July 27.—Julian B. Baker, a brother of the former secretary of war, Newton D. Baker, today confessed himself a failure as an amateur rum-runner and was fined $1,000. Meanwhile his 30-foot cabin cruizer Modesty and six cases of whiskey it carried are being held by the government.

It all happened this way, in Mr. Baker's own words, when he appeared before Edward Barnes, assistant United States Solicitor:

"I had never even thought of trying to bring in any liquor, until the opportunity and the temptation presented themselves together.

"Yesterday I was preparing to test a new anchor I had bought for my yacht, and just as I was starting out my friend, Harry Hyatt, came along. So I asked him to go with me.

"We cruised around for a while and presently found we were in the midst of the rum fleet. At that moment, never before, it occurred to me that the yacht club was giving a shirtwaist dance tomorrow night, and here was a chance to make it a merry one by getting a supply of liquor without paying the exorbitant prices of the bootleggers on land.

"I bought six cases of scotch at $27 a case, and we started back."

About this time, 100 yards from the schooner J. B. Young, from which the purchase was made, the modesty encountered the Coast Guard Cutter Manhattan, commanded by Captain Michael J. Ryan. Captain Ryan displays great curiosity whenever he finds yachts cruising around the Jersey rum fleet.

"What's that?" he asked, pointing to the cases.

"Scotch."

There ended all hope of the Tamaqua Yacht Club in Sheepshead Bay, of which Mr. Baker is a member, having a wet social tomorrow night.

Baker was charged with transporting liquor within the 12 mile limit. He was not charged with criminally violating the prohibition laws, inasmuch as Mr. Barnes held there was no evidence of a conspiracy and the seizure was made outside the three-mile limit.

TESTED THE SMALLEST SEAPLANE IN THE WORLD

Washington, July 27.—The navy today tested out the smallest seaplane in the world, designed by naval aeronautical engineers for the use from submarines at sea.

The plane weighs approximately 1,000 pounds including its sixty horsepower engine, and can be knocked down into small units, stoved away on a submarine, and then assembled again ready for flight within a few minutes.

The type tested at the naval air station at Anacostia today is of wood and wire, and within a month machines of that build will be delivered to various submarines. Another type for similar use is being made of metal.

When assembled the plane could be put in an ordinary living room, for it is only eighteen feet between wing tips.

PRESIDENT HARDING FINDS THAT ALASKA IS DOING WELL

Reports to the American People That He Had Found Nothing Wrong With That Territory—Declares There Must Be No Reckless Sacrificing of Resources, Which Ought To Be Held Permanent, in Order to Turn Them Into Immediate Profits.

Seattle, Wash., July 27.—(By the A. P.)—Despite the delay in the arrival of President Harding in Seattle, the chief executive arrived at the Great University of Washington stadium to deliver his address on his Alaskan visit scarcely more than 45 minutes behind the schedule originally mapped out for him. He had gone through his program quickly but without eliminating any of its principal features.

The Stadium, seating about 30,000 was crowded with every seat occupied and many standing when the President began speaking after having been introduced by Governor Hart of Washington.

President Harding reported to the American people that he had found nothing wrong with their great northern territory; that there is no broad "problem of Alaska," and that Alaska "is all right and is doing well."

"I do not believe Alaska can be forced, or that it should be," he added.

"There is no need of government-managed, federally-paid-for, hothouse development. There must be no reckless sacrificing of resources which ought to be held permanent in order to turn them into immediate profits. Where there is possibility of betterment in the federal machinery of administration, improvements should and will be effected. But there is no need for sweeping reorganization."

The President Enumerated a number of ways in which the development of the territory should be aided. He declared against ruinous exploitation of natural resources and urged "a development of Alaska for Alaskans." He promised to extend the salmon reservations and thus meet one of Alaska's biggest problems.

Restrictions with respect to utilization of the forests he said, might well be lightened. Development of Alaska's coal mines must await time and the normal urging of economic conditions, he submitted, but the government should do whatever is necessary to encourage leasing and development of oil lands.

Other conclusions presented by Mr. Harding were that generous appropriations shoud be made for road building; that the federal government should be more liberal in encouraging the technical, scientific and demonstration work of the agricultural agencies, and that the government should retain ownership and operation of the Alaskan railroad.

"Alaska is designed for ultimate statehood," the President told his audience. "In a few years we can well set off the pan-handle and a large block of the connecting southeastern part as a state. This region now contains easily ninety percent of the white population and of the developed resources. It would be the greatest single impetus we could possibly give to the right kind of development. As to the remainder of the territory, I would leave the Alaskans of the future to decide."

TESTIMONY IN ROTHSTEIN AT BROKER FULLER HEARING

New York, July 27.—Arnold Rothstein, alleged millionaire gambler and racetrack man today sidestepped around a series of questions at a referees' hearing in the E. Fuller & Company bucket shop failure, designed to make him admit that $385,000 of the $5,000,00 missing assets of the firm went into his pocket as the result of huge racetrack wagers with Edward M. Fuler.

Rothstein bland and suave most of the day, almost all of which was spent in examining him—although he was ruffled once or twice by threats to commit to jail for contempt—took refuge from nearly all the questions shot at him behind one of the two phrases. "I don't remember" and "I refuse to answer on the ground that it might tend to degrade or incriminate me." "Did you ever bet with Edward M. Fuler with respect to any event?" William M. Chadbourne, of counsel for the receiver in bankruptcy, asked near the end of the session, after Rothstein had evaded questions as to reason various checks were made out to him by Fuller.

"I cant answer that on the ground that it might tend to degrade or incriminate me." Rothstein answered blandly. Then, he added, with a twinkle in his eyes:

"It's a misdemeanor to bet, isn't it?"

"You ought to know, retorted Mr Chadbourne. "Isnt it a fact that the total of such transactions with Fuller amounted to $385,000?

"The first time I heard of it was today." Rothstein replied. "I doubt very much if I did receive it."

"You dont keep books of that kind of transactions?"

"What kind?"

"The kind concerning which you have refused to testify."

"I don't know what you mean,' said Rothstein, smiling broadly.

The witness refused to answer questions as to whether he had betting transactions with William F. McGee, Fulers partner, expressing the view that his answer to that might tend to degrade and incriminate him.

He could'nt remember anyone had come to him recently with requests for financial aid for Fuller and McGee though he said he had loaned them money "many times," both before and since their firm failed and they were jailed for contempt of court for non-production of records showing what became of their assets.

"I'm telling you now that I'm not going to produce them. They haven't any bearing on this case. Is it a crime to loan money to anyone?

WESTERLY

Chief of Police Thomas E. Brown was struck and injured in Dixon House square on Friday morning by the automobile of Health Officer Dr. Samuel C. Webster, the doctor being the only occupant of his car. It is just possible that neither party will report the accident so far as they are concerned between themselves to the state board of public roads—for the services of the most versatile lawyer are challenged to produce evidence to show that culpability lies with either the doctor or the chief.

As an automobile truck, 28-150 Conn., loaded with railroad ties swung from the Square up High street. The doctor's automobile was parked in front of the Post Office (within six inches of the curbstone and on the right side of the road) with the doctor seated, the chief in conversation, stood on the sidewalk, his right arm resting on the door. The automobile of Anniello Matarese, driven by him, was passing up High street at the same time and slightly greater speed As the three machines came abreast the truck struck the side of Matarese's car which struck the doctor's car and this car in turn struck the chief's arm, making a black and blue spot and removing some of the epidermis. "No knowing what the chief may say later—at the time he showed it to the doctor and said it was nothing, as he had wounds of a similar nature inflicted every day.

The driver of the truck took the doctor's name and address and agreed to pay for the damages resulting in a bent mud guard on the doctor's machine, also a deflated tire and bent mud guard on the Matarese's automobile. No arrests were made.

The docket for the Third District court was read on Friday morning at the court house by Clerk M. Walter Flynn as follows: Civil docket—Active list:

James W. Burke, John J. Dunn, specially, vs. Thomas J. Healy. Continued one week.

Electric Paint and Varnish Co., Roche, vs. Frank Diganci, Dann. Continued one week.

This completed the reading of the civil docket and upon the entrance of Judge Michael J. Turano, the following were presented by Chief of Police Thomas E. Brown, for the Town of Westerly charged with violation of automobile laws:

David Ballou, aged 19, of Jewett City, charged with the operation of an automobile on Elm street at a speed greater than 50 miles per hour. A plea of guilty was entered. Town Solicitor John Ferguson, Jr. stated that the defendant July 23 at 5.30 operated an automobile up Beach and Elm street at a speed in excess of what the law permitted. Being trailed by an officer from Beach to Broad streets one automobile going in the same direction was passed and one going in the opposite direction. A fine of $20 and costs was imposed, which was paid.

Herman R. Edwards, 22, of Exeter, R. I., was charged with reckless driving on the Post road. A plea of not guilty was entered. Sunday afternoon a Dodge automobile owned and driven by Samuel Wolenstencroft was in collission with a Buick car owned and operated by defendant, resulting in serious damage to both automobiles. In this case also a civil suit for damages has been instituted, return of which will be made to the superior court before the September session. Attorney Ferguson, for the state said he was ready to proceed to trial, but as Edwards said he had no lawyer, he would not object to the case being continued Judge Durano continued the case to August and directed that the defendant be held in $500 bail.

Patsy Gabielle, 21, charged with passing an electric car on Beach street on the side open for the discharge of passengers, said that he would plead guilty but he wanted to "explain something." Judge Turano said he would first listen to the Town Solicitor, who said that Sunday afternoon, July 22, the electric car had stopped at a side street, called Lamphere lane, off Beach street to take on three passengers. While the trolley car was still, the defendant passed and was just ahead of an automobile following, the wheel of which following car struck and injured a passenger about to board the trolley car. The motorman of the trolley car saw the automobile pass the car and the conductor got a passing automobile and got the driver. It was stated that the passing of stopped electric cars constituted a menace on the Watch Hill road. In reply to the judge's question it was learned by Attorney Ferguson from Motorman Benjamin Richmond that the defendant's auto was 100 to 150 feet in advance of the automobile which struck the passenger. Grabielle said that he saw the trolley car stop and blue his whistle but could not stop as his car was skidding. When half way by the trolley his brakes were released. Upon questioning, it was learned that the car skidded 100 feet. Judge Turano said that the passing of a still trolley car was a serious thing and he would impose a fine of 20 and costs which was paid. Several witnesses were present but were not called to the stand.

Percy Bliven, 34, charged with operating an automobile on the Quarry road, so called, without first having the machine registered with the state board of public roads and on a second count with operating an automobile without a driver's license Attorney Ferguson said the operating took place on the Peckham Hollow or Quarry road and that the facts were made known because of a collision with another car took place there in which the machines were damaged and a person injured. The defendant said he had failed to obtain licenses and all he had to say was guilty. A fine of $25 and costs on each count was imposed which was paid.

In the civil action, Louis Deutch vs. Edith Thompson by agreement of counsel, the Judge entered a decree for possession and costs. Court then adjourned.

A baggage wagon of the Third Quartermasters corps, stationed at Fort Adams, Newport, was tethered in the rear of the state armory on Dixon street on Thursday night, while the detail of men with the wagon slept in the armory. The outfit was on the return from a practice trip to the camp at Niantic, Conn. On the trip out from Adams to Niantic the outfit passed the night in the same quarters. The wagon was drawn by two mules which were on a picket line on Thursday night. The cavalry troop at Burden's Pond passed through Oak, High streets, Grove avenue and Granite street Friday morning at 6 o'clock on their way to Wakefield, by the Post road.

Mrs. Joseph K. Barber of Wollaston, Mass., arrived in Westerly Thursday evening, and is the guest of friends.

W. Earle Babcock of Jamestown, R. I., is the guest of relatives and friends in Westerly.

Fire Chief George E. Egger received a call Friday morning at 2.30 that the boarding house of the Bradford Dyeing association on Bowling lane, Bradford, was on fire. Hastily summoning six men the Fox-Ahrens pump of the Westerly department was speeded to the fire. So successful were the efforts of the Westerly firemen that only the roof and upper story of the structure were burned. When the call for help was sent to Westerly it was to come and save the surrounding property. A line of hose had been laid from a B. D. A. hydrant by the Bradford firefighters and with the cooperation of the Westerly firemen the flames were not only confined to the boarding house but even some of that structure was saved. The fire originated in the basement and passing up through the outer partition spread out on the roof and top floor. Very little of the furnishings were removed and what remained were barely injured by water. Two streams of water were played on the fire by the Westerly pump.

Friday noon, in front of the residence of Dr. F. I. Payne on Granite street, as an automobile started on the up grade a spare tire on the rear rack became loosened and fell to the street with such force that it bounded into the air and passed through the windshield of the automobile following. This automobile was owned and operated by John O. Mills of 83 Summer street. Mr. Mills was not injured by the broken glass of the windshield. Some damage was also done to the top of the Mills automobile.

Friday morning a keeper came to Westerly from the Norwich State Hospital and returned with the "silent man" who has been locked up at the police station for the past two days. This man, whose name is C. Obuckowski, walked away from the state institution Wednesday, being picked up Thursday morning by Chief of Police Brown on Pierce street where he was roaming about.

Supt. William C. Clarke of the Westerly Light and Power Co., with Lighting Engineer D. E. Cogan, who came to Westerly Thursday as a representative of the General Electric Co. of Lynn, Mass., have gone over the proposed white way lighting voted at the Westerly town council meeting. All but a few of the proposed additional lights have been located and the remainder the council will be asked to place. It is planned to submit the result of their efforts to the special meeting of the town council Tuesday next, July 31, to hear from citizens of the town relative to highway matters—provided that sufficient time can be found at the end of that session.

Beginning Monday next, the William Clark mills of the American Thread company located on Lower Mechanic street, will be run on four days a week schedule until further notice.

Painters in the employ of the New Haven railroad are engaged at the Westerly station painting the woodwork on the exterior of the buildings, the color selected being a dark brown, which has been adopted as a standard for the railroad.

AT THE BREED THEATRE, MONDAY AND TUESDAY

By DAVID CORY

A FUNNY LITTLE MAN.

Now in the story before this I left off just as the wicked witch fell into the pond, so we needn't be afraid of her. But, Oh dear me. Sitting on the doorstep was her old black cat and wasn't she a dreadful looking thing. Well, I guess she was. Her eyes were as green as grass and right in the middle of each was a little red spot that looked like fire. And her tail was as big as a feather boa and the hair on her back stood up as straight as the quills on a porcupine.

On seeing what happened to her wicked mistress, she looked all around for something on which to fly away. And before you could say "Winkerty blinkerty", she jumped into an old dust pan which rose high into the sky. But what became of this dreadful black cat I don't know, except that a little bird told me she bumped into a steeple and changed into a bat that flew around in the night time.

Now, while Little Jack Rabbit and the handsome prince stood gazing up into the sky after the old black cat, a funny little man dressed in a green coat and red cap jumped out of the ground and sang.

"I come from the earth, deep down below,
Where the diamonds and rubies and emeralds grow.
Where the blind mole digs his winding way
With never the light of the happy day.
But we little men with our lanterns bright
Don't care if it's dark as a stormy night.

Then, dancing around the old well, he presently pulled up the bucket, and would you believe it, when he poured out the water, it turned into diamonds and rubies. Then, giving a handful to the bunny boy and a handful to the handsome prince without a word, he jumped into the bucket and went down the well, and less than five hundred short seconds they heard him singing:

"Ha, ha, ha, ho, ho, Im down below
Where the starry diamonds ever glow,
Ha, ha, ho, ho, ho!"

The next minute, up drove a coach and four.

"Here is my coach, Little Jack Rabbit," said the handsome prince, with a laugh, "come with me."

Off went the four prancing horses and if they don't run away and break their necks when a black crow flies in front of them, I'll tell you what happened when they reached the castle.

O'ROURKE SUSPENDED BY COMMISSION FOR DISPUTE REGARDING SCALES

New York, July 27.—Tom O'Rourke, veteran matchmaker of the Polo Grounds Athletic club, which promoted the Eugene Criqui-Johnny Dundee featherweight title match last night, was suspended today by the New York state athletic commission as the result of a dispute with Walter Hooke, Deputy Commissioner yesterday when Criqui and Dundee weighed in.

The commission issued no statement explanatory of its decision but O'Rourke discussed the incident freely.

"Hooke objected to a test of the scales by myself and Robert Eudeline, Criqui's manager," declared O'Rourke, "before the fighters weighed in. I insisted tat ever precaution be taken, however, as the boxers had $10,000 forfeits at stake to make 126 pounds, and the result was we found the scales to be off balance by a pound.

"I doubt whether the commission as a whole will sustain its decision when I am given a hearing, probably at the meeting next Tuesday. I am prepared to make important disclosures, however, if the case against me is pressed."

Criqui and Dundee both scaled 124 1-2 pounds.

The weighing in of Benny Leonard, lightweight champion, and Lew Tendler, Philadelphia challenger for their 10-round match at the Yankee stadium last Monday, also occasioned considerable comment. Contrary to usual custom, newspaper men were not permitted to witness the proceedings. It was announced Leonard, weighed 134 and Tendler 133 1-2, but they refused to step on the scales again to verify those figures.

SENATORS BEAT BOSTON IN LOOSELY PLAYED GAME

Boston, July 27.—Washington defeated Boston 10 to 7, today and Howard Ehmke was the losing pitcher. Six runs off his delivery in the first and one in the second gave the visitors a lead that proved enough to carry them through. Although Boston made six runs off Zahniser in the seventh. A dugout battle, mostly of words between Fewster and Picinich immediately preceded the Boston rally, but Chance compelled the players to shake hands. Score.

TIMELY HITTING IN 12TH

Cincinnati July 27.—Caveney's single, a sacrifice by Harris and a sharp single by Bohne after two were out in the last half of the 12th inning today gave the Reds a four to three victory over Brooklyn. Grimes went the entire distance for the visitors. Rixey pitched well and would have won in nine rounds but for errors by Pinelli in the seventh and ninth, each of which cost a run. Harris, who pitched the last three innings, was very effective winning his first game in the National league. The score:

Pittsburgh, Pa., July 27.—The Braves staged a batting rally in the last inning of today's Boston-Pittsburg game but fell short and the Pirates won, 3 to 2. SWEETSER LOSES TOUGH GAME TO CHICK EVANS

Cleveland, O., July 27.—(By the A. P.)—Missing an 18-inch putt on the second extra hole after running up dead from all over the green all day and sinking many long ones today cost Jess Sweetser, national champion, his golf match with Chick Evans in the semi-finals at Mayfield club of the western amateur championship, which Evans was defending for the seventh time.

Sweetser, after leading much of the forenoon round, was overhauled and put one down at the eighteenth by Chick's fine round of 69, but he in turn overhauled an Evans lead of three up and squared the match at the 36th, only to lose at the 38th by failing to sink a wisp of a putt for a half in five on the 340 yard hole after he had saved himself on the 385. 37th by holing a 12 foot putt for a half in par four.

It was a ding dong battle of the links from start to finish, both committing faults and playing supernatural golf at times in what they considered a return meet for the defeat Sweetser administered to Evans last year at Brookline in the national championship, where the Yale student overcame the former national and open title holder three and one in the finals.

As a result of his victory over the national champion, Evans will play Hamilton Gardner of Buffalo in the finals tomorrow, the New Yorker Liverpool, Ohio, four and three, in a having eliminated Joe Wells of East fine match that was almost forgotten on account of the thriller in 36 reels flashed on the green fairways at the hills and dales of Mayfield links.

TAFTVILLE-BALTIC SERIES STARTS ON SUNDAY

The Baltic A. A. is preparing to meet the Taftville A. A. club in the first game of a series between these old rivals. Manager Collins of the Baltic team has watched the progress of the Taftville club during the season and is now digging around in the bushes to strengthen his club. He has secured Art Coullard of the Blue Ridge League who is spending a week at his home in Baltic. Besides Coullard he has signed a number of other players who have good reputations in this section.

The diamond is being put in shape for the game Sunday and arrangements are being made to handle a big crowd. Manager Collins is confident of victory but Manager Troland is strangely silent on the game which indicates that he has little fear of the Baltic team.

TAFTVILLE MEETS RIVERVIEW IN OPENING GAME OF SERIES TODAY

Today marks the beginning of the struggle for the baseball title in Norwich and vicinity when the Taftville-Riverview opens this afternoon at the Providence Street grounds in Taftville. These two clubs have been at swords' points for the past ten years but never before has the interest reached such a high point. Taftville has had the edge on the Riverview club in years past but as Riverview has the best team in a number of years things may be different. The winner of this series will probably be booked for a series with Bill O'Leary's team in the fall for the Norwich title.

The game today is expected to develop into more or less of a pitchers' duel between Tony West of the Riverview team and Mike Morin, Canadinn League pitcher and formerly a Taftville player. Morin secured a leave of absence from his club to come to Taftville to pitch this game and from reports he is in better form than when he last appeared in a Taftville uniform. All Taftville is willing to back its team to the limit and many bets on the outcome of the game have aready been placed.

In comparing the two pitchers it is found that Morin has the shade on West. Last Sunday West was opposed by Cleary at Stafford Springs and West was beaten 3 to 1 while Morin pitching for Taftville against this same Cleary and the same team won his game easily. Morin also has the advantage of league training and in his two games against Montreal, the leaders of the Canadian League he won both, 9 to 4 and 6 to 5. As far as this comparison goes it would give Morin the better of West in this afternoon's game.

For the rest of the team there is little choice both being evenly matched with perhaps the hitting being in favor of Taftville. Reddy, who will catch West is admittedly a better backstop man than Joe Belair, but there are no flies on the snappy little Taftville backstop. Fay and Massey can compare favorably with Jack Murphy and Chip Dugas for hitting and fielding honors. Liberty, who is at short for Taftville, has the edge on Mills as a player. From then on the two teams man for man, break about even so it is the natural conclusion that today's battle will be fought in the pitching box.

Manager Troland has made an extra effort to accommodate the large crowd that is expected at today's game. There will be plenty of parking space and a number of grandstand seats have been held in reserve for the out of town fans. The lineups:

THE GREAT VOLO REPEATS AT COLUMBUS TRACK

Columbus, O., July 27.—(By The A. P.)—For the third time this season in four starts, the Great Volo, Walter Cox's great trotter, triumphed over Peter the Brewer in the Dispatch stake for 2.03 trotters at today's Grand Circuit races.

It was a desperately fought battle with only inches separating the two leaders and Czar Worthy being less than a nose behind in the first two miles.

The great Volo won each of the first two heats by a great rush at the finish after Czar Worthy had led practically all of the mile. In the third heat Peter the Brewer finished first with Great Volo directly behind.

The Deshler Hotel stake for 2.11 pacers also was a split heat affair. The favored Hall Bee won the first two heats and Miss Ellen Todd, third choice took the third heat, after second choice Kate Hal led the field to the half in one minute flat.

Ilo Guy, favorite in the 2.13 trot for three year olds failed to win a heat. The first and third heats went to Joe Mc., an outsider in the betting, while the second heat was won by Eugenia Harvester.

The 2.09 pace which had thirteen starters furnished the afternoon's biggest surprise. Wrack, first choice, finished no better than second in any heat, while Buddy Mac, second choice, was distanced in the second heat. Lady May C., won the first two heats and La Poloma the third one.

FOUR HOMERS FEATURE PONIES-PROFS CONTEST

Springfield, Mass., July 27.—New Haven had little difficulty defeating the Hampdens here today, winning by 9 to 3. After the first inning Joyce pitched almost no-hit ball, not more than three locals facing him each inning until the ninth. In this frame Duffy singled and successive passes to Damrau and Simpson filled the bases, but Herrera flied out to Dowd. Dowd, Bowman, Simpson and Damrau hit home runs.

The score by innings: R. H. E.

BITTER GAME BETWEEN GLASGO AND VOLUNTOWN SUNDAY

Voluntown is making great preparations for the third and deciding game of the baseball championship between Voluntown and Glasgo which will take place on Sunday. Each team has won a game, the last battle being one that went into extra innings. The odds favor Glasgo, 2 to 1, to win the series by Manager Sheldon banking on Dupont's ability to hold the visitors in hand. Glasgo has won the series for the past 23 years and now Voluntown is up in arms demanding its team to bring the title back. Tommy Corcoran will be the umpire of the game.

SMITH'S HOMER FEATURES BRIDGEPORT WIN OVER HALLIES

Pittsfield, Mass., July 27.—Joe Smith's two home runs, one in the third with the bases full and the other in the ninth with one on, figured largely in Bridgeport's 12 to 7 victory over Pittsfield here this afternoon. Score by innings:

LINDSTROM'S WILDNESS GIVES ALBANY A WINNING LEAD

Worcester, Mass., July 27.—Taking advantage of Lindstrom's wildness in the fourth, Albany ran up a winning lead quickly and hit Joe Stryker, relief pitcher, signed by the Coal Heavers today. The final score was 11 to 6. Worcester scoring in the closing innings. The hitting and fielding of Rodgers featured the game.

Score by innings: R. H. E.

ANDERSON TO MEET DETRICK IN TODAY'S MATCH

Orange, N. J., July 26.—Captain J. O. Anderson, of the Australian Davis cup team, will meet Bowie Detrick, of the Hawaiian team tomorrow afternoon on the courts of the Orange Lawn Tennis club in the first of the Australian-Hawaiian matches here, it was announced today. J. Hawes, of Australia, and William A. Ecklund, of Hawaii, will face each other in the second singles match of the day, and the four will take part in the doubles scheduled for Saturday.

Each team has two reserve players, in case of illness or accident. Hawaii has Richard A. Cooke, captain, and J. A. Richards, while Australia is holding back J. D. McInnes and W. B. Schlesinger.

VELVETMEN VS. WHITE ROCK AT TAFTS ON SUNDAY

For Sunday's attraction at the J. B. Martin field will be the fast White Rock team in a diamond struggle against the Velvetmen. The J. B. Martin team has been going strong this season and the White Rock club has an equally good record. Both teams are about evenly matched and a good game is expected.

Sterling vs East Greenwich

The Sterling baseball team will line up against the fast East Greenwich A. A. on the Sterling grounds Sunday and a good game can be expected. The East Greenwich boys promise to come strong but Sterling with practically the same team that easily defeated Nichinicke-Morse last Sunday is in no way worried.

Sterling would like to arrange games with any first amateur teams in this section of the state especially the fast Danielson team of the American Thread Co. of Willimantic.

Bearcats After More Games.

There has been a general shaking up in the lineup of the Taftville Bearcats and the team is now ready to meet any team under 18 years of age. The management would like to arrange a game for this Sunday. Communicate with Edward Benoit, Box 502, Taftville, for games.

INVESTIGATING THE FARM.

Because of resignations and reports concerning the management of the state farm for women, Connecticut is bound to be interested in result of the investigation that is now being made of that institution.

Connecticut is desirous that its institutions should be conducted in the best possible manner and if there are any serious irregularities or continued mismanagement it expects them to be promptly checked. Trouble has developed in the board of management at the state farm for women. Apparently there is a small but militant minority. It is easy to make charges and magnify conditions. It remains to be seen just what justification, if any, lies back of them.

In his endeavor to get at the bottom of the trouble and to get a report on the situation that will not come from anyone who has had a hand, interest or oversight in its management, Governor Templeton has called upon the Russell Sage foundation to make a thorough investigation. It must necessarily be an investigation from the standpoint of the best interests of the state.

Such an investigation may go into the matter more deeply than a strictly state investigation. It would seem that the plan of conducting the farm would get attention along with the inquiry into the trouble that has produced the resignation of the superintendent and disclosed the friction in the board of management.

The governor has recognized the need of applying such remedy as is needed at the institution and has placed the case in the hands of specialists. Connecticut must be impressed with the fact that his purpose is to get an impartial report on the institution and the Sage foundation can be expected to produce it. It is a sound preliminary to whatever course the facts as found warrant.

PERILOUS PRACTICES.

How many times have you seen boys or men run and jump on auto trucks when in motion and figured that it would require but a little slip in their calculations to land them under the wheels?

There is a high degree of danger in jumping onto the horse-drawn truck but when it comes to the speedier and possibly heavier auto truck the danger is accentuated many fold. The knowledge of that fact, the warnings of the drivers to keep away and the presence of the usual "Danger, keep off" signs are not sufficient to safeguard those who would take chances with their own lives.

A man, aged 33, and therefore old enough to know better, persisted in trying to jump onto an auto truck in a Massachusetts city this week after he had asked for and been refused a ride. He failed to make it and was in such a position when he fell that he went under the wheels and his life was crushed out. It was much the same kind of an accident that occurred here a few years ago when a boy undertook to jump onto an auto truck on the road to the fairground.

Plainly there was no forethought of the possibilities of failing to get onto the truck in either case. They overestimated their cleverness in jumping the trucks, or underestimated the distance or difficulties involved with lamentable results, and it is that very danger that existed in those cases that it is well to bear in mind when such a stunt is contemplated. Risking life for the sake of a truck ride is the height of folly. It is like dodging in front of a fast moving machine or stepping out from in back of another into the path of a car in motion. The driver under such circumstances has little or no chance to prevent injuries or death. The fault in such cases, especially where warning has been given, seems to be clearly established. Prevention and protection come from keeping away from such danger.

HELPING ALASKA.

Just because the president's party has seen Alaska and gotten first hand information relative to its conditions and problems it does not mean necessarily that all its difficulties are going to be overcome at once. It does mean, however, that there will be a better understanding of the situation by those who are in a position to direct and help matters that will serve to improve conditions.

The members of the cabinet who accompanied President Harding have been giving special attention to matters which come under their departments, and they as well as the president, are going to have something to say in addition to what they have pointed out as the requirements of that northern territory.

Secretary Hoover, for instance, as he insight he has gained in the fishing industry feels convinced that something needs to be done to prevent the early destruction of that industry. Methods that are being followed for the purpose of getting the largest immediate gains give no consideration to the future.

Secretary Work believes that there should be a revision of the homestead laws which would cut the red tape that exists and lend encouragement to the occupation of his land and the investment of capital there.

Secretary Wallace in his study of the agricultural situation recognizes the difficulties which the farmers of that territory face in addition to those who have a nearer and better market.

Looked at as a whole or looked at separately the problems prevailing in Alaska are not insurmountable. That doesn't mean that they are going to be solved in a jiffy. Time will be required but a better knowledge of what is needed is going to make it easier to get and put into operation the changes that are called for in unfettering Alaska. The visit is bound to be of inestimable benefit to that territory but probably through steady, progressive action.

ARMY AIR SERVICE.

It doesn't appear to be the case that an appropriation of $25,000,000 for the army air service is to be asked from the next session of congress just because such an excellent financial showing was made in the last fiscal year, but the fact that there is a large surplus makes easier the asking for twice as much as was previously granted.

It is inevitable that expansion of the air service should be sought. There is certain to be tabs kept of what is being done by France in the way of airplane development and it is not being overlooked that Great Britain is expanding with or because of the action of the neighbor across the channel. Both are already far ahead of this country in the number of machines and the efforts devoted to their development.

With the Washington agreement concerning the warships ratified it becomes evident that much the same situation relative to aviation is being developed among the nations. What one does is not unnoticed by the other. Preparations for utilising the airplanes in case of war by one prompts the others to protect itself by doing as much or a little more. It doesn't take much to get a race started under those conditions, and as with the navies there is no telling where it will stop.

We have not got to the point where defensive measures can be ignored and we are not likely to for some time to come. Neither have we reached the stage where no further development of the airplane is possible, but when a doubling of appropriations is sought one wonders if the time is far distant when an airplane agreement between nations will be sought.

THEE COAL SITUATION.

Now that the coal miners and operators have decided amongst themselves that they cannot agree upon the question of the check off and the closed shop it creates greater interest in the fuel question. The demands by the union which the operators will not grant may or may not precipitate a strike. There remains a month yet before the agreement expires and in that time it is possible to bring them to an understanding.

Thus far in their decisions there doesn't appear to have been much consideration given to the public. The demands are made regardless of the public and the fuel that it requires next year. The indications are that it is through the distress that can be caused the public that hopes for breaking down the opposition of the operators are entertained. It is plainly a case of telling the public to lump it if it doesn't like it.

It is a situation which gives warning to the government to bring into action all the machinery which it has at its command for the purpose of preventing any strike, if such is possible, and that failing to take charge of the situation and look after the interests of the public. We have good reason to believe it will be done.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

There seems to be plenty Johnson even though we haven't heard much from Jack recently.

The man on the corner says: You must make the most of July. There isn't very much of it left.

There is no chance that the participants at the coal conference will ever be charged with speeding.

The price of gasoline has taken a drop but that doesn't put any shoes on the children or ham and eggs on the breakfast table.

The British seem to have had as much difficulty seeing through the twelve-mile limit as they do some of the funny stories.

The public printer at Washington is to stop the publication of two useless books. It is a long delayed adoption of a good business policy.

When the American senators get through their investigation of Russia they will be filled with material for a record breaking filibuster.

Those telephone operators who went on a strike in New England cities are still demanding a number of things they are quite certain not to get.

It makes little difference to the fellow whose cellar is full of coal how long the miners and operators carry on their time-killing talk.

Senator Reed of Pennsylvania believes the income tax can be cut one-third if there is no bonus legislation. He appreciates the demand for reduced taxation.

July may be furnishing some record-breaking cold weather, but that will not chill the enthusiasm of the camp meeting attendants, the season for whom has already opened.

With Hungary raising a bumper wheat crop and Russia's yield providing enough for very large export shipments Europe will look less than ever to American producers.

When Argentina plans to spend nearly $150,000,000 for naval vessels and airplanes some of the smaller nations might save a few pennies by stirring up interest in a naval holiday.

THE MAN WHO TALKS

The mind is the reservoir of knowledge, but it has numerous inlets. We learn some things by sense of feeling; the taste is an avenue to the knowledge of other things; and the sense of smell gives acquaintance to still other objects. But it is probably to the ear and eye to which the mind looks chiefly for its information. For many centuries the ear was looked upon as of supreme importance in the reception of knowledge. There is no denial of the fact that it is extremely important for this purpose. Academic learning has depended largely upon it, but of late years the eye is coming more and more into prominance as an educator. It is found in the schools that history can be taught with greater success by the motion picture than by the text book. What seems very dry to the ear is made very vital when thrown upon the screen. The pioneer life of America is made real to children by making a "movie" of Emerson Hough's "The Covered Wagon."

A neighbor called my attention the other day to a freak in nature—or, what was supposedly a freak—and that was to a patch of cabbages that was almost a complete failure. Not far away was another patch in a most flourishing state. The soil was apparently the same, the two lots were transplanted at the same time, the fertilizer was the same, the variety was the same and also the seed. What made the difference? Not being an expert in the business I could offer no solution, but it made me think how many parallelisms there are to it in life generally. Two boys are born into the same home of the same parents, are treated in like manner, have the same advantages of education, but the one turns out a real scholar and the other a perfect junk-head. Why? My father once planted four very fine maples in front of his house at the same time and with the same care, three of them grew luxuriously but the fourth was always a little, measly runt. Why?

While the writer of these paragraphs is not an authority on vegetable life he has closely observed some of the phenomena of nature and cannot dispute the testimony of his senses. The other day he saw a stalk of milk weed heavily loaded with lice. While looking at it a striped bug flew onto it, and as he seemed to have struck a sort of Mohammedan paradise he began to devour the tiny little creatures until great havoc was made. Suddenly he lost interest in his free lunch, stretched himself up and put his fore legs on what in the human anatomy is called the abdomen and seemed to be going through the tortures of colic or some other bodily disease. The case was each moment growing more serious. At length he fell to the ground and after some agony he passed into the Great Unknown. What caused his untimely death? Was it poison, or overfeeding, acute indigestion, or an attack of conscience. Moral: little boy, don't eat green apples, if you do you may follow the bug.

There are many ways in which the law of compensation functions. Probably most of us are unable to see its niceties with that particular keenness of observation and expression with which Emerson sets it forth in his Essays. Even if its cruder forms are revealed to us there is striking evidence that it is everywhere present and energizing. Take it in some of its less intellectual workings, which do not appeal so strikingly to Emerson and the other mental aristocrats, we see its evidence none the less. We seldom see an ordinary garden plot that is equally good for all kinds of vegetables. It is too light for some and too heavy for others hence the possibility for variety. One even learns from observation that land producing the heaviest hay crop is not the best for many vegetables, and hence the average New England farm that has such a variety of upland and lowland is illustrative of the law of compensation.

Isaiah of old, who hobnobbed with kings, and dwelt in palaces, once made the prediction that "all the ends of the earth should see the salvation of God". These words are historical because they were uttered so long ago, and because they were written by the greatest writer of the Old Testament. That the statement was clearly prophetic is seen in the fact that they have not yet been fulfilled. Greatly as the gospel of redemption has been extended in the last century—more in fact than in the preceding eighteen—still by no stretch of the imagination can it be said that all "the ends of the earth have seen the salvation of our God", which is only another way of expressing the gospel of redemption. There is, however reason to believe that in the next fifty years it will come very near fulfillment because science is doing so much to unify the world. Knowledge can be spread so rapidly today that we are nearer the pagan world than we were to London a century ago.

The other day I saw a load of goods going away from a house on a street where removals are frequent, and the thought came to my mind, what is it psychology of the roving spirit? Hamerton in his "Intellectual Life" attributes this fever for frequent removals largely to surroundings. He says: "a great ugly town, like Manchester, for instance, makes some men such thorough townsmen that they cannot live without smoky chimneys; or it fills the souls of others with such a passionate longing for beautiful scenery that they find it absolutely necessary to bury themselves from time to time in the recesses of picturesque mountains." I have noticed that people with the roving spirit are seldom happy; they are easily dissatisfied and develop an abnormal sensitiveness to wrongs either real or fancied. The result of this brooding over ills is pulling up stakes and moving on. Such people rarely have a place they can call home or very much money.

Ought not the small boy with the sling-shot to be shown kindly but emphatically that the birds are not to be used as targets? Nobody but a confirmed grouch would think of taking the little fellow's toy away from him. He does not need to be punished but he certainly needs to be taught that the birds, most birds, are not to be molested. Probably not more than one bird in fifty aimed at is ever hit, due to the agility of the bird and the poor marksmanship of the boy. Rarely if ever is a bird killed in this way. But their tiny legs can easily be broken and also their wings. But probably the greatest damage is done through fright. They are easily alarmed and will seek other quarters, and this does great injury to those who till the soil. The greatest outside help the tiller of the soil gets is the birds. Therefore let them alone if you cannot do them any good.

On July 28, 1868—just 55 years ago today — the fourteenth amendment which declared equal civil rights was adopted as an organic part of the Constitution of the United States. It was the logical outcome of the Civil war. It was the legal finality of the Emancipation Proclamation of 1863. The troops of 1861 were called into action to put down the rebellion. But as the war progressed President Lincoln saw clearly that it would be impossible to put down the rebellion with slavery still in existence, and hence his declaration of the freedom of the slaves. The toughest question that grew out of the war was what to do with the slaves after their liberation. It was here where the greatest mistake of all was made during the period of disruption. The "reconstruction" of the south was the clumsiest piece of work ever done by the government. It gave the ballot to incompetents and worked untold injury.

THE FAR NORTH LAND OF SPITZBERGEN.

While all other lands around the pole are locked in ice, Spitzbergen remains open through the action of the gulf stream. This warm current of water flows upward by the western shores of Spitzbergen, breaking the ice there and melting the snow, and Spitzbergen in summer is one of the pleasantest spots in the world.

It is the one place in which it is possible to live in comfort without illness, for, owing to the arctic air, no disease germs can exist in Spitzbergen, says the New York World. They may arrive in the stores, clothing and bodies of men who visit these regions, but they do not long survive. In a few years, perhaps, we shall watch the islands become a health resort.

In the course of thousands of years these extraordinary islands have been discovered, lost and discovered again. They are the fabulous realm of the dead old Viking men who sailed to them in forgotten days and brought back strange stories, which their poets wove into immortal legends, and they are now to be the new wonder world of riches.

A few years ago Spitzbergen was the no man's land of Europe. A rich man had but to engage a score of hardy settlers, provide them with provisions and buildings, and he could have become lord of a kingdom as large as Greece and master of wealth beyond all calculation. But no nation, no company, no rich men thought Spitzbergen was worth occupying.

And yet in the days of Shakespeare the islands were the richest part of the young British empire! They were annexed by the Muscovy company of London, renamed Newland, and prized beyond Virginia and the New England states. Our forefathers made more money out of them than the Spaniards made out of Peru.

A Dutch explorer, William Barents, rediscovered the lost islands in 1596, but did not understand their value, and it was not till Henry Hudson found them while striving to find a northwest passage to China that Spitzbergen became in the first half of the seventeenth century what Klondike was toward the end of the nineteenth century. In the course of a few years the western island, which is about as large as Switzerland, was transformed from an uninhabited desert to a country with 30,000 men.

It was not gold that lured men to this polar waste; Henry Hudson had merely found whales. But he found whales by the hundred thousands. They were the right bowhead whales, each one worth about 2,000 pounds sterling in whale oil and whalebone. At the time whale oil was the general lamp oil and industrial oil of northern Europe. Towns and houses were lighted with it; it was wanted for working on iron and steel and for many other purposes. The whaling grounds of the middle Atlantic had been exhausted and the European peoples were suffering from a famine in oil. Fortunes of many millions were made by the whale hunters of Spitzbergen, and then, when the whales had been destroyed, the British province of Newland was forgotten. So far as the British government was concerned, anybody could have had these "uninhabited" treasure islands. Russian fur hunters settled here, but after a long struggle they failed to get a living. Then fur hunting Norsemen tried, but found the task hopeless.

In spite of its freedom from disease, Spitzbergen was regarded down to our days with the same horror as the ancient Vikings looked at it. It was still the land of death. It could be visited in summer without danger, but practically all adventurers who tried to winter there perished in a horrible way. A fearful disease attacked them. It was a disease for which the remedy abounded, for simple fresh meat cured it, and every sufferer could have brought himself back to health in the same way as Shackleton's party did under similar circumstances in Antarctica.

The disease was caused entirely by the lack of vitamines, and by eating flesh of seals or reindeer kept fresh in ice through the winter when fresh food could have been obtained to supply what was lacking.

The Spitzbergen remained the neglected treasure islands of the world through the nineteenth century, because of ignorance of vitamines. But as soon as the knowledge became known in our own time, the wild race for Spitzbergen began. It was a thrilling struggle for possession, surpassing in interest and peril the contest of the days of Henry Hudson. The Russians, the Swedes, the Norwegians and the Danes all wanted the islands. The Dutch maintained that the rediscovery by Barents gave them a complete title to Spitzbergen. The British foreign office looked up the documents relating to the Newland period and contested all the other claims. The Germans were enterprising and better equipped with knowledge than all other claimants, made no claim; they simply ran a Spitzbergen steamship service, opened the islands to holiday makers and began to build a Zeppelin airship station and organized a submarine base. Russia and Scandinavia almost came to war over Spitzbergen, while Germany was winning the islands from both of them. By the peace treaty of Brest-Litovsk the Germans imagined they had obtained all for which they had struggled, and Spitzbergen was theirs for the taking. But they could not take it! The British fleet was in the way. Under protection of the fleet Captain Frank Wild, of antartic fame, sailed in 1918 for Spitzbergen and annexed the German territory thereof. Finally, at the peace conference in Paris, Great Britain surrendered the islands to the original discoverers, the Norsemen.

During the last European struggle for Spitzbergen nobody in any government office discerned the treasures of these islands. The reason way—Russia, Scandinavia, Germany, Holland and Great Britain contended for them was merely that the barren rocks and ice fields were at last known to be habitable. It was seen that if a garrison could live in comfort through the long arctic night and keep the western coast open by icebreakers a greater Gibraltar could be established here. Spitzbergen, with her incomparable harbors, commands the northern seaway to Russia and the northern Atlantic trade route. Being less than a thousand miles from Scotland, it also dominates the British naval base at Scapa Flow.

The water of the British isles, the entrance to the Baltic sea and all Norway and northern Russia are within cruising range of the Gibraltar of the pole.

In the hands of a small power like Norway Spitzbergen can hardly become a danger to the peace of the world; perhaps a British Spitzbergen might have excited the fears of other countries by giving Britain, with Gibraltar and her home bases, an overwhelming command of European traffic.

It remains true, however, that the private enterprise of British merchants has acquired the chief natural treasures of Spitzbergen. On many of the seaward mountains of the western island there are large dark bands stretching across the brown rock and the great sheets of snow. They reach for miles, and they are coal seams. There is more coal in Spitzbergen than in Great Britain. Almost alongside the coal are mountains of iron ore, superior to any in Europe. When Sir Martin Conway was making the first crossing of western Spitzbergen, in 1897, he passed so much iron that his compass became useless. There are great mountain ranges of iron, and with Spitzbergen coal and iron the British nation could in a few years challenge the steel industry of the United States.

Americans were among the first to stake out a coal field in this polar region, but at present two British companies own 3,900 square miles of coal, iron and other mineral fields by the open water of western Spitzbergen. The Norsemen, though they have bought out the Americans, own scarcely one-sixth as much territory as Britain, and the Swedes have somewhat less than a tenth. Most of the ground was obtained in the days when the islands were a No Man's Land, when property could be acquired by pegging out a claim and registering a title at the foreign office. The field was open to every nation, and Englishmen, Welshmen and Scotsmen simply outraced all other competitors.

Coal now fetches an extraordinary price abroad. It may have become cheaper, but it may never be as cheap as before the war. In Europe miners have to work at ever deepening levels in order to get the fuel on which modern civilization depends; but in the British Spitzbergen collieries the coal is near the surface, usually only a few hundred yards from good harbors. There are no royalties, wayleaves, rates, taxes or custom duties.

In the long, bright summer time the work of coal getting is as easy as any heavy labor can be, and it is found that, like the old whale hunters of Spitzbergen, the miners are eager to return to the invigorating islands.

Strangely beautiful it is now, with its wide, ramparted sounds, its majestic fjords, its tremendous glaciers and its many colored mountains. Sea birds, seals and walruses abound, and in the blackbound eastern islands a vast, white realm of silence, the great bear is still lord of the polar wilderness.

SUNDAY MORNING TALK

He is Near.

"Thou art near, O Lord!" Psalm 119, 151.

Are not these words of the author of the longest, and in some respects, the sublimest Psalm in the Psalter, very inspiring. He had been beating out the golden ore or thought through successive paragraphs of marvelous power and beauty, when suddenly he seems to have become conscious that He of whom he had been speaking had drawn near, and was bending over him. The sense of the presence of God was borne in upon his inner consciousness. And, lifting his heart up to God he acknowledges His presence. If only such an experience of the nearness of God were always ours, enwrapping us as air or light; if only we could feel, as the great Apostle on Mar's Hill, that God is not far away, but the element in which we have our being—as sea-flowers in deep, still lagoons—then we should understand what David meant when he spoke about dwelling in the house of the Lord all the days of his life, beholding His beauty, inquiring in his temple, and hidden in the secret of His pavilion. Psalm 27. Then, too, we should acquire the blessed secret of peace, purity, and power.

In the secret of His presence there is peace. "In the world ye shall have tribulation," our Master said, "but in Me ye shall have peace." It is said that a certain insect has the power of surrounding itself with a film of air, encompassed in which it drops into the midst of muddy stagnant pools, and remains unhurt. And the believer is also conscious that he is enclosed in the inviolable film of the Divine Presence, as a far-traveled letter in the envelope which protects it from hurt and soil.

But how shall we get and keep this sense of God's nearness? Must we go back to Bethel, with its pillar of stone, where even Jacob said, "Sure God is in this place?" Ah, we might have stood beside him, with unanointed eye, and seen no ladder, heard no voice; whilst the patriarch would discover God. Must we travel to the mouth of the cave in whose shadow Elijah stood, thrilled by the music of the still, small voice, sweeter than the thunder and the storm. Let us endeavor to learn the blessed secret of abiding ever in the secret of His presence and of being hidden in His pavilion. Psalm 21, 20. The place of prayer is indeed the place of His manifested presence. But that presence would fade from it were it to linger then after the bell of duty had rung for us below. But we shall ever meet it as we go about our necessary work. "Thou meetest him that worketh righteousness." As we go forth to our daily tasks, the angel of His presence comes to greet us, and turns to go at our side, "Go Ye," said the Master, "Lo, I am with you all the days." Not only in temple courts or in sequestered glens, or in sick rooms, but in the round of daily duty, in the commonplaces of life, on the dead levels of existence we may be ever in the secret of His presence, and shall be able to say with many others that we feel His blessed presence with us all the time.

Let us cultivate the habit of recognizing the presence of God. There is no life like this: To feel that God is with us; that He never leads us through a place too narrow for Him to pass as well; that we can never be lonely again, never for a single moment; that He could not be nearer us, even if we were in heaven itself; to have Him as Friend and Guide; to realize that there is never to be a Jericho in our lives without the presence of the Captain of the Lord's host, with those invisible but mighty legions, before whose charge all walls must fall. What wonder that the saints of old waxed valiant in fight, as they heard Him say, "I am with thee; I will never leave nor forsake thee." Be gone, fear and sorrow and dread of the dark valley! Thou shalt hide Me in the secret of Thy Presence from the pride of man; Thou shalt keep me secretly in a pavilion from the strife of tongues.

Caroline Myer, Wife of Jean P. Richter

"Upon the female soul as well as upon the female body is bound an eternal corset." Thus protested Jean Paul Richter, famous German novelist, against the conventionality by which the women of his day were trammeled. It took Caroline Meyer, daughter of a most conventional Prussian army officer, to show him that while women may adhere to some of the conventions set for them by men, this does not necessarily mean that they lack the understanding of how to reform a man too fond of butterfly romances. Richter was 33 years old, and had been besieged by numerous women, when he met Caroline, who was a model of all the virtues without being in the least priggish or narrow-minded. He fell deeply in love with her, and she with him. A complete conception of her unusual character may be obtained from Richters own description of her.

"Caroline," he wrote, has exactly that inexpressible love for all beings that I have till now failed to find in those who in everything else possess the splendor and purity of the diamond. She preserves in the full harmony of her love to me the middle and lower tones of sympathy for every joy and sorrow in others."

Another time he wrote:

"Marriage has made me love her more romantically, deeper, infinitely more, than before." Caroline, in turn, adored him.

Stories That Recall Others

Up His Sleeve.

Bobby had been a very naughty boy. Teacher had occasion to find fault with him six times that morning. At last she lost her temper.

"How dare you laugh aloud in school!" she cried angrily at an outburst of mirth proceeded from Bobby.

"P-p-please teacher," he answered, "I was laughing up my sleeve, but there is a hole in the elbow and the laugh slipped out!"

All in a Day's "Work."

In the evening office hours of a busy physician a four year old lad sat awaiting his turn to interview the physician. The doctor was surprised to see that when the lad came into the room he was alone. But the lad, not in the least alarmed, walked in, told the physician his name and where he lived and then said: "I just came to see when you are going to bring a baby to our house."

At the physician's hesitancy to answer, the youngster said. "There's no hurry, but I wish you would bring one soon." Laddie was not known by the doctor, and, many blocks from home so the physician asked him if he should call his mother so she would know where he was. The child replied: "I'd rather you wouldn't—but if you will watch until I get across the street I can get home all right."

The busy physician took time to watch Laddie across the street, and as far as he could see, Laddie was trudging hopefully along, apparently undisturbed by the night.

IN THE PUBLIC EYE

Fridtjof Nansen, who is coming to America to speak at a meeting in Philadelphia of the World Alliance for International Friendship through the churches, is a Norwegian who became world famous through his explorations in the Artic region. Dr. Nansen's first visit to the United States came just after his famous trip toward the North Pole, from which, in 1906, he returned a world celebrity, having gone farther north than any of his predecessors in the quest. On his triumphant return home he became a member of the faculty of the University of Christiania, took an active part as a civic leader in the separation of Norway and Sweeden, and from 1906 to 1908 represented Norway at the Court of St. James. He is the interesting combination, not so often seen as might be desired, namely, the naturalist who also is a vigilant and active citizen. He has written voluminously on both natural science and politics, and been a marked personal factor in making recent Norwegian history.

HARVEY WAS MISQUOTED ABOUT SENATOR JOHNSON

New York, July 27.—Senator Hiram W. Johnson and Colonel George Harvey tonight were agreed that the ambassador to the court of St. James had been misquoted yesterday when certain morning papers made him say that the Californian had predicted a landslide for himself in 1924 if he got the republican nomination for the presidency.

Mr. Johnson, who planned tonight to leave for Washington, awoke this morning to find in the public prints a statement by Mr. Harvey in Long Branch, N. J., to the effect that Mr. Johnson was a bit previous in his prediction, which the story said had been made in a conversation last Wednesday night, when Mr. Johnson made his first public address since returning from Europe. In a formal statement Mr. Johnson promptly denied that he had made any such prediction, and when newspapermen got in touch with Mr. Harvey at his Jersey summer home, he promptly denied it too. He said he was talking about Henry Ford's presidential chances, concerning which he expressed himself in pessimistic tones.

BIRTH RATE IN STATE CONTINUES ON DOWN GRADE

The monthly bulletin for July of the state department of health shows that the birth rate in Connecticut continues to fall. The birth rate for May, 1923, was 20.6, and for the same month last year 21.5. The marriage rate fell from 7.4 to 7.1, and the death rate from 12.1 to 11.8. The death rate of children under one year fell from 73.7 to 66.5 per 1,000 births.

There was a decrease of 64 in the number of births in the state for the month of May as compared with the number for the corresponding month in 1922. The total number for the month of May this year was 2,531 and for the same month last year 2,595. The total number of births for January to May, 1923, inclusive, is 12,360. The average number of births for the first five months of the year over the period 1918-1922 is 14,100. The accumulated total, therefore, says the bulletin, this year is 1,740 below the average, a negative percentage deviation of 12.34. In view of the magnitude of the numbers under discussion, this deviation is large.

There were 879 marriages or 19 less than were performed in May, 1922. The number is 67 below the average.

TOWN OF NORWICH BRINGS SUIT TO COLLECT FIVE YEARS TAXES

Suit to foreclose tax liens against Frank W. Barber, alias Francis W. Barber, and Marjorie M. H. Barber and others, has been brought in the superior court by the town of Norwich on the claim that the defendants have not paid town taxes for five years, amounting to $547.87. Tax liens have been recorded against the property, which consists of farm land on the highway from Plain Hill to Scotland road and a city piece of property at 13 Boswell avenue.

There are five counts in the complaint, of which the first covers only on the farm land, alleging that the town tax of 12 1-2 mills, laid in October 1917, amounting to $43, has not been paid. The four other counts include the farm and city property on which the following town taxes are claimed to be due and unpaid: October, 1918, at 18 mills, $118.84; October, 1919, at 17 1-4 mills, $108.33; October, 1920, at 22 mills, $138.16; October, 1921, at 23 mills, $144.44.

The different rates show that the town tax for Norwich has nearly doubled in the past five years, rising from 12 1-2 mills for 1917, to 23 mills for 1921.

Under the first count it is alleged that on March 31, 1922, Frank W. Barber conveyed an undivided half interest in the farm property, some of which lies in the town of Sprague, to Marjorie M. H. Barber, and under the second count the ownership of the Boswell avenue property is given jointly in Frank H. and Marjorie Barber.

Several party defendants are named in the suit, the Norwich Savings Society, Lester E. Walker, and William H. Jennings, Jr., claiming mortgage liens, H. A. & J. A. Adams of Sprague claiming an attachment lien, the Southern New England Telephone Co. claiming right to erect poles and wires, and Frank J. Huebler, claiming a lease of the farm property that does not expire until April, 1924.

The suit is returnable before the superior court in September on the writ and complaint that has been drawn up the town counsel, Judge H. H. Pettis.

SAYS BAY STATE MEET WILL BREAK TRACK TIME.

Frank P. Keeney, editor of the American Breeder, a large racing magazine published in Boston, was in this city Friday in conference with Speed Secretary Albert J. Bailey concerning the entries for the meet of the Bay State Circuit in this city on August 8, 9, 10 and 11.

Speaking of the entries, Mr. Keeney said that in nine races there had been 101 entries representing a total of 89 horses entered in the four days' racing cards. He said that there would be no dead entries this year, and every member of the circuit was a lover of sports, not in the racing business merely for money prizes.

Most of the owners of horses racing in the circuit are men of means, business men in their respective cities, and follow the circuit every year simply for the love of the turf.

I was announced that the big race, the free for all, had nine entries when the list was closed, and all will be at the track.

Of interest also was the announcement that Chester G. Pike of Windsor-Vt., one of the fairest starters on the turf, would be in Norwich and handle the horses as they pass beneath the wire on the start. Charles B. Stickney, the popular judge, will also be in Norwich and will call the winners in the races.

In anticipation of the arrival of the 89 horses, members of the New London County Fair association have given orders to place several of the cattle sheds in order, to house some of the horses. Norwich has erected two new horse barns in the past two years until the limit of horses that can be housed has reached 71, but with the coming of the Bay State Circuit there is a need of more stalls and it is too late to erect them before the races.

For better accommodation for stable men electric lights are to be installed in all stables before August 8, while Elmer R. Pierson, superintendent of grounds for the Fair association, is at work preparing the track for the arrival of the fleetest trotters and pacers that ever graced the track in this city.

Considerable interest was aroused Friday when Mr. Keeney, in speaking of speed, bet cigars with Speed Secretary Bailey that the track records for trotting and pacing would be lowered during the meet here. Mr. Keeney knows his horses and it is safe to say bets on a sure thing, meaning that the cards this year will produce some horses whose speed has never been equalled on a Norwich track.

WAPPING PLYMOUTH ROCKS TAKE LEAD AT STORRS

A Connecticut pen of Barred Rocks owned by Edgar Stoughton of Wapping is now at the head of the Plymouth Rock class. Mr. Stoughton's birds, however, must look to their laurels, as a Long Island pen entered by Jules F. Francais is trailing them by only three eggs and W. H. B. Kent's pen from Cazenovia, N. Y., is only five eggs behind. So far as the Rocks are concerned, it looks like anybody's game. The total production in the 38th week was 3,664 eggs or a yield of a little more than 52 per cent. This is 138 eggs more than for the corresponding period last year and 21 eggs more than the average for the last eight year.

So far as the performance for the 38th week is concerned, it was purely a White Leghorn week. F. M. Johnson's pen from Waldoboro, Me., finished first with a score of 54 eggs. Ernest H. Scott from Farmington, Conn., Emory H. Bartlett from Enfield, Mass., and D. B. Walls from Petaluma, Calif., all Leghorn breeders, tied for second place with 52 eggs each. Hollywood Farm from Hollywood, Wash., and M. J. Quackenbush from Nutley, N. J., tied for third place with 51 eggs each. Exmoo Farm's pen of Leghorns from Lebanon, Pa., was fourth best pen with a lay of 50 eggs.

STORRS IS EXPECTING VISIT FROM GOVERNOR

Wednesday, Aug. 1, promises to be a busy day for Governor Templeton. MOOSE GETTING READY FOR ANNUAL OUTING

Norwich lodge, No. 950, L. O. O. M. held its regular session Friday evening at Moose home on Laurel Hill with a good attendance. Dictator George Goepfert presided over the business session, which was short. Frank Hazard, chairman of the entertainment committee, gave a tentative report on the arrangements for the annual clambake, which he said had not yet been completed. It is expected that the bake will be held on the Sunday preceding Labor day, but the place has not yet been selected. Indications are that the bake this year will be attended by most of the members and a fine program of athletic sports has been arranged. Following the meeting, a social time was enjoyed.

GIVE CLEVER PLAYLETS IN PLAYGROUNDS DRAMATICS

Over 600 people witnessed the first exhibition of the recreation commission's dramatic department when Instructor Catherine Dodd, director of the girls' department at the Lake street playground, presented two fairy plays on the green at the entrance of Mohegan park on Friday evening.

The first playlet was The Fairy Ring, which was followed by Buttercup by the Pond.

At 7.30 Supt. Harold Anson Bruce addressed the large crowd of mothers and fathers, visiting playground children and other spectators, briefly explaining the object of the presentation and concluded by introducing Instructor Catherine Dodd, who recited to the spectators the synopsis of the playlets, accompanied by a short explanation of the relation of fairies and elves to the little children.

The first play, The Fairy Ring, which was a story of two woodcutters' children who, losing their path in the woods, accidentally tread upon a fairy ring and of the aid the fairies give them when they call them forth by picking the magic clover in the center of the ring. The principal parts were played by Mary Foley as the woodcutter's son and Ruth Banning as the woodcutter's daughter. The work of Ruth Banning excelled. She played in good action and voice, showing considerable dramatic ability. Little Miss Foley was not far behind. She possessed good stage presence and cleverly presented her lines. Helen Wojtkowski as Fern Frond, the elf, and Catherine Dutton as Blue Bell, the fairy queen, are also deserving of mention.

The second play, Buttercup by the Pond, brought out the story of a legend among the buttercups that the fairy queen annually picks out one of their number to change into a fairy. The buttercups all naturally desire the favor. The story of the fairy queen's choice is the theme of the little playlet.

Doris Kennedy as the Golden Buttercup starred, carrying long lines which she perfectly articulated. Mary Dodd as the fairy queen presented a very pleasing picture and gave considerable promise as a juvenile actress. Others in the cast deserving of mention were Mary Smith as Yellow Buttercup and Alice Murphy as Hoppy Frog.

The folk dance features presented in the second play was well rendered by a ballet of 20 girls who performed and sang in excellent rhythm.

The costuming of both plays was very unique. The children were appropriately gowned in various colored costumes made entirely of crepe paper. Each actress was costumed according to the character and the coloring with the beautiful background of trees and lawn at Mohegan park made the affair a picture well worth seeing.

Instructor Dodd was assisted by Miss Josephine Marzarelli in the designing and making of the costumes, and Instructor Harvey Freeman of the Lake street play center assisted in both plays by rendering violin music. Instructor Dodd was highly complimented by Superintendent Bruce at the conclusion of the program. The plays given called for but two weeks' practice and it is planned to stage these fairy and folk scenes throughout the playground season.

SHOWED SELECTED ROUTE OVER CONNECTICUT ROADS

John A. Macdonald, our new highway commissioner, says the New Haven Register, has just been entertaining the highway heads of New Jersey and members of the New Jersey association of county engineers. Naturally, he desired to show them our highways, and incidentally, our scenery. As a good many citizens know, this wasn't an easy thing to do without encountering some uncomfortable unconstructed or unreconstructed roads. Hence the ingenuity with which he chose his route is a matter for admiration.

Mr. Macdonald met the party at New Haven. For the way they got to New Haven from southwestern Connecticut he was not responsible; let us hope it was by train. His route was from New Haven through Derby, Seymour, Beacon Falls and Naugatuck to Waterbury. Thence they went to Watertown. (Let's hope he distracted their attention in some way from the road from Oakville to Watertown). Then over the cement highway to Thomaston and Torrington, over pretty good roads to Winsted, and an excellent new broad highway to Norfolk. From that point they doubled on their tracks and came back to Winsted, then on through New Hartford, Canton, and Avon to Hartford. For the first part of that way they found the most comfortable highway in Connecticut.

They climbed a tough grade at Talcott mountain, an ditto latter part of the road to Hartford was indifferent. But then they took Connecticut's prize highway to New London, where the party spent Saturday night. On Sunday morning they came along the shore route through Flanders, East Lyme, Lyme, Old Saybrook, Westbrook, Clinton and Madison as far as Guilford, finding fair but not remarkable highway. It was necessary to make an abrupt turn there, as those with experience with that shore line highway construction know. The route in New Haven through North Guilford, Durham, Northfield and Montowese is circuitous, but has some good highway and fine scenery. There's a quadrangle for you, irregular but remarkable. The route shows Connecticut as well, probably, as under the present highway circumstances can be done in two days. It was a play the commissioner could not have taken his guests over that college way from New Haven northward, through Mount Carmel, Cheshire, Southington, Farmington and Simsbury, now all complete, except a little finishing in Southington and Plainville; into his own delightful northeastern Connecticut; or up the Connecticut river valley from Old Saybrook over some just now excellent gravel road and past some incomparable scenery to Middletown, but there he would have been in trouble to find a desirable exit. Some day, we hope, they may make another visit and get a wholly different view of Connecticut's endless variety.

DANIELSON

Augustine Pichie, resident at 8 Main street, has reported to the police that his light touring car was stolen on Thursday, in Providence. Mr. Pichie left the car parked not distant from the railroad station while he was engaged about the city with matters that required his attention. When he returned the car had disappeared. Up to Friday afternoon no trace of the machine had been obtained.

Better vision for motorists has been made possible by the trimming off of low hanging limbs at the unction of Broad and Reynolds streets, where there are many trees. The work was being done Friday under the direction of First Selectman John A. Gilbert. The heavy traffic at this point makes the possibility of accidents great and it is to reduce the risk somewhat that the limbs are being taken off. Incidentally the appearance of the trees is improved.

An examination has disclosed that the Cadillac touring car of Percival Parrish of Rosemont, Pa., was much more seriously damaged than was first supposed when it was in collision with a milk wagon driven by George Paine on Reynolds street Wednesday morning. At a garage where the car was carefully inspected it was estimated that the damage could not be repaired for less than $1,000. The front of the frame was twisted, the motor cracked, the body damaged among other things of a serious and expensive nature. The car was towed to Providence to be repaired.

Out in the country districts within a radius of ten miles of Danielson there is ample evidence that owners of woodland property are plunging on the prospect of another hard coal shortage during the coming winter. Cord wood is piled up in great quantities and it appears there will be a liberal supply of it for the local market this fall and winter. During the past winter's coal shortage all the seasoned hard wood was used up in this territory and many had to resort to the use of green or unseasoned wood for stoves and, in some cases, heaters. Failure of the operators and miners to reach any agreement as yet at Atlantic City assures the cord wood owners a big market at profitable prices this winter, and they are preparing to meet the demand.

It is announced that at the East Killingly annual Old Home day Aug. 2, there is to be an old-fashioned clambake prepared by "King" George Jacques, who has baked enough clams to make a mountain. After the dinner there will be an entertaining program during which an address will be made by Rev. P. L. Cosman, Pascoag, formerly a pastor at East Killingly. Rev. P. S. Collins of Norwich will be another speaker. Miss Ora Eleanor Hopkins of Swampscott, Mass., will sing. There will be concert numbers during the day by East Killingly band.

Old Home day will attract many former residents to East Killingly and —as always—there will be many present from other parts of the town of Killingly and from neighboring towns.

South Killingly, too, has its plans well advanced for its annual Old Home day observance, set for Labor day. A. E. Hall is chairman of the committee of arrangements and Evan Phillips assistant. Working on special sub-committees are Daniel Tewgood, Frances Terwilliger, Earl Phillips, Percy Bliven, Charles Young, Mrs. Arthur Terwilliger, Mrs. Milan Whitaker, Mrs. Raymond Tilton, Arthur Terwilliger, Henry Tewgood, Mrs. A. E. Phillips, Mr. and Mrs. Hollis Young, Mrs. Edmond Goodness, Mrs. P. H. Coffey, Miss Eva Davis, Mrs. Effie Cole.

Miss Mayme Dunn has been appointed chairman of a committee of the Catholic Welfare council to plan an outing which probably will be held at Alexander's lake. Plans for the outing will be discussed at a meeting of the council, scheduled for next Thursday evening.

The steep stretch of the hill at South Killingly where accidents have been occurring with startling regularity of late has been sanded. This is an excellent anti-skidding aid and will tend toward reducing the possibilities of care turning over when the hill is wet during rainy periods, especially when drivers apply their brakes too suddenly and harshly.

Attorneys W. Fenner Woodward, E. L. Darbie and Sabin S. Russell were among those from this section of the state attending the dinner of the Connecticut Bar association at the Hotel Griswold, Eastern Point, Thursday.

Mrs. O. A. Bessette and daughter, Miss Alice Bessette, have returned from a visit with relatives in New Bedford.

Miss Elizabeth Dunn of the business office at the central telephone station is to leave next week to spend a vacation at Crescent Beach.

Mr. and Mrs. N. L. Greig have returned to their home in Daryille, after spending a month at Bethlehem, N. H.

The Ladies' Aid society of the Baptist church is to meet with Mrs. H. W. House next week.

Leo Bodo, teller at the Windham County National bank, has returned from a bank clerks' convention held in Cleveland and a later trip to Niagara Falls and into Canada.

Friends here received cards Thursday from F. E. Colvin postmarked at Montreal.

Mrs. J. S. Bard, for many years a resident in Brooklyn, is ill at her home in that place.

At a meeting next Monday evening the Danielson Radio club will make plans for the observance of its first anniversary August 24.

Kent A. Darbie, Mrs. Florence Princeton and Robert Princeton have been attending camp meetings at Douglas.

Joel A. Richardson of Hope, R. I., was a visitor with friends in Danielson Friday.

Benjamin Rapp was at Rocky Point Friday attending the reunion of the Rhode Island regiment with which he saw service during the Civil war.

Again the radio fans hereabouts had good success in getting returns from the Dundee-Criqui bout in New York Thursday evening. Incidentally the radio gets the big league baseball scores promptly to followers of the game here, early every evening.

PUTNAM

An increase in strike benefits will be allowed those formerly employed by the Manhasset Manufacturing company and who are still idle after a period of nearly thirteen weeks, it was announced Friday morning by Archie Gauthier, president of the Connecticut Textile Council, and engaged here in directing the strike.

The increase will amount to 12 1-2 per cent. over what the strikers are now receiving, these amounts varying on the basis of whether a member is single or married and on the number of a striker's dependents.

There was no change in the situation Friday. During the coming week the strikers plan to hold the first of a series of mass meetings, as announced a few days ago.

Women hereabouts who are solicited by stranger canvassers for orders for hosiery will do well to ask the canvassers, as an evidence of good faith, to make a deposit of a dollar or more to make good their promise of delivery of the orders they take. This would be reversing the policy now in vogue and under which the buyer is asked to make a deposit and take her chance of ever again hearing of the canvasser or his stockings.

And the suggestion is prompted by the fact that a smooth stranger has been operating in Putnam, getting a dollar or two here and there and then dropping out of the scheme of things, insofar as this city is concerned.

The man operated here early in the present month and obtained a considerable number of orders—with deposits. The stockings failing to appear, the Boston firm he alleged himself to represent has been appealed to and has written to a Putnam woman that the agent is no longer in their employ and that he is operating fraudulently in soliciting and taking orders and deposits in their name.

The company does not offer to make any redress other than to suggest that if anyone who is fleeced by the canvasser can secure a warrant and obtain his arrest and prosecution the firm will be mightily pleased. The firm has had reports on his activities in other cities, but as he does not use the mails the federal government cannot set their sleuths upon his trail.

Incidentally, mention may be made of the fact that silk hosiery of excellent qualities is obtainable right here in Putnam from reliable tradesmen who can be found any morning that a customer wants to talk with them. Buyers who overlook their home stores for commodities needed, assume certain risks, especially in dealing with strangers who ask for money before they deliver the goods. The home merchants never do that.

As July draws to a close, John J. Whitehead, directing the nurses' home fund of the Day Kimball hospital, has plans for a period of special activity during August, that the drive may bring the fund close to the mark set for it—$20,000—or put it over the top if possible.

The fund has grown materially during July and is edging on toward the $15,000 mark. Units of $50 each continue to come in from various sections of the field and other units have been raised, but not turned in yet.

With the fund so well advanced, attention is now beginning to concentrate on the matter of construction of the home. High cost of materials and labor at this time may delay the undertaking until next spring, although the urgent need of the home would make its construction this year very desirable. It is likely that the structure will be of brick.

Hamilton Holt of Sunset Hill, Woodstock, who recently transferred his citizenship from New York to this state, will sail late next month to be present at the 25th jubilee celebration of the accession of Queen Wilhelmina to the throne of the Netherlands. Mr. Holt will attend the meeting of the World court at The Hague and later sessions of the League of Nations at Geneva, in preparation for further propaganda work in this country in the interest of the league.

Franklin Perry, son of Dr. and Mrs. Edward F. Perry, returned here Friday, after two weeks' stay in Camp Woodstock the proud possessor of a silver locing cup and a gold watch fob—The Patriot trophies—awarded the one who by conduct and general discipline best exemplifies the spirit of Camp Woodstock. Master Perry is the first Putnam boy to achieve this honor since the establishment of the camp and is being congratulated on every side.

Leon N. Walker, member of the firm of Smith and Walker, who recently purchased a home on Grove street and removed here a few days ago from the town of Thompson will tender his resignation as a member of the board of selectmen of that town. While Mr. Walker regrets to do this so near to the end of a fiscal year he has obtained legal advice and has been told that this action will be necessary.

Mr. Walker has been one of Thompson's prominent citizens for years and for a considerable number of years has served as a member of the board of selectmen, as a republican, and for several terms as first selectman.

Mr. and Mrs. William Morgan of Woodstock, have issued invitations to the marriage of their daughter, Florence Mildred, and Roland Norman Lowe, the ceremony to take place at Shadow Lawn, Saturday of next week.

The annual lawn fete of St. Joseph's parish at North Grosvenordale is planned. The parish is to observe the golden anniversary of its founding on Labor day. Rev. Bernard M. Donnelley is the pastor.

The prospect is for a crowded court room when the cases of James Smith and Henry Reil are up for consideration again in the city court Monday morning next. Smith and Reil engaged in a fht a week ago tonight and in the melee Reil was slashed with a knife.

Miss Abbie M. Keith has been spending a few days with Miss Harriet Baker at Millis, Mass.

Youths have introduced in this city the Valentino trousers—with a slit leg, buttonholed and buttoned. Oh girls!

Octave Gardner, who died recently at his home in Worcester, was a brother of Health Officers Peter Gardner of this city.

Workmen are engaged in making ready for the foundations for the new Stoumbelis building, to be erected on the site of the destroyed Donahue block, burned on Washington's birthday.

Fire alarm box 23 has been removed from the corner of School and Franklin streets to the corner of School and Front streets, the new location being nearer the Israel Putnam school.

JEWETT CITY

For fifteen minutes Friday, just at the time when the mid-day travel over the state road was at its height, Jewett City nejoyed the gratis services of a traffic cop. David Wechsler, six years old and three feet high, came up the street resplendent from cap to shoe, in a regulation, though miniature, policeman's uniform, a play-day present from his father. No veteran member of the municipal constabulary looked finer or sported a grander air. On postoffice square are two permanent silent policemen, which mark the traffic turning points. Master Wechsler took his stand near one of these, and with majestic waves of his hand, first held high with open palm, to stop, then with the beckoning motion, to move, the little chap, with a style true to life, proceeded to manage the vehicular movements of the street. The noontime crowd, cheered and admired. Soon up the state road from the south came a big Packard, carrying the Metropolitan register numbers of the City of New York. Up went the small hand. The Manhattan car pulled up to a stop, then soon receiving the "come ahead," the driver proceeded, and a good sport he was, catching the joke as he stepped on the gas. He and his companion laughed as heartily as the rest.

One of the most important real estate changes in the borough for some time took place Thursday, when Thomas McBroome sold his Main street property to Salvador Mugoverp, the purchaser to take possession in third days. The deed will include the residence and attached restaurant which has just been built.

Mr. McBroome has not decided as to his future residence or business. In any event he and his family will rest a while after being relieved from the care and labor of a steadily growing trade.

Mr. McBroome has carried on a lunch car and restaurant business for 17 years. G. A. Barber, now living at the Masonic home in Wallingford, was employed by him as chef for 14 years.

Mr. and Mrs. George A. Lindell, entertained last week Walter Lindell and Mrs. Etta Perkins of Hartford, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Webster of Wickford, R. I., Mrs. Ernest Blake and four children of Coventry, R. I., Herbert Lindell and sons, Arthur and Albert Lindell of Lisbon.

The story in the Danielson column in Friday's Bulletin, about the police dog's visit to the postoffice caused a Jewett City man to recall some of his experiences with Oney, the famous railway post office dog. On one or two occasions he visited the Norwich post office, twenty-five years ago. It was his greatest pleasure to ride with the postal clerks in the mail cars, where he was always a welcome visitor. Attached to his stout leather collar there were great quantities of tags with postmarks indicating the hundreds of railway mail routes he had travelled over. A story written about him at one time stated that he had crossed the continent a dozen times. He would go over by the Northern Pacific, travel down the coast, and return on the Sunset Limited via Santa Fe. His knowledge of railroading was little short of human. None of the postal clerks ever attempted to control his movements—he got on and off as he pleased. Several times, when visiting New England, he would come out of Boston on the big New York night mail train via Springfield; at Meriden he would jump out, and wait on the platform alone in the darkness, for the east-bound mail train, due in a few minutes, jump on, and ride back to Boston with the other crew.

As he grew older, he developed a peculiar sort of flea. Some said they had U. S. on their backs. He wasn't as welcome then. Oney died, as one might say, with his boots on—he was run over and killed by a mail train.

Engaged To Scion Of Vanderbilt Family

Miss Emily O'Neill Davies, society beauty, who is engaged to William H. Vanderbilt, son of the late Alfred G. Vanderbilt. Although no wedding date has been made, it is believed the event will take place some time during the early winter. The engagement cements a lifelong friendship between the two families. The late fathers of the bride-to-be and the bridegroom-elect, had long been friends and they died within a few days of each other. The two men had known and loved each other since childhood, both in Newport and New York, and their friendship continued as long as they lived.

SOCIAL CORNER POETRY

Memorable Days

How dear to my heart are the scenes of my childhood
When fond recollection presents them to view;
The parlor decked out with its lambrequined mantel,
Looped up with its ribbons of olive and blue;
The gingerbread grill work above every doorway,
The varnished and ribbon-run postage stamp plate;
The Florida grasses stuck back of each picture—
And the Japanese parasol stuck in the grate,
That Japanese parasol
Wide open parasol,
Artistic parasol
Stuck in the grate.

On a black and gold easel a big crayon portrait,
With a wide metal frame and a crimson plush mat;
While a bolting cloth throw hung over one corner,
With pansies and pond lilies painted on that;
A marble-topped table displayed a plush album;
A milking stool gilded, was deemed up to date;
A moss mat was under a straw card receiver,
And a Japanese parasol stuck in the grate.
That Japanese parasol,
Gay colored parasol,
Slightly torn parasol
Stuck in the grate.

The gem of the lot was a square onyx table,
With ornamentation of dull, tarnished gilt;
On the sofa a pillow of brownish burnt leather,
And, folded up neatly, a silk crazy quilt.
There were Bristol board air castles, hand-painted banners,
Hammered brass plaques and a glass paper weight,
And tall peacock feathers in hand-painted vases,
And a Japanese parasol stuck in the grate.
That Japanese parasol,
Fashionable parasol,
Half wicked parasol
Stuck in the grate!

IF

If all who hate would love us,
And all our loves were true,
The stars that swing above us
Would brighten in the blue;
If cruel words were kissed,
And every scowl a smile,
A better world than this is
Would hardly be worth while;
If purses would untighten
To meet a brother's need,
The lead we bear would lighten
If those who whine would whistle

And those who languish laugh,
The rose would rout the thistle,
The grain outrun the chaff;
If hearts were only jolly,
If grieving were forgot,
And tears and melancholy
Were things that now are not—
Then Love would knell to Duty,
And all the world would seem
A bridal bower of beauty,
A dream within a dream.

If men would cease to worry,
And women cease to sigh
And all be glad to bury Whatever has to die—
If neighbor spake to neighbor,
As love demands of all,
The rust would eat the saber,
The spear stay on the wall;
Then every day would glisten,
And every eye would shine,
And God would pause to listen,
And life would be divine.

NO BETTER WAY TO MAKE NEW FRIENDS.

Dear Social Corner Sisters: There seems to be a call each week for more letters. A good suggestion was given by Spry Bird, that each one write during the month of her birthday but few have responded in July.

It is said to be a sign of old age when one continually looks backward but as one by one the anniversary of our natal days come, our thought naturally turn to the past. To me at this time comes the remembrance of childhood days at the old home, the birthday parties out under the big maple tree, the great rock, the beautiful flowers, the faithful old Major and last, but by no means least, "my old rag doll." As long as my mother was with me, my birthday was never forgotten. In her latter years, the tables turned and it was my pleasure to arrange little birthday parties for her. Those occasions were very happy ones to which we all looked forward each year and now that they are no more, they are to me a cherished memory. Will all whose birthdays are in July, accept my most cordial greetings and best wishes, one of whom is our faraway sister, North Dakota?

Time's scythe has reaped another year,
And placed it in his sheaf,
And in our life's book God's own hand
Turns o'er another leaf."

I want to mention two very pleasant gatherings of this month, one at East Killingly where hundreds of people assembled to celebrate the Fourth. A number of Social Corner sisters were there, one of whom did not forget her "yellow bow." There was also a brother and right here I wish to thank Rural Delivery for the fine report of his California trip given in response to my request. The other occasion was our fifth annual picnic at Wildwood with fifty members and guests present. Everything seemed to come our way that day. The weatherman did his part. Loretta brought a fruit cake 36 [illegible] and no signs [illegible] covered by having with us a young lady who gave us a number of recitations which were greatly enoyed. But after all, the best thing was the good will that prevailed. Everyone seemed to have a good time and wanted everyone else to have one. It has been said that as we advance through life we must make new acquaintances or we shall soon find ourselves alone. We must keep our friendships in constant repair. Do you know of a better way than this by which it may be done? Join the Social Corner, help to fill the page with interesting letters and attend the gatherings of the clan.

SOME MORE ABOUT CALIFORNIA.

Dear Social Corner Family: Let us fill The Corner page.

Sister Ola: Was glad you were interested in my letter in The Corner of Just a Little Glimpse of My Visit to the Golden State, the half has never been told. Your letter of the calla lilies was interesting to me, as I have seen thousands of acres in full bloom in April. It reminded me of a woman from Rhode Island who went to California to reside. While she trusted her household goods to go by freight, she would trust no one with her potted calla lily and carried it in her lap until she came into the state of California and saw thousands of calla lilies in full bloom all along the railroad track, when she threw her choice calla lily out of the window—pot and all.

Ola, you wanted to know why I came back to Connecticut from the beautiful land of flowers and fruit. When I went to Tucson and Los Angeles and many other cities with Pasadena, which is almost like a heaven, I was enjoying every day of my visit, when I became sick from drinking the water in many cities which is not like the good water of New England, and as I grew worse from day to day and was confined in my room in a hotel in San Francisco I thought while my strength was not gone I would try to make the trip home, which was very tiresome, as I was on the road five days and five nights. Surely no one can love flowers better than I do and with the thousands of roses, calla lilies and hundreds of flowers of all colors it seemed to me I was very near heaven.

But home is a good place when you are well and a far better place when you are ill. There is no drawback about California and it is the place for young people to live. The west is full of life and business. I was a month in Hollywood, where the moving pictures are made, and saw them making them. They came very near getting me into the picture as I was passing along the sidewalk. Los Angeles is the place where the best theatrical people are born and sent out to all parts of the world. We attended a number of theatres in Los Angeles and saw the best shows that theatrical people can produce. There is everything that one can ask for in California, which draws one thousand yearly to the many points of interest, and is a good place to live, providing they can stand the cool weather, as there are no stoves there. We never saw a stove until we came to New England. While the fruit is ripe on the trees and the flowers in bloom there is a chill in the air and one has to take their wraps with them every day in the year, especially in the evening.

My daughter and husband are located for a while in Riverside, Cal., which is a fine city where I spent a portion of my visit west. In a letter received today from them they write that a new oil well there is spouting 36,000 barrels a day, gasoline dropping daily and is 13 cents a gallon in Los Angeles. You can go miles and miles on the smooth roads there with five gallons of gasoline.

Twice Twenty: We were only too glad to send you a few cards from the Golden State which gave you a little glimpse of the land of flowers.

On July 19 we attended the Social Corner picnic of Club No. 4 at the beautiful pine grove at Alexander lake and as usual we met a good gathering of Corner writers who all had a smile that won't rub off. No one could spend a day's outing with more pleasure than by going to one of the Corner picnics, where there is so much harmony and sociability. Long may The Corner live. I must stop here for fear the editor will think I am too sociable. With best wishes to one and all.

RURAL DELIVERY.

FINE TIME AT CLUB 4 PICNIC.

Dear Editor and Corner Sisters: The Corner picnic of Club 4 has come and gone and I hope you all had as good a time as I did. The weather was all that could be asked for. The gentle breee from the water made it much more delightful. But wasn't I surprised to find at my plate such a pretty booklet. Someone must have gotten very busy. I have my suspicions of Primrose. But thanks to you all for the beautiful booklet.

And I want to thank Miss Heath for giving us such a fine entertainment. I have thought of that poor dog and what was left of him.

Neighbor Everready I think has chosen the right name for her work, although I didn't get her address, which I intend to do.

Bee True: That honey is fine.

When one's nerves get tired it is time for a change from what they are already doing. A little rest and outdoor air and a nice companion does wonders for them. I had nervous prostration years ago. For a while I didn't want to meet people. We always had a large garden. I think working in that has helped me a great deal. I couldn't even go to Sunday school and sit there for a shore time. It seemed just so everyone was looking at me.

There was a neighbor telling me what a lady said to her. She told me if anyone ever says that to me again I shall ask them if they have had the same trouble or experience. If not, she says, don't talk to me. There is different kinds of trouble, and we have got to find the best way to meet it and make ourselves as happy as we can.

U. C. E. INVITES ALL TO PICNIC.

Dear Corner Sisters: Once again I invite you to my home for a day's outing, Aug. 1st. Lest I did not make the invitation plan for you all, I will say that anyone who wishes to come by bus may do so by taking it at Norwich in the morning. I do not know the hour but it gets to my place about 11 a. m.

Bumble Bee: Hope to see you, also Canterbury Belt.

Queen Elizabeth: Be sure and come and bring your little family.

Come one, come all, and bring a frind. Yours for the success of The Corner.

STARTING HARDY PERENNIALS.

Dear Corner Sisters: Many of you are probably busy in your gardens at this time whether you are growing vegetables or flowers.

This is of course the best time in this part of the country to start the hardy perennial and biennial flowering plants which are mainly grown from seed. These are mostly old-fashioned garden decorative plants and include among other favorites pansies canterbury bells, foxgloves, sweet William, larkspur, oriental poppy, gilardia, columbine, sweet allyssum, hollyhocks hardy asters, the painted daisies, coreopsis and hardy cornflower. Phlox also comes in this class, but except for new varieties, they are mostly propogated by division or by root cuttings.

All these plants and many others of the same type are becoming more popular each year as people realise their free growing qualities, their ability to largely take care of themselves after the start and to effect a mass of gorgeous bright colors throughout the season. Hundreds of thousands of these hardy plants are bought and set out each spring, but thousands more could well be used if home gardens in general could form a habit of growing part at least of their own stock of plants. Another reason for growing one's own plants is that this practice allows of pansies, delphiniums, etc., being transplanted in the fall from the seed bed to their permanent flowering position, and this means they get a better start, and make a more luxuriant growth the following season than if they had to be bought and transplanted that spring. Some other kinds like the oriental poppy do not transplant readily. These should be thinned out in the original seed bed and given plenty of space for development.

In seeding hardy perennials and biennials it is best to choose a fine piece of garden soil where some cultivated or hoed crop has been grown in the fore part of the same season. The weeds in such a spot are mostly destroyed in the first one or two inches of surface soil, therefore, do not despade or hoe deeply to bring up soil from below containing a new crop of weed seeds. Just rake the surface soil lightly and then lay out the ground in small square or oblong plots, each staked with a wooden label carrying in pencil the name of the flower seed to be sown there. Seed which should be of first class quality, fresh and of good germinating ability may then be sprinkled or dusted lightly over these plots and covered with fine soil sifted on to a depth of about one-fourth inch. This soil should also be as free from weed seeds as is possible. The beds are then sprinkled once a day with a fine mist like spray and shaded with newspapers. When the seeds first starts to come up the shade is removed, but the daily waterings are continued.

The first part of September when the plants have attained an inch or more in height, all kinds that will stand transplanting are given more space in a nursery row or better yet, are set out to their permanent position. Those that will not stand transplanting are thinned out in the seed bed.

A mulch of two or three inches of course hay is spread over the plants in late November after the ground has frozen, much in the same way that strawberry beds are mulched.

FALSE TEACHING.

Dear Editor and Members of Social Corner, Greeting: To be on the list one must send an occasional letter. I wonder how many think before they teach children, and again do each of us realise we are teachers every time a child sees us as well as hears us. Many a downfall comes to young people as direct results of false teaching or of people who teach differently than they mean to. But more is done for the fun of seeing some child's eyes big with wonder. Among the false stories taught by Christian (?) people is that about Santa Claus. It is just as easy to tell the truth to the youngster by saying Christmas is the day we celebrate Christ's birthday, for no one really knows just what day of the year He was born, and because He is in heaven we can do nothing for Him personally. So we give to others in His name trying to make Him pleased. But to people we love we give because we want to make them happy. We give also the wish of happy Christmas to show our love for Christ and make it a mark of our love for Him also.

No child so taught will ever have the pangs of distrust of the whole creation, and lose the trust he has in his parents, like the small boy of an acquaintance of mine who was very sober in his Christmas doings, so very sedate and almost without joy that a friend asked him about it. Finding his Santa Claus belief was shattered and that he had been told the cold hard fact of no Santa Claus but given money that he might play the joke (?) on someone else, his decision was: "After I get this work done, I am going to 'vestigate' the Jesus Christ business." Poor little chap, he had lost his faith in what he had been told and at the early age of eight had to "vestigate."

Now for a joke I know about. A certain church not a thousand miles away went on a campaign for members. They were successful in a small degree and obtained among others a young man who was really in earnest in church work, as church work ought to be carried on. Being a good mixer he soon was a social worker, doing good work and had a fine following of prospective young members. A box or basket social was given and the young folks were there and had some other people along with them. Everything went fine till the lunch was sold and then one young lady who meant to send her name in the next Sunday found that her card had been taken off her attractive package and put on another most meager as well as plain lunch. Keeping still but looking about, she found one member of the church eating her lunch.

She told the young man worker, and her friends as well, and so the whole bunch decided that "no church for us; we can get better treatment in the gutter."

The young man worker decided also that he would not work with a crowd who considered such ways a joke to be laughed at.

Many of the church people wonder why people have so little use for their church, and what came over their most wonderful worker.

PLAY SQUARE.

THE SUITABLE HOME.

Dear Social Corner Editor and Friends: Many thanks to the editor for the prize check, it was very greatly appreciated.

Is the home a suitable place for the child?

Our ancestors could not learn how to make or use a sewing machine, an electric machine, an airplane, a radio, or any of the other inventions that any child now can understand. And much money and time and materials were used in experiments before these conveniences were perfected and made accessible to everyone.

I thought as I saw the long line of automobiles rushing down the crowded avenue of one of our large cities what would happen if they worked as poorly as people do, but everyone seemed to be in perfect condition.

The only thing that we have not made great improvement or perfection in is the human affairs—the training and development of the children.

Anyone would know that to grow a choice plant one must not just pull it up [illegible] a day and that one must give it the right soil and other suitable conditions. Anyone would know that a choice colt must have proper food and care and gentle training.

In one of the most beautiful homes I was ever in, the young daughter spent the afternoon in the most comfortable chair reading a questionable story book. When the young brother a lively attractive little fellow came in he stood by the table a few minutes enjoying the attention of some of the ladies, until boy-like he nearly tipped over a vase of flowers, when his mother said "Now, George, go right out of here and dont come back again this afternoon." We were delightfully entertained in this home, but the first object of his home should have been the training of these young children.

The next lady to entertain the club made it a special day for training her young sons in social politeness. They helped her serve everything and waited until all the ladies had been nicely served before having their treat. This was a home where the training and teaching of the children was the first business and other duties and pleasures came afterwards if done at all.

A certain small boy remarked when his younger brother was born, "Now I have got someone to boss around." This seems to be the idea of some parents. Their children are scolded and punished from morning till night, because the parents expect them to behave like adults. Of course a girl finds more in the home to interest her than a small boy does and so the boy gets more of the trouble as his active ways upset the home more.

There is nothing more interesting than the training and teaching and development of a child. And nothing more annoying than an untaught child. And perhaps nothing more amusing than to see the different ideas of parents who do not understand children.

Another type of parent is the kind who consider the child a pet never to be crossed or taught or reprimanded by anyone.

The development of mechanical things was easy, because only a few large manufacturers needed to understand and do it all and they were interested to learn for the sake of the financial gain.

The right development of the children is hard to accomplish because everyone has an influence in it and must learn to understand and help about it, and it necessitates a change and adjustment of the home life from the adult ways and habits to the viewpoint of the child, and many adults are not willing to change.

A child must do right from his own choice and live his own responsibility from the first or he is not developing character and becoming prepared for life.

A great deal is written about whether the world is growing worse and whether civilization is to perish.

Why not use the same common sense in human affairs as in material things?

There is certainly no reason now why every home should not be compelled to be a suitable place where the child can grow up with right ideas and habits and prepared to live a well regulated life, kind, truthful, honest, helpful and understand—a well-behaved person in any place in life.

DRESSING THE BABY.

Dear Corner Sisters: I will continue this week the instructions on dressing a new-born baby.

Now place the clean piece of cloth you have prepared over the navel and pin the flannel band under the arms, being careful not to pin it so tight as to stop the circulation. Use only safety pins, unless you are where you can't obtain safety pins and then I would use needle and thread as a wandering pin point means a cross baby.

Put on baby's shirts and diapers. Cotton is best for the latter, as the linen does not soak as well. Place the petticoat inside the dress, putting both on at once, and over the baby's feet, not over the head. Pin the petticoat and button the dress. In dressing the baby in this way it is not necessary to turn it but once. Too much turning of the baby isn't any help. Be sure and have room enough for the baby's petticoats to turn up and pin—otherwise it cramps the child. Leave plenty of room for "kicking."

I always had two old cups which I used to label with surgeon's plaster. One I marked "Eyes" and the other "Mouth." These cups are for the boric acid solution referred to in my previous letter. Cut some cloth—any old soft cloth—into two-inch squares. Keep these for use in washing the eyes and mouth, never using the same piece for both, and burning each piece.

Do not fear to put your fingers in the child's mouth in washing and be certain to wash the child's mouth before and after each feeding. Keep your pieces in a baking powder or cocoa box, then you will have them ready.

BERRY GRIDLE CAKES.

Dear Social Corner: Yesterday a friend brought us over two quarts of high bush blueberries and we were more than pleased, for we have not been able to get any before. This morning when I was making our "berry griddle cakes" I wondered if you made them our way. I never knew any one to, except my grandmother.

Berry Griddle Cakes: One and one-half cups sour milk, one cup molasses, little salt, one egg, two cups of flour, one quart of blueberries. Put the berries in last. They need not be rather thin, but the egg makes them so you can turn them all right. I fry small cakes for they turn best. We eat them with butter the molasses makes them sweet enough. We are very fond of them; perhaps others might not care for them. These and pies are the only way we like the berries.

I enjoyed the picnic at Wildwod park very much and was so glad to meet so many of the sisters.

Viola: Here is the recipe for the picnic cookies you wanted printed:

Cookies: One cup of sugar, two-thirds cup butter (wash it), two eggs, four tablespoons sweet milk, one and one-half teaspoons vanilla, three level teaspoons Royal baking powder, salt, flour to roll. Bake quickly, hot oven.

I hope some one will try the griddle cakes. They are so nice, and are different.

ENTHUSIASM AROUSED BY VERSAILLES PICNIC

Dear Editor and Social Corner Sister: I think that it is time now that I added my mite. My Social Corner enthusiasm has been aroused by reading of the picnic at Versailles as that was the place of my birth. I was born in my great grandmother's home, now known as the Allen place. Just a few steps from the old homestead which was then known as the Barnes place I never had the privilege of attending the church and Sunday school as I was taken to a new home before I was two years old. My two elder daughters have visited the place and attended church with Sister Ready. I hope to do so some time.

I am enjoying the summer very much as we have a beautiful garden. We are to have string beans and new potatoes today, (July 19) for dinner.

This is all that I have time to write today as I am very busy. My three weeks old baby is demanding my attention.

With best wishes to all I remain,

SWEET WILLIAM.

EGG COOKERY.

Dear Sisters: Egg cookery is something that is specially important and there are many different ways they can be served. Some think that there is no cook like the French. In making an omelet they say that one cannot make an omelet without breaking eggs, which they apply to many things beside omelet. I say that the theory of an omelet is to beat as much air as possible into the eggs before they are put on the fire. It is impossible to make a good omelet without dividing eggs and heating the yolks and whites separately. Beating the air into them makes them light and fluffy if they are cooked over slow heat.

I can make a fine omelet and it is light as can be, and doesn't drop in the center. I'll tell you the secret. If when beating the whites of eggs the rotary beater is held at an angle instead of straight up and down in the bowl, and the salt is put in the whites of the eggs, I don't think you will have much trouble.

Most cooks consider that for a plain omelet it is better to add hot water than milk as it makes the dish more tender. Personally I much prefer an omelet with neither just the eggs beaten separately, lightly salted together and cooked over a slow fire, cutting it through constantly with a knife to let the heat penetrate to every part of the mixture.

When I make a Virginia omelet or Spanish ham omelet of course I have to make them different.

Spanish Ham and Egg Omelet: Cut stale bread into half inch slices and soak until soft in one cup of milk mixed with one beaten egg. Fry delicate brown on a well buttered griddle. Mix one cup minced ham, one-third of a cup of soft bread crumbs, with cream to moisten, beat it and season with cayenne. Spread the mixture on each slice. Cook several eggs in water just below the boiling point till firm enough to keep in shape after removing the shell.

Put a whole egg on each one and serve at once.

Eggs a la Jardiniere: Put about three tablespoons of butter in frying pan, add three eggs, some pepper and salt; stir till the eggs begin to thicken, then drop in some asparagus tops cut fine, French beans cut small, peas and small pieces of tomato. When done serve on hot buttered toast, sprinkle with cheese.

Virginia Omelet: I was shopping in Virginia and the chef gave me a recipe for a Virginia omelet. Chop one-quarter cup bacon, the same amount of tomato, one-half tablespoon onion, and half a small apple. Cook them slowly in a small frying pan. Beat the yolks of four eggs, add a shake of pepper and the cooked mixture; fold in the whites beaten stiff and cook until brown.

Eg gTimbale for Luncheon: Stir in a quarter cup of grated cheese (American) and season with salt and pepper or paprika. Butter custard cups and fill them with the mixture. Stand the cups in boiling water on back of the stove and cook until they are set.

Turn the timbales on a hot platter and pour over them hot tomato sauce. Garnish with cress. For the sauce, boil two cups of canned tomatoes with a bit of bay leaf, a slice of onion and a sprig of parsley for fifteen minutes. Then strain, press through a sieve and thicken with a tablespoon of butter and flour rubbed together, season with salt and pepper.

GREETINGS FROM CRIMSON RAMBLER.

Dear Corner Sisters: Just a few lines to help fill the page. Have read with much interest the glowing account of the picnic at Versailles. I had intended going to that but was hindered at the last moment.

Bonnie: I enjoyed your card. Thanks for the same. I shall keep that; it is all right. I have heard of those, but this is the first I ever saw.

Balsam Fir: Your recent card at hand. It must be very nice on the lake just now. Wish it was so I could visit you, but don't think I can this summer.

[illegible]: Hope you have a nice day for your picnic for it has to be postponed that means more work.

J. E. T.: Your letter of Saturday amused me [illegible] like it you don't like [illegible] very well. Say! I was just wondering how far your cows are from home since you say you can [illegible] sandwiches till the cows [illegible].

Don't [illegible] that job, although I am [illegible] a good deal of almost all kinds. Still our cows are many times a long way [illegible] and I sat eating sandwiches until they would put in an appearance you would hear of a hurried call for the doctor, the undertaker and the grave digger, so just at present I think I'll refuse the job because [illegible] folks are having and it might leave them in a bad fix to stop for a funeral. How about it? I failed to see about cows that day I called at your home. A short time ago I went for an auto ride up your way, when just in front of your home you crossed the street. I shouted to my chauffeur: "Don't kill that lady, because she belongs to the Social Corner."

I failed to attract your attention. Perhaps you were looking for the cows then.

Paul: Where, O where have you gone? Have not seen you very lately. Was that nice on the Fourth of July too much for you?

Great [illegible]: Your last letter received in due time. Will try to answer soon, as at present I am very busy and I have had lots of company.

Best wishes [illegible] corner sisters.

Ice cream: One pint of milk, bring to a boil, stir in a small scant half cup of flour, one cup sugar, one egg. After stirred it set back on stove and steam 20 minutes.

Stir this in two quarts of top milk, one can of condensed milk, one tablespoon vanilla.

Supper: Potato puree, graham bread toast, shrimp salad, sliced fruit with grated cocoanut, iced tea (with or without lemon).

Potato Puree: Four to six large potatoes, one tablespoon powdered parsley or celery, salt, three cups rich milk.

When I haven't parsley or celery, I use grated cheese.

ETHELYN.

TIME TO GET BUSY.

Dear Corner Folks: As there still seems to be a shortage of letters, some of us need to get busy, whether we have any talent for writing or not. It would be a pity to lose the page after its being in existence so many years. Lalways find something to enjoy when reading it.

S. E. D. writes very nice little sermons. If we would only profit by all the good advice written, I believe we would be near perfect.

Enjoyed Martha's letter about housecleaning. Her ideas were much the same as my own in regard to the matter and I felt quite inspired when I read them, as I was in the midst of cleaning a room at that time.

My last letter was rather out of date as it was held back by a strange mistake it made its appearance a week late.

One line was omitted from the verse, so I would like to make a correction. It should have read:

O wilding rose, whom fancy thus endears,
I bid your blossoms in my bonnet wave.
Emblem of hope and love through future years.

HEPATICA.

ANOTHER CORNER MEMBER.

Dear Social Corner Editor: Having been invited several times to picnic with The Corner sisters, and having had such good times, I would like to become a member of the Social Corner.

Have the sisters ever used raw linseed oil to wipe the stove and pipe with (not the nickel trimmings)? It keeps it looking fine where not so very hot and one's hands and nails look much better than when blacking is used.

A name suggested for me is

JOHNNY-CAKE.

THREE GYPSIES FINED FOR FORTUNE TELLING

Waterbury, July 27.—Mary John, 36, Mary Mark, 32, and Lana Mark, 19, gypsies, were sentenced to 30 days in the workhouse in the city court this morning, by Judge John F. McGrath, on charges of fortune telling. Katherine Mark, 43, also a gypsie, haled to court with the other three, was allowed to go free because of her physical condition. Counsel for the four accused based his defense on the ground that it was not "fortune telling" the women were practicing, but the study of "phrenology," which, he claimed, was a science as old as the nation of Greece.

Twenty-seven thousand women and girls are now enrolled in the public physical culture classes in London.

NEW LONDON BOOTLEGGERS ALARMED BECAUSE SOME ONE IS SQUEALING

The police have a burglary to solve and one that is surrounded in mystery, for the break, if one really did occur, has all the ear marks of being an inside job. This morning about 4 o'clock when Angelo Zerill, proprietor of the Empire bakery, at 398 Bank street opened the place he discovered that a quantity of stock had been removed and he notified the police. Detective Sergeant Chas Hammond was assigned to the case but his investigation did not reveal any of the windows or doors of the place having been forced and if entrance to the place was gained it was made possible by the thief using a duplicate key. The place is closed early every evening and is not opened until four o'clock the following morning, at which time the bakers report for work. Zerill declares that the thieves removed 20 pounds of sugar, three barrels of flour, twelve cases of hops, six bottles of vinegar, three and one-half gallons of Chili sauce, twelve boxes of salmon, forty-eight boxes of sardines, thirty-six packages of jam, eighteen packages of coffee, eighteen packages of macaroni, four cans of pineapple, three dozen packages of raisins and six cans of blackberry filling. The police who patrol the Bank street beat observed nothing unusual about the bakery during the night. More than one man would have to be employed in transfering the plunder from the bakery to the vehicle that carted it away.

George E. Burdick of North Stonington early this morning reported to the police that his wife had deserted him and in going away from her home was accompanied by Burdick's niece, Olive Veins, aged 9. Burdick described the woman as being 54 and about five feet, four inches in height, with gray hair and two warts on the right side of her face, another wart on the left side. He requested that she be held should she be located in New London.

Personal tax delinquents are to be made to step up to the collector's office and settle or stand prosecution. There are several hundred of these delinquents, men and women, and they now must pay at the rate of $2 a year for the privileges accorded the great American citizen, represented by police and fire protection, water schools, sidewalks, streets, etc., for the city has no way of getting money to pay for these things except by taxation. The woman wants the ballot and when they were accorded that privilege, with it went the obligation to pay each year for the rights that went with the opportunity to vote and have a voice in all that pertained to the government of the city. Many of them have held back and in a tactic way resisted the payment of the personal tax. The real estate owner has had no chance to avoid payment because the amount of the personal tax was included in the sum fixed for him to pay on realty. The men who belong to the fire department and those who are in the service of the state as members of its armed forces are exempt from the payment of a personal tax as are those who served in the war against Germany. But others have no way out of paying. The tax collector has sent to the prosecutor the names of some fifty or more personal tax delinquents and complaints will be drawn so they may be presented in the police court the first of the week. A drive to collect this tax was made under a former mayor but has not been generally resorted to in order to get the $6,000 which the tax if paid will aggregate.

Several cases in which auto law violations are alleged to come before the police court tomorrow having been continued from an earlier date in the current week.

Following Sergeant Samuel Hick and a squad of officers going to the home of Joseph Reisini, No. 6 Chelsea street, last night possessed of a search warrant, as they believed a quantity of alcohol and whiskey removed from the boat Bertha E. was stored, just before police officers detected the unloading of the craft a few nights ago, the officers failed to find the liquor. Later in the evening, it is understood, the "squaler" informed the police that if the liquor was not to be found at the Chelsea street house, it would be located at the Menghi place. Sergeant Hick and Patrolman James McKenna, Braxton Hill, Thomas Lyden and Frank Minopena went to the home of Menghi, after 3 o'clock and located the liquor. The alcohol and whiskey, the latter being of the Peter Dawson and Golden Sovereign' brand, were brougat to the police station and placed in storage. Michael Cazallo, reputed to be of the bootlegger ring, acknowledged ownership of the booze and was arrested. In the police court this morning he was fined $200 and received a jail sentenced of six months, but execution of sentence was suspended by Judge Prince as it was the first offense of Calzallo. The liquor was transferred from the Chelsea street house to the Evergreen avenue residence but the day before the the raid.

Claims To Have Proof Of Evolution

Professor Paul Kammerer (above) a biologist of the University of Vienna, who claims to have demonstrated the truth of evolution. He is hailed as the second Darwin, for where the Englishman met failure, Prof. Kammerer is meeting with success. To support his claims he exhibited a newt of a nigrifican genus in which he states eyes have been developed. This is considered perhaps the greatest biological discovery of the century. He has lectured on his discovery throughout Great Britain, and scientists from all over the world hail him as one of the greatest savants ever known.

NORWICH FIFTY YEARS AGO

Excursions with the tempting offer of clam bakes afforded much of the entertainment for the home folks 50 years ago.

The news of the week picked from The Bulletin of 1873 is in part as follows:

Monday, July 21, 1873—The water in the city reservoir is now three feet and seven inches below high water after over two months of drough and people are beginning to think of the Bog Meadow Farm pond, now owned by the city as an auxiliary reservoir to be used in times of need, very like the present.

Michael Ryan of Greeneville was injured Saturday while working at Poquetanneck, while working on Hall's new mill. A lever with which he was working struck him on the head inflicting a severe scalp wound. He was given medical attention and taken to his home.

Engineer Leach of the Northern Road narrowly escaped death Saturday at South Monson when he went out onto his engine to make repairs as the train was moving. Stooping down to make repairs he was suddenly struck on the head as the train passed through a bridge and was saved from death by his fireman who hauled him to safety and dressed the wound until the train reached Stafford.

Tuesday, July 22, 1873—Pierce & Hard of this city have been engaged for some time past in constructing a new supply pile for the city reservoir, which it is intended will take water from near the surface, instead of close to the bottom, as heretofore. In addition to the wire mesh, which is to sustain the pipe at a suitable angle, a float of copper has been introduced into the strainer, which it is supposed will be capable of sustaining of itself about 250 pounds. The pipe weighs—in the air—about 1,400 pounds. The float was tested yesterday as to its air-tightness by the help of the Shetucket river and one of Fuller's air pumps, under the personal supervision of Mr. Fuller.

The well known Lee property on Washington street was sold yesterday, by E. Fuller & Son to A. F. Sturtevant for $40,000. This adjoins the Law place now occupied by Mr. Sturtevant, and the two grounds could be made into one of the finest private grounds in Connecticut, barring the Lockwood estate.

A local man caught a chequid weighing five pounds, in the river yesterday. It is unusual to catch these fish in the Thames as they rarely come up so far and do not often take the hook.

Operations on the wreck of the Metis have been postponed until more equipment is secured.

Many local people plan to go to Fair Haven on Thursday when the 71st New York Militia give a digolay.

Wednesday, July 23, 1873—A man in Greeneville yesterday tried to drive a pig into Preston but the pig determined that he would die rather than to live in Preston and lay down in spite of all efforts to make him go by throwing cold water on him he remained and out of spite died in Greeneville. His owner got even with him by immediately sticking him and declaring that he would soon be eating him.

Two horses, the property of the circus funct New England circus were sold at auction yesterday to satisfy the claims of the American House. The horses brought in $175.

The new reservoir pip was given a test pressure of 260 pounds yesterday and was credited as perfect.

A photographic lottery shop similar to one broken up by the police in the city recently has opened in Greeneville in Deacon Mowry's building next to the post office.

Ripley is displaying a life like portrait of C. W. Hopkin's son, by Leighton the artist. There is also a water color of a scene in Antwerp by a local lady that is a gem and is drawn very accurately.

Thursday, July 24, 1873—The staunch old steamer City of Lawrence took down the largest and most enthusiastic excursion party of the summer, from this city to Shelter Island, yesterday. One thousand, six hundred strong it represented the Central and West Side Baptist churches, and included a large number of pleasure seekers of all denominations. At the Pequot House the party on board had a fine view of the handsome Brooklyn Yacht club at anchor in the harbor. The excursion was one great success from start to finish and Tubbs' Cornet band was on hand to furnish the music. A profit of nearly $400 was realized by the churches giving the excursion.

The Y. A. C. new sailing club has chartered Sam Comstock's Sharpies for a week's camping out excursion at Alewife Cove, a mile below the Pequot house New London and are to leave this city on Monday morning.

The street commissioner has this week taken grass and weeds enough out of the gutters on Union street to feed the horses at the city barn all winter.

Friday, July 25, 1873—The Hon. Albert S. Bolles, of this city, has been elected an honorary member of the Cobden club of London. The only other sons of Connecticut honored with membership in this well known organization for the diffusion and growth of these principles of economic science with which Richard Cobden was identified, are the Hon. L. F. S. Foster and David A. Wells of Norwich, and Ex-President Woolsey and Prof. Sumner of Yale college.

In these hot days it seems a wonderful thing to have the iceman gone around with the dooling piece of ice that makes lemonade and other drinks a blessing. Ice this year is selling at 45 cents the hundred pounds to houses and 25 cents a hundred to stores.

The Blackstone Hose company enjoyed its outing at Fair Haven yesterday and were royally entertained by the Fair Haven department and the Quinnipiac department with the Felsburg band. The boys did not get home until ten o'clock in the evening.

Willimantic people are wondering what the county jail authorities are going to do with the newest prisoner at the jail, an infant weighing but 24 ounces, daughter of one of the women prisoners.

Norwich women will no doubt take pleasure in reading what Saratoga papers have to say in the latest habits of women. The whole story is that several women there are attracting considerable attention by smoking cigarettes in hotel lobbies and at places of entertainment.

Saturday, July 26, 1873—News of the death of William L. Story is being received with sorrow throughout the city, for in his death he demonstrated what is in a man to make him a hero. Several weeks ago while driving a team having a boy with him the horse suddenly took fright and lashed out with his feet striking Mr. Story a terrific blow. The boy became entangled in the reins and Mr. Story seeing the danger held to the reins until the horse finally threw himself and upset the wagon. He then rescued his companion, and afterwards went for medical treatment. In his death Norwich has lost a brave citizen and a man's man.

The person who set fire to the Story manufacturing plant still remains at large and to aid in finding him Mayor James L. Greene with the consent of the common council has offered a reward of $500 for the arrest of the guilty party.

With the mercury hitting 94 in the shade the ice cream parlors of the Brown House and store of J. M. Brewster are doing a thriving business.

FORMALDEHYDE DRIVES FLIES FROM STABLES

There are many places around the stables, barns and other buildings on the farm where flies congregate and become a veritable nuisance.

There are, of course, many ways to get rid of them, such as fly traps, but one of the quickest and easiest way is to use one tablespoonful of formaldehyde to a pint of milk and leave it in a saucer where the flies can help themselves. As the flies love the milk they will readily drink and the formaldehyde will kill them.

Try this if you are bothered in this way.

KILL WITCH GRASS WITH TAR PAPER

Witch grass has been blamed for sending many a farmer or gardener to an early grave, and to prevent this high mortality these suggestions for its eradication from the cultivated field are offered:

While there are many ways of eradicating witch grass, the method to be used depends primarily upon the crop to be grown and the type of land upon which the witch grass has a foothold. While the methods may vary as to practice their ultimate object is the same—to smother the plant, for only depriving it of light and air can it be killed. Witch grass infested land has a complete network of roots, and merely cutting these roots will retard the progress of the weed but little, for each piece of the cut root will sprout and grow a new plant.

For small areas, such as garden plots, where witch grass infestation threatens the garden producer, the best method of disposing of it, according to experts, is to cover the ground with strips of tar paper, overlapping the strips two or three inches, and covering these seams with soil so as to totally exclude light. If the covering is left on the ground for a sufficient length of time, two or three months, the roots of the weed will be killed.

In the cases of new land to be used for cultivation, it should be plowed as soon as possible after the hay has been cut, and thoroughly harrowed. A second harrowing should follow in a week, and the ground should be sown to buckwheat. The second harrowing will cut out the sprouts which start before the witch grass, completely smothering the witch grass itself. The buckwheat should be plowed in about Sept. 5, and winter rye or rye and vetch sowed. This will prevent the witch grass from starting, will provide the ground with valuable humus. This crop can be plowed under in the spring, and there will be little witch grass to retard the crop.

SPRAYING IN A HURRY MAY MEAN POOR FRUIT

Generally speaking, a great deal of trouble occurs each year with various diseases on apples; such as scab, fruit spot, black rot and sooty blotch caused by careless spraying. Because the directions as to the proper mixture and time of application is followed out carefully, is no reason for the grower to apply the material carelessly, says W. H. Darrow, extension fruit specialist.

The grower must put for ever effort to see that the fruit is properly covered with an even coating of spray material. Many times inexperienced men handling the sprayrods, or experienced man who are somewhat in a hurry rapidly pass by the trees to be sprayed, covering only a small part of the fruit. Frequently, they think because they have given the outside leaves a good coating that the tree is perfectly sprayed, but this is not the case. The fruit, both inside and outside, both above and below should be covered with a fine mist, as experience has proved that a fine mist adheres to the fruit better than does a coarse one.

To do a good job of covering therefore, it is necessary for the man handling the spray rod to go all around the trees, spraying the entire tree at one lap, spraying the inside, above and below very thoroughly with a fine high pressure mist. For the best results in the top of the trees, the growers should use a tower, as it is almost impossible to cover the fruit on the topmost parts of the trees thoroughly from the ground.

The last summer spray should be applied from 9 to 11 weeks after the petals fall, according to Mr. Darrow. This means the latter part of July for most sections of the state. The materials needed are:

Calcium Casginate spreader 1-3 lb.
Arsenate of lead powdered— 1 1-3 lbs.
Lime sulphur. 4 qts.

The spray should be supplied on relatively cool days when the humidity is low, if a choice is to be had.

HOW TO GET RID OF QUITCH GRASS

The cool, moist soils of Connecticut are ideal for one of the most notorious of weeds, quackgrass, sometimes called "witchgrass," "quitch-grass" "durfy-grass", and possibly a hundred other more or less complimentary names. The weedy character of this grass plant is due to its creeping underground stems or root-stocks, which spread through the soil in all directions, vigorously sprouting at the joints, and resisting all but the most persistent efforts at extermination, according to J. S. Owens, agronomist for the Connecticut Agricultural College, Extension Service.

"How to get rid of quackgrass with interest far more than how to utilize it. Contrary to popular opinion quackgrass can be controlled rather easily if a few characteristics of the plant are understood and treatment based upon that knowledge. The roots have the lowest vitality in midsummer after producing the season's growth of stalk and seed. In spring and fall the roots contain an abundance of reserve food material and the young shoots are difficult to kill. Nearly all of the rootstocks are near the surface. Deep plowing only mixes them with a larger amount of soil and does not smother. Shallow plowing, about four inches, leaves all the roots near the surface where they may be kept from growing by harrowing. Cultivated crops, unless kept entirely clean by laborious hoeing, only stimulate the quackgrass. It is sometimes done but the writer knows from memories of blisters that effective treatment cannot be easily administered with cultivated crops.

With the exception of very wet seasons, quackgrass can be completely killed by a simple plan of cultivation and cropping. Plow the field very shallow soon after the hay is harvested. Keep harrowing on sunny days sufficiently to prevent the roots sending up green sprouts. The harrowing may be continued all season but a heavy seeding of buckwheat about the first of August will do just as well. Plow again just before freezing weather and allow the roots to receive still further punishment by freezing. It is very seldom that any will come through the winter, but if they do, plant a cultivated crop, as there will be so little of the grass left that it can be kept hoed out. Millet may be used to advantage at this time."

"Millet is sometimes effective in killing quackgrass without following or other treatment. When using millet, is is best to plow shallow early in the spring, harrow for a few weeks, then seed the millet thickly."

SOW ALFALFA

It is better to sow alfalfa early in June than in August. An early seeding will allow it to reach a height of eight inches, which it needs for winter protection.

Did the new seeding of clover get a good supply of phosphoric acid and potash when preparing the seed bed? If not, put on 500 pounds of acid phosphate and 100 pounds muriate of potash as soon as the oats are removed. If in doubt, but the fertilizer only on a part of the field.

Lime may be put on the clover or alfalfa any time, although applying before seeding is the idea practice. A good stand of clover or alfalfa deserves an application of lime and will certainly pay for it. A small strip without lime will tell the tale unless manure is used extravagantly.

More farmers are adopting the practice of seeding clovers and grasses in the corn each year. If your corn is so thick that you grow only fodder or the weeds are replacing the corn, don't try it. Early in July is preferable for seeding in corn. Be careful to distribute the seed well and cover it slightly. Of course, clovers hunger for phosporic acid, lime and sometimes potash. Fertilizers may be applied upon removing the corn if not previously put on when preparing for the corn.

The World's Most Expensive Cars Are 4-Wheel Brake Equipped

Rickenbacker pioneered four wheel brakes. While it was announced to the world but recently, four years ago Rickenbacker was developing a four wheel brake system, knowing it had to come—knowing nothing could stop it. The farsighted European engineers were quick to realize this, too.

It is with considerable gratification that we can now tell the public, "Yes, Rickenbacker is four wheel brake equipped"—and so are all of the most costly European motor cars.

Isotti Fraschini (Italy)	Berliet (France)
Delage (France)	La Buire (France)
Minerva (Belgium)	Mors (France)
S. P. A. (Italy)	Sidea Youffret (France)
Renault (France)	Fiat (Italy)
Hotchkiss (France)	Turcat Mery (France)
Leon Boll'ee (France)	Peugeot (France)
D. F. B. (Belgium)	Omega Six (France)
Hispano Suiza (France)	Cottin Desgourtes (France)
Georges Frak (France)	Delahaye (France)

Ansaldo (Italy)	Excelsior (Belgium)
De Dion Bouton (France)	Slim (France)
Ravel (England)	Sizaire Berwick (England)

After digesting this interesting and convincing list do you believe you want a car without four wheel brakes?

Does any fair minded person need further argument?

Come in and let us show you. The demonstration of Rickenbacker four wheel brakes will open your eyes to a much safer and saner method of motoring.

In addition to the showing of the pictures, Rev. E. C. Dunbar will make a brief talk on Friendship.

Breed Theatre.

What has been pronounced one of the most notable screen productions of the season, Hungry Hearts, will be the feature at the Breed theatre Sunday only. This is a picturization of Anzia Yezierska's volume of short stories of the same title—another of Goldwyn's Big Twenty, which in itself is sufficient recommendation.

Hungry Hearts was written out of the author's own experience, and as a result, say those who have seen it, an amazingly realistic picture of New York life, with all its humor and pathos, is presented.

E. Mason Hopper, who was responsible for such previous Goldwyn successes as Hold Your Horses, Dangerous Curve Ahead, The Glorious Fool and the recently released Brothers Under the Skin, directed Hungry Hearts with all his accustomed skill, and his deft, sympathetic touch is felt throughout.

Goldwyn gathered together a superb cast for this photoplay, including Rose Rosanova, who has a strong, intensely dramatic role as the mother; Helen Ferguson, who has recently come to the forefront among the most consistently capable actresses of the screen; Bryant Washburn, long a favorite with motion picture fans everywhere; E. A. Warren, well known character actor; George Siegmann, Otto Lederer and A. Budin.

Other pictures on the bill include Topics of the Day and an Educational comedy.

Today's bill consists of Charles Jones in The Footlight Ranger, Pearl White in Plunder, the Pathe News and a Sunshine comedy.

Breed Theatre.

It is only fair to say that it is a different Bebe from the "good little bad girl" of many of her previous pictures. She's a wistful, shy and pathetic little bit of humanity, this orphaned Nancy, and her portrayal by Miss Daniels marks a ripening of her art, a step forward into the bigger things of photodrama.

But hold! your old friend Bebe is there, too, with her unfailing sense of humor, her ability to wear smart clothes smartly, and her little "come-hither" smile.

In her supporting cast is Edward Sutherland as the pleasing juvenile. Myrtle Stedman has taken a recess from leading woman roles with Hart and Hayakawa to play Mr. Sutherland's mother, and Edward Martindel plays the role of the hero. Vere Lewis and James Gordon do excellent work as the low-lives who mistreat Nancy, their orphan ward.

Direction was by Chester Franklin, and George Folsey gets credit for the exceptionally beautiful cinematography and lighting. The story is by Douglas Doty. Elmer Harris supervised production.

Other numbers on the program are the Pathe News and an Educational comedy.

Strand Theatre.

In response to letters from hundreds of Jack Holt's admirers, who asked that his next Paramount picture be a succession of genuine thrills, The Tiger's Claw was especially written. With what success this was done, will be apparent when the picture is shown here for the first time at the Strand theatre next Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday.

Orders were given Jack Cunningham, the scenarist who adapted the Covered Wagon, to write a picture story for Mr. Holt, filled with as many kicks as are ordinarily found in an entire serial. Mr. Cunningham got busy and for the first time in his screen career Mr. Holt was given a triangle love plot—one in which his own love balanced between two women.

India, the darkest and most mysterious country of the world, offering a background of thrills, was chosen as the locale. Into the background of jungles and mystery the story was woven. A man-to-beast battle with a Bengal tiger; a leap, on horseback, over a deep gulch fifteen feet wide; a battle against a gang of Hindus; mass assassination at the hand of the Thugees, ruffians masquerading under the cloak of religion; a fight for life in the waters of the flood from the dynamited dam; these and other equally powerful situations were embraced in the action.

The result is perhaps the most exciting photoplay ever produced. A snap a minute, yet not so thrilling as to lose its heart interest or its comedy relief, the picture speeds onward to one of the biggest climaxes ever recorded by a camera.

The leading feminine players, Eva Novak and Aileen Pringle, grasped audibly when they saw what they were to do, but nevertheless swallowed their misgivings and came out alive and unscratched. The supporting cast is excellent.

Round 8 of the famous H. C. Witwer's Fighting Blood series will be shown, also a new comedy and [illegible]

POETRY

THE CHAMBERED NAUTILUS.

This is the ship of pearl, which, poets feign,
Sails the unshadowed main—
The venturous bark that flings
On the sweet summer wind its purpled wings
In gulfs enchanted, where the siren sings,
And coral reefs lie bare,
Where the cold sea maids rise to sun their streaming hair.

Its webs of living gauze no more unfurl—
Wrecked is the ship of pearl!
And every chambered cell,
Where its dim dreaming life was wont to dwell,
As the frail tenant shaped his growing shell,
Before thee lies revealed—
Its irised ceiling rent, its sunless crypt unsealed!

Year after year beheld the silent toil
That spread his lustrous coil;
Still, as the spiral grew,
He left the past year's dwelling for the new,
Stole with soft step its shining archway through,
Built up its lofty dome,
Voyaged in his last-found home, and knew the old no more.

Thanks for the heavenly message brought by thee,
Child of the wandering sea,
Cast from her lap forlorn!
From thy dead lips a clearer note is borne
Than ever Triton blew from wreathed horn!
While on mine ear it rings,
Through the deep caves of thought I hear a voice that sings:

Build thee more stately mansions, oh, my soul,
As the swift seasons roll!
Leave thy low-vaulted past!
Let each new temple, nobler than the last,
Shut thee from heaven with a dome more vast,
Till thou at length art free,
Leaving thine outgrown shell by life's unresting sea!

— Oliver Wendell Holmes.

FOLLOW, FOLLOW!

Mine eyes are blurred with gazing
On the madnesses of men,
And I've lost the clue to maze
In the clamor of this den.
There are vistas in the sunset,
There are murmurs on the wind
That are calling me to follow,
Follow, follow till I find.

It may be in Atlantis
In hushed halls beneath the sea,
Or a lonely upland cottage
May hold peace and joy for me.
And whatever hands may hold me
And whatever winds may blow,
I have flung my heart before me
And it calls my soul to go.

—Sheamus O. Sheel, in The Lyric.

MARKET WAS PROFESSIONAL

New York, July 27.—Finding that operators on the long side of the market were unable to make any headway because of the marked absence of public participation, professional speculators for the decline took command of today's stock market and forced recessions of 1 to 5 points throughout the list. Nearly two score stocks established new low records for the year, United States Steel common touching 88 1-4 and Great Northern preferred and Northern Pacific selling at their lowest prices since 1896.

Circulation of reports that several oil companies are seeking temporary financing to provide facilities for their surplus product, lower quotations for wheat, cotton and other important commodities and unfavorable cable reports from abroad inspired selling for both accounts. The rapidity of the decline resulted in the closing out of several weakened marginal accounts, the volume of sales being more than double that of yesterday and the largest for any full day session in the last three weeks.

Selling was concentrated at first on the Northwestern Railroad shares, special emphasis being placed on the face that some of the larger systems had not earned their fixed charges for several months, the prospect of reduced earnings this fall because of the lower wheat prices and the increasing competition in coast to coast business provided by the Panama canal. Great Northern preferred got as low as 86 1-2 and Northern Pacific was down to 88 1-8, the closing quotations being slightly above those figures.

Other rails also lost ground despite another series of favorable June earnings reports. Losses of 2 points or more were established by Canadian Pacific, Reading, Chicago & Northwestern, Lehigh Valley and Texas & Pacific.

Baldwin broke 5 points to 115. American Can was down 3 1-4 at 88 1-8 and American Sugar was down 3 at 80.

Pan-American issues were among the hardest hit in the oil group, the A showing a net loss of 3 1-4 and the B, 4 points. Marland broke 4 5-8 and Josden, Producers & Refiners, Standard Oil of California, Phillips Petroleum and General Asphalt were off 1 to 3 1-2 points.

Call money held at 5 per cent. all day. Time money business was quiet with brokers bidding 5 per cent. and bankers asking 5 1-4, a few three and four months maturities being arranged at the higher figure.

Foreign exchanges were heavy, demand sterling dropping 5 points to 5.91 cents and Italian lira dropping 2 points to 4.38 cents. German marks sold as low as 83 cents a million but rallied later to $1.95.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET.

Chicago, July 27.—Liberal receipts here and increasing arrivals at other primary points tended today to make wheat prices average a little lower. Closing quotations were unsettled, at 1-4c. Net decline to 1-4c. Advance, with September 97 1-4 and December 1.00 3-8 to 1.00 1-2. Corn finished 1c lower to 1-2c gain. Oats 1-8c to 1-4c off, and provisions varying from 2c setback to a rise of 7 cents.

Weakness which manifested itself at the opening of the wheat market was followed by moderate upturns in price and then by new declines as the day drew to an end. The initial downward tendency came chiefly from the fact that 640 carloads had arrived here overnight, and that the total receipts at primary markets were more than double the aggregate a week ago, as well as more than on the corresponding day of last year. Besides, favorable weather in Canada and lower quotations for futures deliveries at Liverpool put bulls at a disadvantage. Estimates that the Dakotas and Minnesota would harvest 10,000,000 bushels less than was indicated by the government's July report did a good deal, however, to lift the what market during the middle of the day, as did disquiting fresh advices about black rust in Canada. On the other hand, export business was slow, and it was said that consignment notices pointed to enlarged receipts next week at Kansas City. Assertions that the wheat acreage in Argentina had been augmented 12 1-2 per cent. were also current, and with the New York stock market weakness and profit-taking on the part of early buyers here the day's advances were gradually wiped out.

Rains relieving drought fears led to declines in corn and oats. July corn, though finished at the season's top figures.

Provisions were affected somewhat by the easing of the corn market, but insufficiently to offset the influence of the higher hog values.

CURB MARKET.

New York, July 27.—A sharp break in the oil shares, founded on reports that several companies were in need of new capital as a result of the huge over-production of the crude product, was the feature of today's more active curb market.

Standard Oil of Indiana again led the list in activity, nearly 20,000 shares changing hands, the closing price of 51 3-4 representing a net loss of 1 3-8 points. Standard Oils of Kansas and Kentucky, Cities Service and Imperial of Canada each lost about 2 points while Magnolia Petroleum broke 5 1-4 and Prairie Oil & Gas, 4. The losses in Gulf of Pennsylvania, Humble Mountain Producers, International Petroleum and Mutual Oil were held to small fractions.

Reading Coal rights sold as high as 22 3-4 and then slumped to 21 1-2 for a net loss of 1 point on the day. Durant Motors dropped nearly 2 points and Stutz 1. Glen Alden Coal also was heavy.

Mining shares pointed downward with the rest of the list but the changes, as a rule, were unimportant.

BOND MARKET.

New York, July 27.—After carrying a long list of railroad bonds considerably lower selling of these issues eased somewhat in later trading in today's bond market and losses were comparaitively small at the close. Minneapolis & St. Louis issues and bonds of the Iowa Central which it owns led in the downward movement as a result of receivership proceedings instituted in the federal court at Minneapolis. With the exception of the Minneapolis & St. Louis refunding 4s, which closed a point higher, all of these issues were down several points.

Trading in other parts of the list was on a limited scale and price changes relatively unimportant.

Cerro De Pasco Copper 8s declined 4 points and Marine 6s were off a point in the industrial devision.

Active United States government bonds moved within narrow limits the four Liberty issues closing fractionally lower. Foreign government issues were quiet, losses of a point each by Prague 7 1-2s and Mexican 4s being the only outstanding changes.

STONINGTON CARPENTER SUES FOR $25,000 FOR BADLY BROKEN LEG

Edward W. Northrup of Stonington, who claims that the breaking of his leg and other injuries which he received has permanently disabled him from following his occupation of a carpenter at which he earned $50 a week, has brought suit for $25,000 damages against the Westerly Light and Power Co.

Northrup claims that at 5:1 o'clock on the afternoon of Oct. 26, 1922, while he was riding his bicycle in Westerly near the corner of Water and Williams streets, a motor truck of the Westerly Light and Power company, came around the corner, struck his bicycle and ran over his leg. He alleges that he was on the right side of the street, but that the truck came around the corner at a dangerous rate of speed and was to the left of the center line of the intersection of the streets. Both bones in his left leg were broken and the leg was badly mangled and lacerated. Because of these injuries and others he has been obliged to spend $2,000 for medical attendance and will have to spend more, he claims.

NORWICH INFANT MORTALITY RATE IS NOT HIGH

Babies in Bridgeport, Enfield and Naugatuck in Connecticut had a better chance for life in 1922 than infants in twenty-five other cities in the state, according to infant mortality statistics just published by the American Child Health association.

The rate for these three cities was 64, which means that there was this number of deaths under one year of age out of every thousand births. The twenty-eight cities included in the report are cities of 10,000 or more population. Greenwich and Torrington were second with 65, Manchester and Stamford, third, with 70, Meriden and Stratford, fourth, with 71 and Danbury, fifth, with 72. Norwich had a rate of 77, which brought it well up towards the top of the list.

The average for all of the twenty-eight cities was 77.7. This compared favorably with the average for all the states in the country in the United States birth registration, which includes twenty-seven, and in which there are 583 cities listed with more than 10,000 population. This average was 79.6 Connecticut was tenth among these states being led by Oregon 58.6; Washington, 58.9; Minnesota 60.3; California, 64.6; Nebraska, 65.3; Utah, 71; Wisconsin, 73.7; and Ohio, 77.3.

PASTORS WILL PREACH ON "LAW—NOT WAR"

From many pulpits in eastern Connecticut the doctrine of Law—Not War will be preached Sunday in conjunction with the celebration of the ninth anniversary of the beginning of the World war on July 28, 1914, and throughout the country there will be fitting observances of the day.

The movement has the backing of every civic organization in the country and the movement is made to instill the hearts of the people with thoughts of peace not war.

Ministers who are to preach Sunday on the topic Law—Not War will be Rev. J. B. Aldrich of the First Methodist Episcopal church of Norwich Town, Rev. R. B. Day of Grace Episcopal church of Yantic, Rev. O. W. Buseckman of the Congregational church of Colchester, Miss Lydia Hartig of the Goshen Congregational church, Rev. Mr. Foster of the Lebanon Congregational church, Rev. William Oakley of the Leffingwell Methodist church, Rev. G. Hanna of the Bozrah Congregational church, Rev. Peter J. Mooney of St. Andre's Catholic church, Colchester, and Edwin Hill, secretary of the Young Men's Christian association of Norwich, at the Fitchville Baptist church.

ANTIQUE COLLECTOR SUES TO GET TABLE BACK

When Mrs. May S. Crafts of Providence, R. I., took a look in her summer home at Mystic in March she made sure a gateleg table, of antiquity, and valued accordingly, was there as usual.

Some months later, when she again visited the place, the ancient and valuable table was missing. Then came a hunt for it, and Mrs. Crafts connected Harry B. Redfield of Clinton with the disappearance.

Now, through her counsel, Judge Rollin U. Tyler, she has instituted suit against Mr. Redfield and the case has been returned to the superior court in Middletown, to be tried out during the next court year unless there is some settlement.

The plaintiff claims the table is worth $250 and she is asking for $500 damages. Papers have been served upon the defendant and attachments and garnishees have been made to secure the possible judgment.

FATAL AUTO ACCIDENTS PASS HUNDRED MARK

Fatal automobile accidents in Connecticut since the present year began passed the 100 mark last week, and the record is now well on the way towards the second hundred. The century point was reached this year one month sooner than last year. Motor vehicles have caused the death of exactly one person every two days, on an average. If the present rate continues, 175 more such fatalities may be expected in the state before the end of the year, which will be by far the worst record in the history of automobile operation in Connecticut.

July has been the worst month this year, with a total to date of 28 fatal accidents in which there were 31 victims. Most of the accidents have been on the highways in rural districts and on the streets of small towns. Only five fatalities occurred on the city streets of the seven large Connecticut cities—two in Hartford, two in Waterbury and one in New Haven.

NORWICH NAVAL RESERVISTS ARE ENDING THEIR COURSE

Naval reservists of Norwich and New London, who have been on Eagle boat 27 ... a two weeks' cruise with the 120th Connecticut naval reserves from various cities of the state, will arrive home today (Saturday), when the cruise will end at New Haven.

Various drills and cleaning work have kept the men occupied, but there has been plenty of time for relaxation with shore liberty nearly every evening at ports along the coast. Among places visited have been Provincetown, Nantucket, Vineyard Haven, Jamestown, Block Island and Greenport.

All the district Eagle boats and subchasers were reviewed Friday afternoon in North river by Theodore Roosevelt, assistant secretary of the navy.

Will Serve Dinners for Reunions.

At the regular meeting of Sedgwick Woman's Relief corps, No. 16, held in Buckingham Memorial Friday afternoon, with Senior Vice President Clara E. Burke in the chair, the secretary's and treasurer's reports were read and accepted. The department general order was also read to the meeting. It was voted to serve a dinner on the 14th and 15th of August to the 18th and 26th regiments when they come here for their reunion. The meeting closed with the repeating of the American creed and the salute to the flag. There was a fine attendance at the meeting.

SOCIAL WORKERS' COUNCIL HEARD DR. HASTINGS HART

Dr. Hastings Hart one of the most noted social workers of the United States was the speaker at the meeting of the Social Workers' Council of New London and Windham counties, held Wednesday afternoon at the Bride Brook Farm, the home of Mrs. Atlee Hunt, New London policewoman. Dr. Hart gave a very delightful informal talk to the council after luncheon. He has been connected with the Russell Sage Foundation for the past 15 years. He was the first general secretary of the National Conference of Social Work. For a time he was secretary of the Minnesota Board of Corrections and Charities. At present, he is president of the American Prison Association. He has inspected prisons all over the country.

Dr. Hart spoke of the Russell Sage Foundation and its work. The object of the foundation is the improvement of social and living conditions. It includes research and publication work, educational propaganda, the establishment and maintenance of social and benevolent agencies. Dr. Hart heads the department of child helping which aims to promote better methods of dealing with dependent, defective, neglected and delinquent children. Further, Dr. Hart talked in general of social work. He said that a social worker required a spirit of consecration to her work equal to a minister or a missionary. It is a work with souls, not with materials. It demands a person's best at all times. Dr. Hart stressed very forcefully the value of the home. It is the important factor in society which we must preserve. It is the natural place for all individuals. Institutions are not natural. This is the reason why we are building our institutions of various sorts on cottage plans, to conform as nearly as possible to home life. In his delightful manner, Dr. Hart gave words of inspiration to the council, congratulating them on their privilege and responsibilities, reminding them in conclusion, always to remember the necessity of patience. He said, "always remember this, that five years is only a short time."

Following Dr. Hart's talk a business meeting was held. It was decided to have ten meetings a year, four of which are to be luncheon meetings, with a special speaker. The next meeting will be held in New London, September 25th. Miss Joyce Crosby was appointed chairman of the membership committee and Miss Marenda Prentis of the press committee.

The following attended the gathering: Dr. Hastings Hart, Dr. Katheryn Byron, of the Norwich State Hospital and president of the council; Miss Edith Moran, family welfare worker of the Norwich United Workers; secretary and treasurer, Mrs. Lewis J. Phillips, general secretary of New London Associated Charities, chairman of the programme committee; Miss Marjorie Keith of the State Bureau of Child Welfare; Miss Elizabeth Anderson, general secretary of the Welfare Bureau of Willimantic; Miss Jane Clark, secretary of the Diocesan Bureau of Social Service, New London; Miss Florence Williams, psychiatric social worker from the Norwich State Hospital; Mrs. Jack Whiteside, supervisor of the school nurses, New London; Mrs. Alice Hunt, New London policewoman, and Miss Marenda Prentis, charity commissioner of New London.

This Social Workers' council was organized June 5th, at the Norwich State Hospital, when the council was the guest of Dr. Katheryn Bryon.

HIGH BUILDING COSTS HALT STATE CONSTRUCTION

Hartford, July 27.—State construction work involving $1,500,000 has been held up on account of high building costs, according to information given to Governor Templeton and the state boards of finance and control. Expansion at six institutions and the erection of a new state armory will be held in abeyance until prices of labor and material become more favorable. It is certain that no major building project will be undertaken by the state until next year at the earliest. In some instances it has been found by state officials prices of building have increased 20 per cent. since the appropriations were made by the session of the legislature which adjourned in June.

Trustees of the Norwich state hospital have put off until spring the erection of two new ward buildings to accommodate 250 additional patients, a nurses' home and a house for staff physicians, for which the legislature appropriated an aggregate of $570,000.

The Mansfield State Training school and hospital is the hardest hit. Nearly 350 defective children, a menace to society, are awaiting admission to the institution, which is crowded almost to the danger point. Accommodations for 240 more children were to have been provided by appropriations aggregating $720,000 which were voted by the legislature for a new dormitory, a hospital building and a nurses' home, releasing space in other parts of the institution which was to be used for inmates.

An appropriation of $135,000 for a dormitory for the Mystic oral school for the deaf has been found inadequate to meet the plans of the board of management.

22 CHURCHES REPRESENTED AT RECOGNITION SERVICE

The service of recognition of the ordination of Mrs. Maria H. Davies of Westminister to the Christian ministry took place in the Congregational church there Sunday afternoon. It was an interesting and inspiring service, largely attended both by the people in Westminister and by representatives from out of town, no less than twenty-two churches being represented at the service. The invocation was offered by the Rev. T. Edward Davies, pastor of the church, and advanced in years, with a splendid record in the ministry. The report of the ordaining council at the county association of churches held in Putnam was given by the scribe, Rev. Fosdick B. Harrison of Woodstock; the scripture reading was by Rev. Stephen P. Livingston of Thompson; the prayer was offered by the pastor of the Central Village Congregational church, Rev. Mary F. Macomber; Rev. J. Spencer Vorhees of Pomfret, who had been the moderator at the council, gave an able and appropriate sermon; the charge to the new assistant pastor was given by Rev. William C. Prentiss of Plainfield; and the Rev. A. A. Gates of Hampton gave a fitting and effective charge to the people.

In addition to the congregational singing, a solo was rendered effectively by Henry Lovett of New London, a former citizen of Westminister. The closing prayer and benediction were by the Rev. Marus H. Davies who has already proved herself well fitted for the work, being a graduate of Mount Holyoke college and trained in Christian work from her earliest childhood.

ECHOES FROM THE LODGE ROOMS

FOREIGN WAR VETERANS.

Prominent among the guests of the 24th annual convention of the Veterans of Foreign Wars at Norfolk, Va., will be a figure familiar to all followers of national sport, Judge Kenesaw Mountain Landis, czar of baseball, who has accepted an invitation of the athletic committee to preside as judge in the track meet. The announcement that prizes aggregating $3,000 have been offered by the Norfolk authorities has attracted nation-wide attention and heightened the interest among former athletes of the A. E. F., who are now beginning to feel the restraining hand of time, and are not so enthusiastic on these occasions as in their service days.

Although complete returns are not yet ready for compilation, rough estimates grant that the Norfolk encampment will treble the attendance of any of the twenty-three previous conventions of the gold stripe order.

DAUGHTERS OF POCAHONTAS.

Sebequanash council, No. 11, met at 58 Broadway on Wednesday evening the usual amount of business being transacted.

Upon invitation of the entertainment and social committee, all adjourned to the dining room where a bountiful repast was spread it being the 33rd birthday of the D. of P. A large birthday cake graced the center of the table and it was certainly a handsome ornament, with its 33 candles representing the number of years Sebequanash council had been in existence. There are only two of the original members left, Brother Stephen Culver, who is Powhattan of the council, and Sister Nettie Kinne, who holds the place of keeper of the wampum, and is a thoroughly capable guardian of the wampum belt. The menu consisted of sandwiches, salads, fancy cakes, fruit, fruit punch, and last but not least was the birthday cake. The first incision was made by Pocahontas Della Bailey, the second by Past Great Pocahontas Nettie Kine. It was then passed to the members and visitors, who each had the honor of cutting it into smaller pieces. The cake was made and donated by Sister Lovenia Clark of Hiawatha council, No. 15, of New London, who is Deputy to Sebequanash council. A rising vote of thanks was given Deputy Clark for her kindness and thoughtfulness in furnishing such a beautifully made and decorated cake. Although Brother Culver was not able to attend he was not forgotten as a box of the good things which were enjoyed by the sisters was sent to him by special messenger.

REBEKAHS.

After a social time the committee in charge of the picnic sounded the call for dinner and the following menu was served: clam chowder, sandwiches, coffee and melons.

Following the dinner the entertainment committee had a varied programme of sports for the amusement of the members, as follows: peanut race, won by Sidney Collins; peanut hunt, first prize won by John Parsons, second by Mrs. Phillips; potato race, won by Earl Wheeler; sack race, won by Sidney and Paul Collins, Jr.; three-legged race, won by Earl Wheeler and Sidney Collins.

In the evening several of the brother members joined the party and enjoyed a supper of clam chowder, sandwiches, cake and coffee. The affair proved to be a most enjoyable one and Mrs. Collins was tendered a vote of thanks for her hospitality.

CLOTH THEFT CASES BEFORE POLICE COURT.

John Krawak of 422 North Main street was before the police court Friday morning on the charge of theft of cloth from the United States Finishing company, where he is employed but he was found not guilty and was discharged. His wife, Sophia, was found guilty of having 32 yards of stolen cloth and was fined $50 and costs, besides having a jail sentence of 30 days imposed, which was suspended. Judge T. J. Kelly appeared for the accused man and wife.

Peter Pranka, of 30 Hickory street, also a Bleachery employe, at whose home 13 yards of cloth, alleged to have been stolen, was found, was defended by Attorney Leslie Brewer. The attorney asked for definite proof that the cloth had come from the Bleachery, which was lacking, and the case went over to Monday.

ORATORY ONLY WEAPON OF COMMUNISTS IN GERMANY

Failed to Stage Their Much Heralded Demonstrations Against the German Fascisti—Held Parades in Various Cities—Nothing Developed to Call for Police Intervention—Food Situation in Berin is Receiving the Attention of Officials.

Dusseldorf, July 29—(By the A. P.)—The much heralded communist demonstrations against what is called the German Fascisti proved complete failures today, according to reports reaching Dusseldorf late this afternoon.

Although the occupation authorities were ready to put down any attempts at holding meetings, there were indications this evening that no force of any kind was necessary. In fact the day, apparently was one of the most eventful Sundays in many weeks, as far as indicated by reports reaching French headquarters.

In Duesseldorf, the people promenaded along Fifth avenue or had their swims in the Rhine as usual, apparently unconcerned with regarations affairs. This attitude prevailed despite the possibility of obtaining marks from the mushroom banks which for the past few days have been keeping open night and day and on Sundays in order to cash every piece of available foreign currency for paper marks, at tremendous profit. The business of these banks was greatly checked Saturday because of their inability to obtain marks.

Although the official quotation today was 75,000 marks to the franc, these exchange peddlers were giving only 53,000," and then only in large lots. But the inhabitants apparently took the stand that no marks were required to promenade or to swim; at any rate they did not become frantic because of any lack in marks. The people now are getting the habit of marketing daily for marks, as for potatoes, carrots and other vegetables.

The demonstrations in greater Berlin and at other points simmered down to indoor meetings distinguished by lurid oratory rather than heavy attendances. In Leipsic, Dresden and Thurington points where open air demonstrations were permitted, the communists were able to muster only restricted portions of their following, and no where did the parades or public meetings call for police investigation.

Much criticism had been leveled against the Cuno government for permitting the Reds to pursue a campaign of unusual violence in their party organ during the last ten days, in view of the prevailing unrest growing out of the money and food situations.

Berlin food difficulties are receiving the attention of the federal food controller—who is in touch with the League of Agriculture with the purpose of securing increased deliveries and also improved methods of distribution at points of delivery.

The political thermometer, which promptly reacted to the effects of the communistic agitation—food shortage and the spectacular fall in the mark—showed slightly cooler weather today, as the editorial criticism of the Cuno government during the past week now is being interpreted by the party leaders as a reminder to the chancellor of his failure to make positive use of the unlimited parliamentary credit voted him when he assumed leadership of the present non-partisan cabinet.

As the government's Ruhr and Rhineland policy continues to have the undivided support of the reichstag, it is now urged that that situation and the conditions in the occupied areas would have constituted themselves considerably more favorable for Germany if the internal situation had not been allowed to drift to the point of chaos, which finds outward expression in the dollar rate of 1,000,000 marks.

FRANCE AND BELGIUM TO DELIVER NOTES TODAY

Paris, July 29.—(By The A. P.)—The text of the Belgian reply to the British communication dealing with reparations was received at the Quay D'Orsay this morning and the French and Belgian replies will be delivered to the British foreign office tomorrow.

Baron De Gaiffier D' Hestroy, the Belgian ambassador, presented the text of the Belgian note to Count Peretti De La Rocca, director of political affairs, in the absence of Premier Poincare.

M. Poincare, who is spending the week end at his country place at Sampigny, which was recently rebuilt after destruction by the Germans during the war, had his first real repose after nineteen months in the premiership interrupted during the day to receive the contents of the Belgian note over a special telephone connecting his home with the foreign office.

The secrecy on which so much was insisted has not prevented the Brussels and Paris newspapers of serious thought from assuring their readers that the replies will be found to be an agreement in principle on leading points; that there will be no negotiations with Germany before abandonment of Germany's passive resistance; that the evacuation of the Ruhr will be subordinate to satisfactory payment by Germany and a settlement of the differences concerning the method of paying reparations, which already has been proposed by Belgium to the allies.

GIRL HAD LIVED TEN YEARS IN A PIGPEN

El Paso, Texas, July 29.—Reared in piggy for ten years through the alleged malice of a stepmother, a 13 years old girl was found asleep in the pen, located near her home here, by detectives Ivy Fenley and Ira Cline.

The child, scarcely the size of a three years old, could answer only simple questions.

She said that she had lived in the little pen as far back as she can remember, and that her food was always given to her through the bars.

Neighbors told the officers that her food consisted principally of scraps. Some of them had been taking milk to her pen. The stepmother said the child was put in the pen only to play. County Probation Officer Mrs. Emma Webster took charge of the child.

BOSTON WOMAN WAS DROWNED IN SWITZERLAND

Berne, Switzerland, July 29.—It was definitely ascertained today that it was Miss Elisa Robins of Boston, who was drowned Friday night when an automobile in which she and her sisters, the Misses Ida and Clare Robins collided with a tree in the valley of Simmen and fled into the Simmen river.

Miss Ida Robins was badly bruised and was taken to a hospital at Erlenbach.

Miss Elisa Robins was thrown into the swiftest part of the current and her body carried away. It was found later.

NEW JERSEY TROLLEY MEN TAKING STRIKE BALLOT

Newark, N. J., July 29.—New Jersey's six thousand trolleymen tomorrow night will begin balloting on the proposal that a strike be called because of the refusal of the Public Service Railway Company to meet their demands for a thirty per cent increase in wages and a six day week, with a strike regarded as inevitable by unio nand company officials alike. It is expected that August 1 will see New Jersey's trolley system virtually paralysed, the company having announced that it will not employ strike breakers.

Legislators Warned By Anti-Saloonists

Any Action Against Anderson Will be Considered an "Overt Act".

New York, July 29.—Directors of Anti-Saloon League of New York today made public a resolution warning members of the legislature that a vote for the legislative investigation of the league, recommended by the grand jury which indicted League Superintendent William H. Anderson for grand larceny, forgery and extortion, would be considered "an overt act constituting a declaration of war against the approximately 5,000 Protestant churches of this state committed to dry enforcement and represented by this board."

"We tell you in advance," said the statement, adopted by unanimous vote, "that there is no occasion for any attempted interference with the conduct of this particular business of the large majority of churches of the state.

"If you try to interfere anyhow, we shall not assume responsibility, by asking for any vote against such improper and outrageous proposal, although we promise in due time our utmost efforts to make such outrage as expensive as possible to those responsible for it."

The statement declare dthat the affairs of the League were carried on in a "straightforward, honest, legal way," and there was no excuse, other than political, for the proposed investigation.

SAYS BLOCS ARE CAUSED BY OUR ECONOMIC SYSTEM

Minneapolis, Minn., July 29.—(By The A. P.)—Inequalities of our economic system have forced the different groups like the farm bloc, labor bloc, the soldiers' bloc and mothers' bloc to consider their own interests collectively and these groups now are figuring their own problems as the business man figures his business, Senator Smith W. Brookhart of Iowa, declared in an address here today at the annual picnic of the Trades and Labor assembly.

These groups have reached the common conclusions that their interests are identical, Mr. Brookhart said. They now assert that they have been kept apart and at enmity by the great combinations of wealth, "which have thrived in profits and ruled in politics by keeping these groups of common people at each others throats," he continued. They believe in the spirit, the practice and the progress of co-operation and under this banner they are united today, he said.

"The question of unrest is the most engrossing in the state, national and international fields," said Br. Brookhart. "Civilization has reached a turning point. It is universal, prediction that great changes are impending."

MRS. RYAN NOT GUILTY OF IMPROPRIETY WITH MAXWELL

New York, July 29.—Mrs. Allan A. Ryan, whose name was linked with that of George Maxwell, internationally known music publisher, in "poison pen" allegations, was in this city and not in Paris, as was believed, while the grand jury was conducting its investigation into charges against Maxwell, Harry F. Wolff, her attorney, said today.

Mrs. Ryan, through Wolff, emphatically denied that she had been guilty of the slightest impropriety with Maxwell. He said Mrs. Ryan returned to New York from Europe by way of Montreal early in June and was met at the railroad station by her husband, who had received the "poison pen" letters.

"It is true that Mrs. Ryan and Maxwell had an intimate friendly relationship," said Wolff, "but all these charges based on the radiograms, all these assertions that they had traveled about Europe together, or had improper intimate relations, are false."

Mrs. Ryan is at present in Maine, he said.

Indictments charging Maxwell with forgery and authorship of the "poison pen" letters, scores of which were received by socially prominent men and women, were quashed last week by Judge McIntyre in general sessions.

Mexico City, July 29.—(By The A. P.)—Robert A. Newman, reported to have been kidnapped in southern Durango, by the bandit Juan Galindo last April and recently reported murdered, is not an American, as has been stated, but an Englishman who joined Galindo's band voluntarily and declines to abandon the outlaws, according to an official report made to the department of interior by General Eulogio Ortiz, military commander of the district of Durango, where Galindo is operating.

TO AID IN PROSECUTION OF WALTER S. WARD

New York, July 29.—Thomas J. O'Neill, well known criminal and civil lawyer, today verified a report that he had been appointed a special deputy attorney general, to aid in the prosecution of Walter S. Ward, wealthy baker's son, indicted recently for the murder of Clarence Peters, more than a year ago.

For the present, Mr. O'Neill said, he had only been asked to take care of preliminary motions made prior to the trial.

11 PER CENT. PRICE INCREASE BY AMERICAN WOOLEN CO.

New York, July 29.—(By The A. P.)—Increased activity in many of the financial markets as the past week closed was coupled with a renewal of Bearish attacks at points where it was believed that resistance might crumble. As reasons, or at least excuses, for the selling were cited disquieting news from Germany and unfavorable domestic political and industrial developments. Nothing really new has occurred, however, either at home or abroad. In Europe, a settlement appears to be nearer, although of course it will not come so suddenly as to take anyone by surprise. At home the pegs on which selling was hung have been in place for some time; namely, an increasingly difficult situation in oil, unsatisfactory earnings of certain western railroads, and a slackening of manufacturing activity in some lines, notably cotton textiles.

Fundamentally conditions remain sound, and it is not believed that the markets are going to be stampeded at this stage.

An indication of how one industry looks at the future is contained in the announcement of a 11 per cent. increase in prices by the American Woolen Company. Apparently this company is confident that the consuming public will absorb th advance.

STOWAWAYS HOPED TO HONEYMOON IN AMERICA

New York, July 29.—Their dreams of a honeymoon in America shattered, Miss Wilhelmina Striegliz and Gustav Schmidt, arrived as stowaways on the German steamer Grete from Hamburg, today, only to be turned over to immigration authorities at Ellis Island for return to their homes in Austria.

For the first three days out, the pair hid in the Grete's coal bunkers and they were grimy from head to foot when ships officers dug them out. Gave them a chance to wash up, and put to work for the rest of the voyage.

Five Persons Killed When Train Hit Auto

Four Were Young Women—Bodies Carried More Than 100 Feet.

New York, July 29.—William I. Gottlieb, garment manufacturer, and four women were killed when a Long Island railroad passenger train crashed into an automobile in which they were riding early today at Rockville Centre.

The women killed were:

Miss Margaret E. Lewis, of Manhattan, 30, a stenographer, formerly of Charleston, W. Va.

Miss Verna Tolley, 27, of Manhattan, formerly of Pittsburgh, a writer of fiction and features stories.

Mrs. Gladys Miller, 32, of Brooklyn, an actress.

Miss Thelma Keough, 24, sister of Mrs. Miller, also an actress.

The accident occurred at the Merick Road crossing in Rockville center when, according to witnesses, Gottlieb's car smashed through the crossing gates directly in the path of the speeding train.

Wreckage and bodies were hurled or carried for more than 100 feet and front of the automobile still was wedged into the locomotive when the train came to a stop 1,000 feet away.

One of the young women was alive when she was lifted from the wreckage, but died while being placed in an automobile to be rusned to a hospital.

One of the victims was identified by letters as Miss Margaret D. Lewis of Manhattan. The authorities immediately communicated with Gottlieb's office to establish the identity of the others.

Edwin John Scott, gateman at the Merrick Road crossing, told the authorities he had lowered the crossing gates for the last Babylon Theatre crowd train from New York when the headlights of Gottlieb's car appeared through the gloom and the car came hurtling up the road, without slowing down, he declared. The machine plowed through the gates just in time to be struck squarely by the train which was travelling at a speed of nearly 60 miles an hour.

Engineer F. X. Yaeger added his testimony that the gates had been lowered. Scott, nevertheless, was arrested by the Rockville Center police and held of a technical charge of homicide.

District Attorney Weeks conducted an inquiry into the accident this afternoon, at which conflicting testimony about the gates was given.

Edwin John Scott, crossing watchman, who was arrested on a technical charge of homicide and held in $5,000 bail for a hearing tomorrow, declared the gates had been lowered before the accident.

His contention was partly sustained by District Attorney Weeks who after examining the bars said that a partition on one of them indicated it might have been forced upward by the radiator cap of the automobile.

"After lowering the gates I stood at the shanty door waiting for the train to pass," said Scott in a signed statement to officials of the railroad. "When the train was about 25 feet from the crossing a car coming from north to south ran through the northside gate and stopped dead on the track."

Scott said that in trying to raise the gates after the crash the south gate would not move. He said that he later examined the north gate and found the butt in the rear broken.

Coroner Neu held a preliminary hearing into the tragedy at Lynbrook. Gottlieb was identified by business cards found in his pockets. His body had been caught beneath the train and dismembered. He was president of Gottlieb & Rabinowitz, Inc., of Manhattan.

NINE PERSONS KILLED AT GRADE CROSSING

Terre Haute, Indiana, July 29.—Nine persons were killed late today when a Pennsylvania eastbound passenger train crashed into the automobile in which they had started across the tracks at Liggett, eight miles west of here. The train was traveling about 50 miles an hour and was two hours late because of another accident near Highland, Illinois, in which four persons were killed.

According to G. G. Gillispie, in charge of the Liggett Telegraph Tower, who witnessed the accident, the tragedy was caused by the attempt of the driver to cross the track ahead of the train. The automobile was struck directly in the center, the occupants being hurled in dismembered fragments for a distance of about 200 yards.

The train sped on for a distance of about three quarters of a mile before it could be brought to a stop.

PRESIDENT HARDING NEEDS INDEFINITE PERIOD OF REST

Chief Executive is Recovering From Attack of Ptomaine Poisoning—Has Arrived in San Francisco—Mr. Harding's Attack of Poisoning Was Attended by Diarrhoea and Sickness of the Stomach—Had Been Without Food 48 Hours Prior to a Light Breakfast Sunday Morning.

San Francisco, July 29. (By the A. P.)—Improved from the attack of ptomaine poisoning from which he has suffered during the last two days, President Harding arrived in San Francisco today, needing, according to his physicians, an indefinite rest to restore him to normal health.

"The president is much better," said Brigadier General Sawyer, personal physician to Mr. Harding, in a statement to newspapermen, "but the facts are that he has been a sick man, suffering from a really violent attack of ptomaine poisoning. This was attended by diarrhoea and sickness of the stomach."

General Sawyer further said what was mostly needed now was absolute rest so that the president might regain his strength. Whether this could be brought about by Tuesday, when the official program of the executive in San Francisco begins was uncertain, General Sawyer added.

George B. Christian, Jr., secretary to the president, said it was hoped that the president could take up the program Tuesday, although the activities of that day might have to be curtailed, "as it is a strenuous schedule for even a well man." It was not thought, however, that the possible curtailment would preclude delivery by the president of his address on foreign affairs Tuesday night at the auditorium here.

The chief executive demonstrated the improvement in his condition upon the arrival of his train here shortly after 9 o'clock this morning by walking from his private car to an automobile, stopping on the way to shake hands with Mayor Rolph and a small reception committee. Accompanied by Mrs. Harding, he was taken immediately to a hotal where he spent the remainder of the day resting.

Some effects of the illness which kept the president in bed yesterday and caused cancellation of plans for the visit today and tomorrow to Yosemite National Park were plainly visible when he stepped from the train. He was somewhat pale and slightly weak as a result of not having eaten anything for 48 hours prior to a light breakfast this morning.

The pains incident to the attack of ptomaine poisoning which Mr. Harding suffered Friday night and yesterday disappeared during the night. He obtained a good night's sleep. Cooler weather after the heat of yesterday in southern Oregon and northern California, also added to the comfort of the president. It was pleasantly cool here today and those in attendance on the executive said they considered abandonment of the trip into the Yosemite a wise step as it enabled the president to avoid the heat of the San Joaquin valley.

The presidential train slipped quietly into San Francisco this morning. Less than a hundred persons were at the Third and Townsend streets station and most of these were newspapermen and railroad employes. Mr. Harding shook hands with several before Mayor Rolph and secret service men hurried him into his car and he was driven away. During the ride to the hotel he frequently waved to persons along the streets who had been attracted by the escort of motorcycle policemen.

General Sawyer in discussing the president's condition today said that the direct cause of his illness lay in some crabs which were put aboard the navy transport Henderson in Alaska and which the president ate.

"Crabs and fish taken from Alaskan waters," General Sawyer said, "sometimes are tainted by copper. It is possible that those crabs which were put on the transport and which the president ate were of that sort."

The sudden change from Alaskan climate to the warmer weather encountered in Seattle upon arrival there, General Sawyer believed, also might have aggravated the president physically. Lack of physical exercise during the long transcontinental trip and the voyage to and from Alaska, is also believed to have rendered the president susceptible to an attack like that from which he suffered.

Spokesmen for the president again said today that no consideration had been given to abandonment of the trip by water to the East coast through the Panama canal.

GIRLS PERSIST IN THEIR BARE LEG BATHING

New York, July 29.—Stockingless girls romped the beaches of Coney Island today, flagrantly disregarding bluecoats, who on previous Sundays, arrested and chased scores of those whose lower limbs were uncovered. The edict against stockingless mermaids was lifted last week when it was discovered there was no ordinance against bathers taking their dips in the Atlantic with bare legs.

Despite threatening crowds, 75,000 bathers enjoyed the surf.

A fad, believed to be new, was discovered on the beaches here, in the form of tatooed decorations upon the arms of feminine bathers. Linked hearts, rising suns and butterflies were seen, stamped over vaccination marks on the girls' arms. Sleeveless dresses were declared to be responsible.

Coney Island business men declared today that, despite the opening of the new $2,000,000 Boardwalk, this season has been one of the worst. They announced that in order to offset the dull period they would keep amusements and restaurants open after the official September Madri-Gras closing, and endeavor to make the island an all-year resort.

Mexico City, July 29.—(By the A. P.)—The fight of his numerous widows and children for the estate of Francisco Villa, slain bandit chieftain, promises to become as exciting as the search for the 7,000,000 pesos which "Pancho" is popularly reported to have buried in the vicinity of Parral.

JEWETT CITY

At the historic First Baptist meeting house in Providence, R. I., Saturday, there was a wedding of interest to many in this vicinity. The bride, Estelle Brown Owen, a native of Jewett City, and her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Brown Owen of Fort Wayne, Indiana, with the groom, Hubert Branson Sanders of Indianapolis, made the journey to Providence, that the marriage might be performed in the church of her ancestors. This church was founded in 1638 and was the first Baptist meeting house established in the country. Roger Williams, the founder, was an ancestor of the bride, as was also Rev. Chad Brown, the first pastor of the church. The present edifice is 148 years old. It is in this church that Brown University students are graduated, the bride's father being a graduate. The officiating clergyman was Rev. Clarence M. Gallup, pastor of the Central Baptist church in Providence, a classmate of the bride's father in Norwich Free Academy, his wife being a classmate of Mrs. Owen. The church platform was attractive in its old-fashioned garden, decorations of gladioli and country roadside Queen Anne's lace and ferns. Preceding the ceremony, Mrs. Harry F. Browne of Providence played three beautiful selections—From the Land of the Sky-Blue Water, by Cadman; To a Wild Rose, by Macdowell, and Love's Old Sweet Song, by Molloy. As the bridal party walked up the aisle she played the bridal chorus from Lohengrin. The recessional was Midsummer's Night Dream by Mendelssohn. The ushers, Frank Steere and Fred Steere, preceded the maid of honor, Miss Clara Louise Harden. She wore orchid taffeta with silver and orchid ribbons, and carried an arm bouquet of Killarney roses. Ruth Graves Steere was the flower maid, and wore yellow Canton crepe over pink silk. She carried a basket of Killarney roses and scattered rose petals before the bride as she walked with her father.

The bride was in a dainty tricked gown of white georgette over satin and had white mitts. She wore a tulle veil held by a circlet of orange blossoms. She carried a shower bouquet of bride roses and old-fashioned gypsophila. The best man was Milton Andrews Kimball. All of the attendants were cousins of the bride living in Providence.

The ushers and best man received gifts of cuff links. The maid of honor and hostesses were precedented sterling silver brooches, and the flower maid was given a bangle bracelet. A reception was held at the home of Attorney and Mrs. Frank Steere, on Tamber avenue. Mr. and Mrs. Sanders left for an automobile trip to Plymouth, Mass., and will return to Indiana by automobile later.

The bride's traveling gown was dark blue canton crepe with gray and blue trimmings. She wore a gray hat. She received gifts of silver, cut glass, money, linen, basketry, pictures, and household furnishings.

Guests were present from Dorchester and Somerville, Mass., Providence, Chepachet and Woonsocket, R. I., Glasgo and Jewett City, Conn. Mrs. Sanders is a graduate of Indiana university and a member of Phi Omega Pi and Phi Beta Kappa. Miss Minnie La Barre and Miss Alice Herard have returned to Baltic after a visit with Mrs. Albert Barnier.

Work on the indoor range of the rifle club is proceeding rapidly to completion. One of the 50-foot ranges is already completed while the other two will be finished tonight (Monday). Shooting will commence as soon as these ranges are finished. Some more work will have to be done on the 75-foot ranges before these will be ready for the trolleys. However, this will be done shortly, and as soon as the six ranges are in working order, the club will arrange a prize shoot, open to anyone with any kind of a 22 calibre rifle. The outdoor range for the 30 calibre army rifle is to be constructed on the Palmer Bros. farm in Griswold. Here it will be possible to have 600 yards which will be enough to test the skill of any riflemen. As soon as the club is financially able to do so the members are to go ahead with their 100-yard range on the old ball grounds which belongs to Mrs. Brewster. It is intended to have a six-target range, which will be near the village. This location is second to none, and the range can be constructed at very little expense to the club.

Rifle shooting has come to stay as a popular growing sport. The local quota has been added to the over a million devottes of the sport, and because of the accuracy of the 22 calibre rifle, are finding the expense of an afternoon spent in the out-of-doors to be insignificant as compared with the pleasure and benefit derived. Next Saturday the club goes to Baltic. Here they will shoot in competition with the Baltic club. The following Saturday the club will go to Meriden, where at 200 yards, they will meet the Silver city experts. The Meriden club will shoot a return match on the Taftville range.

The late Thomas Holmes, in his many years of regular visits to Jewett City, gained the esteem of numerous friends, who were sorry to read of his death. Some of the older residents remember how he used to come here on J. C. Perkins' candy cart, succeeding the late John H. Lee. His smile can be recalled, as he looked down from his high seat, which was reached only by climbing up over the forward wheel. Another friend speaks of Mr. Holmes' pride in the handsome pair of gray horses which he used to drive.

Mr. and Mrs. James Fisk of Newark, N. J., were week-end guests at Mrs. William Barr's.

Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Robinson spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Torrey, at their cottage at Pleasure Beach.

Mr. and Mrs. F. E. Robinson were week-end visitors in New Haven.

The Congregational church services closed Sunday for August. Rev. and Mrs. Stephenson expect to be at home in their rooms in the Congregational parsonage after today.

POETRY FOR THE WIDE-AWAKES

The Road to Slumberland

What is the road to Slumberland?
And when does the baby go?
He goes by the doorway "land of nod" to the music of "lullaby."
When all we lambs are safe in the fold under the evening sky.

A mother brushing the tangles out of the silken, golden hair;
Two little tired, satiny feet, from the shoes and stockings free;

Some baby words that are drowsily lisped to the tender shepherd's ear.
And a kiss that only a mother can place on the brow of her baby dear;
A little round head which nestles at last close to the mother's breast;
And then the lullaby soft and low, singing the song of rest.

And close and closer the blue-veined lids are hiding the baby eyes,
As over the road to Slumberland the dear little traveler flies.
To the beautiful city of Slumberland when the sun is sinking low.

NINE YEARS OLD

"You are nine years old today,
So the cherished records say,
And they think too much of you
To tell aught that is not true.
Let me, then, congratulate,
Even as when you were eight,
That the passing years and days
Bless you in so many ways.

"It would fill me with delight
Could make the day more bright,
Could I some gift bestow
That my love for you would show;
Something that is fixed and sure,
In the future to endure.
If aught such have shape and name,
Whisper, and your choice proclaim.

"Do you want a pretty gown,
Or a cloak of fluffy down?
Would you choose fine hosiery,
Or a charm from o'er the sea?
A new book or magic game
That from far-off India came?
Or a gold chain, deftly planned
By some Eastern mind and hand?

"How about a pocketbook,
Or a glass in which to look
And your pretty curls behold
When you are just nine years old?
Or a Summer bathing suit,
Trimmed with colors, bright and cute,
In which you could take a swim,
Should the sun shine bright or dim?

"Chose whatever gold will buy,
At your feet it soon shall lie,
Be it large or be it small,
What do you wish most of all?"
Close I drew her to my side,
And 'twas thus that she replied:
"Grandpa, only this to know,
You will always love me so!"

UNCLE JED'S TALK TO WIDE-AWAKES

In that great long list of questions which you have asked from day to day have you ever wanted to know why it was that the sky on clear days is blue?

Many times it is much easier to ask questions than it is to get an answer to them. If it has puzzled you to understand why the sky is blue instead of green or yellow or some other color you are no different than many others. That very question bothered the scientists for a long time. It required much study on their part before the answer was available, but Professor Tyndall after devoting much time to it produced this answer:

All the light we have is sunlight, which is a pure white light. This white light is made up of rays of light of different colors. These are red, orange, yellow, green, blue, indigo and violet. It takes all these rays of light to make our white sunlight, and when you separate sunlight into its original rays you always produce the rays of light in the above colors, and in the same order. This is only true, however, when the sunlight is passed through an object which does not absorb any of its rays. This is the arrangement of the different colors of light found in the rainbow. The rainbow is formed by sunlight passing into the raindrops or vapor in such a way as to divide the sunlight into the different colored rays of light. When the rainbow is formed none of the rays is absorbed by raindrops or vapor through which the sunlight passes. Some of these rays of light are known as short rays and some as long rays. But when sunlight meets other things besides these which make a pure rainbow these other objects have the ability to absorb some of the rays of colored light, and they throw off the remainder. When these rays have been thrown off those which have been absorbed make many different combinations, and thus are produced all the different colors we know, the various tints and shades of color, according to composition and size.

Now then to get back to the color of the sky which is blue, as we know. The sky or air which surrounds the earth is filled with countless tiny specks of what we call dust-particles of solid matter hanging or floating in the air. These specks are of just the size and quality that they catch and absorb part of the rays of light which form our sunlight and throw off the rest of the rays, and that part which has been absorbed forms the combination of color which makes our sky so beautifully blue.

It is a bit intricate for young minds but simple questions often call for just such answers

The Last Day of School.

Dear Uncle Jed: Our school was out the twenty-second of June. Oh, didn't we have a lot of fun! We played hide the button.

My teacher read us a story, and we sang a lot of songs. We had some ice cream. We wished our teacher a happy vacation.

The Poor Brother and the Dragon.

Dear Uncle Jed: Once upon a time there lived a poor brother and a rich brother. The poor brother was kind and good but the rich brother was rude and selfish.

One day they wandered away. Pretty soon they came to the edge of the forest. There they met an old woman. She said, "Will you give me some money?" The rich brother laughed but the poor brother gave her his last penny. Now this woman was not an ordinary woman; in fact she was a fairy, so now that the poor brother was so kind to her she is sure was going to be kind to him. She said, "Here is a horn and when you are in trouble blow on this and I will be there to help you."

The two brothers traveled on. Soon they came to a town. There was a great stir because a dragon was coming to take the Princess away. It was said that he who killed the dragon would have the princess in marriage. When the rich brother heard this he was afraid and ran home, but the poor brother had courage and said he would kill the dragon. He blew a loud blast on his horn. There stood the fairy, and asked him what he wanted. He said, "I want a horse and armor." Before he could blink his eye, there it was. He put on the armor and jumped on the horse, then started on his journey to kill the dragon.

Pretty soon he saw the dragon asleep in a huge cave. The poor brother clanged his sword against his shield. This awoke the dragon and in great terror he arose and blew out flames but could not hurt the poor brother because of the fairy's magic armor which he wore. The poor brother pierced him with his sword and the dragon fell dead.

The poor brother turned his steps toward the town, where he was greeted with much joy and his marriage to the princess was celebrated with great pomp.

The Fairy's Gift.

Dear Uncle Jed: Once upon a time there was a maiden. She did not have any parents. She was wandering through the forest and she heard cries. She looked around and saw a bird with her wing tangled in a bush. She untangled the wing and let the bird go. Just then she heard a rustling of leaves. She turned around and she saw a fairy. The fairy came to her and said, "I am a fairy. I have come to reward you. You thought that bird was a bird, but it was really me. Your reward is that you shall marry a prince." The fairy vanished before the maiden could thank her, so she just called, "Thank you, godo fairy," and went on. Pretty soon she came to a castle. She went in and asked if she could work there. One of the servants took her in. Just then the prince came in. He saw the beautiful maiden and asked her where she came from. She said, "I am a poor maiden, forsaken by everybody but God." Then the prince said, "I will not forsake you." He took her to a room. She dressed in beautiful clothes, and then she looked like a beautiful princess. The prince fell in love with her. So they were married. And now you see that what the fairy promised came true.

The Oak and the Willow.

Dear Uncle Jed: There stood in the woods an oak tree and a little willow. Now this was a very proud tree, he always kept saying to himself: How strong I am I'd like to see anyone who could make me bend my head, and this he told to the willow by him. The wind soon heard of this and spoke to the oak with some humor. Do you think that I cannot make you bend your head? That is so, said the oak, very angry. Then the wind called a storm and he himself blew as hard as he could. "Crash" went the oak. Ha! ha! laughed the wind. Then the oak said, "Little willow, how is it that with such a storm you're not even scratched?" Well, said the willow, when the wind blows I bend my head so, and it passes over me, so that I don't get scratched.

Edith and the Fairies.

Dear Uncle Jed: There was once a girl named Edith, who did not believe in fairies. One day as she sat under a tree, wondering if there were really true fairies, she fell asleep. Suddenly, all around became light, and before her she saw a fairy no bigger than your thumb. The fairy's name was "Fairy Green." He was dressed in green from head to foot. Edith was so surprised she could not speak. The fairy spoke first. "I hear you do not believe in fairies, so I think a trip to fairyland would prove what you doubt."

No sooner had Fair Green waved her wand, when both of them found themselves in a great dark passage. "Open!" cried Fairy Green, and the doors were thrown wide open, and two fairies came to show them the way. Fairy Green showed Edith all around fairyland. At the end of a week Fairy Green said: "You have seen the wonders of fairyland and now you must go home, for our fairy queen is coming home tomorrow and everything must be ready for her." "Here is a locket and chain to remember me by." Saying this, Fairy Green disappeared. Immediately Edith woke up. In her hand was the locket and chain, but no sign of Fairy Green. Since that day to this Edith believes in fairies.

It Never Rains But It Pours.

Dear Uncle Jed: One night I had finished studying all my lessons but English. Just as I was opening that book, in came by uncle, whom I had not seen for years.

"Oh, dear!" I thought, "I suppose I ought to get that lesson tonight," but my uncle had so much to say that it was impossible to study, so I closed the book, thinking that I could get up earlier in the morning and it would be a great deal easier to study it before breakfast.

Unfortunately, the next morning I overslept and had just time enough to eat my breakfast and hurry for the train. As I was waiting down at the depot this report came in: "The 8 o'clock train was wrecked. One hour late." I waited around until I decided to study.

Oh, dear, what was I to do? I listened and listened until finally I heard a whistle. Sure enough, it was the train. I was not able to study on the train as it was crowded.

I reached school just as the English class was coming to order. A hurried glance at the lesson showed me that I knew nothing about it. I was sure to be called on and would have to fail. I slipped down in my seat, trying to hide myself from the teacher. The lesson was almost over. I was beginning to feel relieved when not called on; but the teacher called me. I arose and coughed and coughed, trying to prolong the answer until the bell rang but all in vain. I could not answer and the teacher called on another. Never will I leave until tomorrow what can be done today.

Kittens in a Tree.

Dear Uncle Jed: A few days ago a neighbor's cat had kittens. I looked for them but I couldn't find them. Yesterday I thought I would follow her to where they were.

She is a young cat and is very pretty, with a gray coat with black markings and a pink nose and three double paws.

She made her way leisurely across the lots and across a neighbor's asparagus patch. I followed her slowly but she found me and came running toward me to be patted. I patted her and waited impatiently for her to go to her little kittens. She acted as though she was near them and lay down in the grass while I hunted aimlessly around, keeping an eye on her so she would not sneak off on me.

Finally she got up out of the grass and started toward an old apple tree, growling at me all the time. I wondered why she growled at me because she always acted as if she liked me. She started to climb the tree and when about five feet from the ground went into an old knothole. I looked into the knothole and found a cavity about 11 inches deep and 12 wide. There she sat, and there were her three kittens all double-pawed. There was a gray one, a maltese and white one and a black and white one. She seemed very proud of them and they were only four days old, and my mother said they were as big as ten-day-old kittens.

The Scare

Dear Uncle Jed: "Mother, may I go skating with Marie and Dorothy," asked Hazel, anxious to hear her mother's answer.

"No, Hazel, not today, because I am going away and you must be home to prepare the supper for your father and yourself," was her mother's reply.

"But mother, the girls will think it is so funny," said Hazel, almost ready to cry.

Soon after, Hazel's two friends were calling for her. How she disliked telling them that she could not go!

She opened the door slowly and invited them in. She told them that she could not go and they were very disappointed.

"Well, I don't see why you could not go and get home in time to get supper," said Marie.

"Why, surely," responded Dorothy.

"Well, perhaps I could do that," said Hazel.

So she slipped on her sweater and cap, picked up her skates and was off with the other two girls.

When they reached the pond they hurriedly put on their skates and Hazel being one of those venturesome girls soon skated far out into the pond and Marie and Dorothy lost track of her.

Hazel skated to a place where no other people were skating and she did not notice the danger sign until she heard the ice crackling and breaking under her feet. She screamed and many people came to her aid.

After she recovered from her fright she went home, promising herself faithfully that she would never be disobedient again.

Spot.

Dear Uncle Jed: One time there was a little boy who lived by the sea. This little boy had a dog, and was very kind to him.

It was a bright June day and Spot and his young master were playing in the sand at the seashore. While they were digging a mad dog rushed through the village, to the place where the two were playing. Spot saw the dog, but his master did not.

Suddenly, with a mad rush, Spot jumped through the air, and landed on the dog's back. The dog became frightened and ran away. After he was gone they started their play again.

We must always be kind to animals, because they can always help us.

The Kittens and the Dove.

Dear Uncle Jed: I am going to tell you about my cat named Patches.

One frosty day in winter Patches had four pretty little kittens. Every day they were growing bigger and fatter.

One afternoon my father went out to look for work. On the way home he found a pretty white dove on the road lying in the snow. My father picked it up and brought it home. When he got home he gave the dove to me. I fed it because it was very hungry.

When he finished he looked around him and saw the basket which the kitten were in. He walked over and got in and sat down. The dove always stayed there till his foot was all better. Then he flew away as if to say: "You have been very kind to me."

Studying the Birds.

Dear Uncle Jed: I have been reading your talks to the Wide Awakes and, knowing you are interested in birds, I am going to tell you what we have been doing in school to learn about the different birds. We had two large charts in our school with colored pictures of most every bird with their names, and we have two books that we can look in to find their ways of living.

In our spare time we would look up two birds, then after school each child would recite on his birds.

When we saw a bird we didn't know we would look it up on the chart to find its name.

My Kitten Tiger.

Dear Uncle Jed: This is the first time I have written to the Wide Awake circle. I am going to tell you about my kitten.

His name is Tiger. He can do some tricks. He rolls a ball and then he tries to catch it. He does other tricks, too.

When he wants something to eat, he stands on his hind feet and he takes it in his paws. He is very playful and he follows me around.

Should Know How to Swim.

Dear Uncle Jed: I thought I would write to the Wide Awake Circle. I have never written to Uncle Jed before, so I thought I would try and win a book. I am nine years old and I am learning to swim. I went with some of my friends to the Shetucket river this afternoon, and I can take the dead man's float and I can swim a little.

I think every boy and girl should know how to swim.

THE LITTLE JACK RABBIT PICTURE FOR COLORING

It was Thursday afternoon at the Old Bramble Patch. Billy Breeze was blowing in from Sunny Meadow scattering ahead of him a cloud of whirling leaves that he had blown from off the old apple tree. Mr. Merry Sun winked and blinked up in the high blue sky. He seemed to say to Little Jack Rabbit:

"Gather the turnips while you may,
Soon the sky will turn dull gray
And the snowflakes will appear

"Don't believe it, laughed the happy little bunny boy rabbit.

"Don't believe what?" asked a voice, all of a sudden, quick as the wind when it blows off your hat.

"Who are you?" asked the little bunny instead of answering the question.

"I'm somebody you haven't seen for a week or more—seven long days, but not nearly a score," cried the voice and the next moment out jumped Daddy Long Legs, the tall insect who seemed to be walking on stilts that somehow have become all twisted up.

"Ha, ha!" laughed the little rabbit. "I haven't seen you and you haven't met me since the time we went coasting on your Pushmobile.

"But where's your pushcart?" asked the little bunny boy rabbit, pushing apart the tall meadow grass. "I don't see it anywhere!"

"Of course, you don't," answered the Long Legged insect. "I gave it away to a little mosquito lad. He had never ridden on one."

"That was kind of you," said the little rabbit boy bunny, half to himself. "But I wish you'd given it to me.

"I'd love to have a Pushmobile
With rubber tires and wheels of steel,
I'd coast right by Danny Fox's den
But I wouldn't go back that way again!"

"No, indeed," laughed the long legged daddy insect.

"Just then, all of a sudden, Billy Breeze whispered in the little rabbit's nose—that's right, he whispered in Little Jack Rabbit's nose, for, that's the way the little four footed folk get the smell of an enemy nearby. "Look out! Danny Fox is up in the wind somewhere!"

Without a goodby or a "pleased to have met you," away hopped the bunny boy rabbit over to the Hollow Stump Telephone booth.

"S. O. S. or P. D. Q.
Get the number, Oh, please do.
Central please don't say they're busy,
I'm so frightened I'm getting dizzy!"

shouted the scarified little rabbit, holding the receiver to his left ear, all pink and trembly.

"Who is calling?" Tell me quick
While I find my hickory stick."

came the answer over the wire, quick as a flash or a dash or a crash.

"Oh, it's you, dear Mr. Policeman dog," sighed the bunny boy rabbit. "I'm in the Hollow Stump Telephone Booth, corner Old Cow Path and Clover Dell Square, Sunny Meadow, U. S. A. I smell Danny Fox. He's too near. Please come with your big club. I'll wait here until I see the sunlight shining on your brass buttons and silver shield. Oh, please come quick and don't forget your hickory stick."

"Bones and bow-wows!" exclaimed the Policeman Dog, "that little rabbit will be a long eared post some day if he keeps on talking in rhyme," and the good kindhearted blue uniformed protector of law and order took down his club from off the wall and bounded away for the Sunny Meadow.

"Dear me! Is anyone hurt?" asked little Mrs. Oriole from her nest in the Weeping Willow Tree. But no one answered—only Billy Breeze seemed to whisper:

"Look out! Look out for Danny Fox
He's left his den behind the rocks
He's in his tip-toe woolen socks."

AUSTRALIANS WIN AGAIN FROM THE HAWAIIANS IN DAVIS CUP PLAY

South Orange, N. J., July 29.—J. O. Anderson and J. B. Hawkes, Australians, defeated W. A. Ecklund and Bowie Dietrick, of Hawaii, in straight sets in the doubles of the American zone Davis cup play at the Orange Lawn Tennis club today. The scores were: 6-0, 6-4, 7-5.

The victory advances the team to the final of the American zone contests in which they will meet the Japanese. While there was much erratic playing by the Australians, they relatively outplayed their rivals in every department of the game.

The Australians easily won the first set, 6-0. The surety with which Anderson forced the net position, his skill at control for fast volleys, or softly dropped shots, left the Hawaiians no chance of a return. Anderson made several remarkable passing shots through the center of the opposing court. Ecklund was the unsteady member of the team on his side of the net.

In the fourth and fifth games of the first set, the Hawaiians forced the points to deuce. Then Anderson's shots carried the games as he brought off his placements. Hawkes was terrific overhead and his judgment of court length was excellent. This set was one-sided, the Hawaiians failing to steady at the critical periods.

Anderson lapsed into a streak of unsteadiness in the second set. His trouble was an inclination to play his shots too quickly. These errors proved costly and the Hawaiians, by Dietrick's fine all-court play and especially his fine volleying off fore and back-hand, sent the Hawaiians to the lead at 3-1 on games.

Anderson seemed to be under a strain. Ecklund and Dietrick made him the target of their volleys and also sent him wide of court for returns, so erratic did the tall Australian become with his outs and nets that Hawkes had to poach after the Hawaiians led 5-3 on games. By the fastest of playing, Hawkes covering court splendidly, the Australians went to 6-5 on games. Dietrick, by his fine volleying and driving carried it to 6-all and then Hawkes' aggressive playing won the set at 8-6 on games.

The Australians were unsteady in the third set. Anderson blew hot and cold, his shots into the net appeared inexcusable. He retrieved these errors by sensational placements, his sack hand often finding the open avenue through the centre of the court. The Australians went to the lead at 4-0 on games and then they fell to pieces.

Dietrick again was the hero as the Hawaiians pulled up to five-all, taking the tenth game at love by forcing play of a sensational character. Dietrick's fine judgment in switching across court and his blistering pace helped in these games. Then the Australians steadied, Anderson getting in his placements at the end to win the set-and-match at 7-5. Summaries:

	Sets.	Games.	Pts.
Anderson and Hawkes.	3	21	113
Ecklund and Dietrick..	0	11	81

YANKS BREAK EVEN IN DOUBLE HEADER

New York, July 29—The New York Yankees and Chicago broke even here today, the visitors winning the first game 3 to 2 and the Yankees the second 3 to 2. Faber defeated Bush in a pitching duel in the first game, the New York pitcher making his first appearance since breaking a finger several weeks ago. An error by Scott brought about Bush's defeat in the eighth inning.

The Yankees knocked out Cvengros early in the second game and continued scoring against Thurston. Shawkey held Chicago to three hits. Ruth's hitting and fielding featured both games. In the two games he hit a triple, three doubles and a single and drew a base on balls. The score:

ANTS WIN ONE-SIDED SLUGGING MATCH FROM CUBS

Chicago, July 29.—New York got an even break in the four game series with Chicago today by defeating the locals 15 to 3, in a slugging match which was very one-sided. The world's champions landed on Kaufmann in the second inning and drove him off the mound. They continued the attack against Dumovich and Russell while Ryan settled down after the second inning and kept Chicago's hits scattered. A crowd of 30,000 which overflowed in right field made ground rules necessary.

Cliff Heathcote, outfielder, of the Chicagoes, fell over the ropes in right field and had to retire from the game. It was first believed that he was seriously hurt, but the club physicians said the player was suffering more from shock. Jackson led the attack for the visitors with four hits including a triple and double and Stats and Frisch each cracked out home runs. Score:

Owing to the threatening weather on Sunday afternoon Manager Harry Collins of the Baltic A. A. called off the first game of the Taftville-Baltic serise. CY YOUNG, VETERAN PITCHER, AGAIN ON MOUND; PITCHES FOR OLD TIMERS

Cleveland, O., July 30—Cy Young, the only pitcher to win 500 games, showed today that he had lost none of his cunning when, pitching for a team of old timers of the Cleveland major league clubs of yesterday with the old Sandlotters of this, he struck out two men and allowed only one hit in the two innings he was on the mound. He also got one of his side's five hits, Chief Zimmer, who caught Young more than a decade ago, did the receiving.

The game, a five inning exhibition for the benefit of the medical protective fund of the Cleveland amateur baseball and athletic association, intended to be used in the event of injuries to sandlots and umpires, was attended by approximately 20,000 persons. The sandlotters won 6 to 4.

Nap Lajoie, considered by many the greatest second baseman the game has even known, and Bill Schwartz, who played third base, got two baggers. Other former major leaguers playing included Earl Moore, no-hit pitcher, who was Cleveland's act twenty years ago; Charley Smith, Homer Davidson, Larry Twitchell, Charley Hickman, Red Carney, Nick Altrock and Jack Craney.

The youngest player in the game was 42 and the oldest 62.

CY WILLIAMS STILL IN LEAD OF HOME RUN STARS

Chicago, July 29—Babe Ruth, leading home run slugger of the American league, last week tied Cy Williams, of the Philadelphia nationals, who has been leading both leagues in home runs but held his neck and neck strike for only a day.

The home run duel started on Tuesday when Ruth slammed out a four-bagger, tying Williams' record of 23 for the season. Williams on Thursday hit two homers and Ruth poled out one on Friday. Today Williams retaliated with two more.

Tonight Ruth had a total of 24 homers to his credit while Williams was credited with 27. Last week Williams led Ruth by only one homer. The other Williams, Kenneth, of St. Louis Americans, was third in the home run race in both leagues with 18 to his credit, he having batted out one circuit clout during the week. Leading home run hitters, including those with nine or more follow:

American League—Ruth, New York, 24; Williams, St. Louis 18; Heilmann, Detroit 14; Hauser, Philadelphia 12; Tobin, St. Louis 12; Miller, Philadelphia 10½ Brower, Cleveland 10; McManus, St. Louis 10; Speaker, Cleveland 9.

American League—Williams, Philadelphia 27; Miller, Chicago 13; Meusel, New York 13; Fournier, Brooklyn 12; Hornsby, St. Louis 11; Mokan, Philadelphia 10; O'Farrell, Chicago 10; Tierney, Philadelphia 10; Kelly, New York 9; Frisch, New York 9; Hargrave, Cincinnati 9.

BRITISH ATHLETES WIN AGAIN FROM FRENCHMEN

Paris, July 29—The annual athletic competition between British and French athletes ended today in a victory for the British by 69 points against 42. The competition was started two years ago. The British won each of the previous meets.

The French, however, had great hopes of winning this year, and the British feared defeat because several of their best men were unable to participate, one of them a divinity student a champion sprinter, who declined to race on Sunday.

The British team won the 100, 200, 400, 800, 1500 and 5000 metre races, and also the hammer throw, the hurdles and the relay race. The Frenchmen took the broad and high jumps and the weight throwing and discus events. The Frenchmen led in several of the races, but invariably were beaten in the last few yards.

RIVERVIEW TAKES FIRST GAME FROM TAFTVILLE

Tony West proved himself to be a better pitcher than Mike Morin of the Canadian League Saturday when he trimmed Taftville, 9 to 3, in the first game of the series between Riverview and Taftville. West should have had a shut out victory to his credit but errors in the sixth and seventh innings gave Taftville their three runs.

The Riverview team had no mercy on the Canadian Leaguer and started in to pound him unmercifully in the very first inning. In this frame the Riverview club won the game with four runs, but were not satisfied and added five more runs during the remaining eight innings. Clabby, Mills, Massey and West featured in the hitting for the Riverview team. Taftville was unable to hit West and not a small percentage of the Taftville hitters were retired on strikes.

EAST SIDE SERIES TO END THIS WEEK

This week promises to be red letter week on the East Side as the Married Men and Single Men series will come to a close. The count stands two games to one in the Married Men's favor and should the Benedicts win Tuesday night the series will be won with the Single Men in the dust, but should the Single Men come across the series will be even and the deciding game will be played on Friday evening. As an added attraction for Tuesday night the rival managers have secured the services of Prof. Geor. Houston's twenty piece brass band which will lead a short parade before the game and also play during the game and then lead the conquering heroes off the field after the game. It is a long time since the people of Norwich have heard the old popular brass bands and this added attraction should be a real treat to the loyal baseball fans who have watched the rival teams battle through five strenuous weeks. Both managers refused to make a statement in regard to their lineup but it is understood that the Married Men have signed Conrad McDowell to strengthen up their outfield. If this is really true it will swing the betting odds to the Married Men's favor.

Game at Hospital Tonight

At the state hospital diamond this evening at 6.30 sharp there will be a baseball game between the Single Men and Married Men of the institution. The Single Men will have a lineup that will be hard to beat for the manager has secured the following for the first game of the series.

Cowette will work behind the bat while Phillips will do the twirling. First base will be well taken care of by Fred Flower. At second base will be Coyle, former New Britain pitcher. At short stop the Single Men will have Leo Cimikoski who has played good ball at the infield and who has made many a pitcher look bad when he steps into batting. Third base will have a new comer whose name is Boyen.

In the outfield the Single Men will have Osterby, rf; Bellows lf; Thompson cf.

The Married Men will have: McNeeley c; Donovan p; J. Moore 1b; Flynn 2b; Burlingame ss; Brayman 3b. The outfield will have Maynard, J. Averill, Peterson. Tony West, the wonder pitcher, in this part of the country, will umpire. Henry Betting will be score keeper.

THE BIG GIANT.

In the last story, Little Jack Rabbit and the handsome prince were driving away in a coach with four prancing horses.

Well, by and by, after a while or maybe a mile, one of the horses lost a shoe, so the driver stopped and jumping down from his seat, ran back to pick it up, but just as he stooped over a great big giant sprang out of the bushes and swung his great club in the air, which so frightened

THE PHILIPPINE TROUBLE.

The suggestion appears in Washington dispatches that the administration has little sympathy with the demands of Manuel Quezon and other Filipino leaders for the recall of Governor-General Wood. From what we knew of General Wood it is to be presumed that his actions have been in accord with the Philippine policy of the United States government, but the attempt of native politicians to embarrass him have brought about a situation which must be squarely met. It will not do merely to ignore the Manila muddle.

The problem has been one that has developed under the so-called Jones act which governs American-Filipino relations and which seems to have been well calculated to engender friction in our distant possessions, for it has been criticised as susceptible of different interpretations in vital points that lead to a deplorable confusion of authority. The temper of the Filipinos is indicated by the unanimous resolution of the native legislature for the recall of the governor-general.

Early independence is the aim that the Filipinos have in view and the leaders identified with this movement assert that the Jones act provides for a sort of parliamentary government, with heads of departments responsible only to the native legislature. It is upon this point that they have met with a sharp divergence with the views of General Wood who holds that the cabinet officers are responsible to him alone as the representative of American sovereignty. Out of this basic disagreement over the status of the governor-general and his authority have arisen innumerable irritating controversies over removals and reinstatements.

It may be found necessary to amend the Jones act in order to settle these jurisdictional disputes. It is undoubtedly necessary to clarify the American position on the general issue of Philippine independence. Drifting at Washington will be productive of only increased tension and discord at Manila.

THE PEACE OF LAUSANNE.

The war between Turkey and Greece, which was actually ended some time ago, is formally ended by the treaty signed at Lausanne, over which there is great rejoicing in Constantinople, but far from a jubilant feeling in the capitals of the allies. Instead of being kicked out of Europe, the Turk remains and gets virtually all he asks, imposing a victor's terms of peace, although completely vanquished in the World war, of which the war with Greece was an aftermath.

In lieu of losing Syria, Mesopotamia and Palestine, perpetual trouble spots with which possibly he is not sorry to part, the Turk gets eastern Thrace and Constantinople, is relieved from the hated foreign control and is able to snap his fingers at his pre-war debts.

One distressing aspect of the situation arises for the minority populations in Turkish territory, who must now have the bitter experiencing of satisfying the Turkish demand for an "exchange of populations." Hundreds of thousands of Christians in Turkey must find new homes, and if the Turk plays true to form, their pilgrimage will be assisted by sword and bayonet. There will be no troops of the allies near at hand to act as a restraining inuence.

Among the many and varied reasons for the many concessions to the Turks by the powerful nations of Europe was the conflict of interests between Great Britain and France in the near east, which made harmony among the allies impossible and was used to full advantage by the wily Turkish diplomats. Of equal importance was the fact that in all the negotiations the Turks had the full interest and sympathy and support of the Mohammedan world, an influence to which both Great Britain and France are extremely susceptible because of their many subects who are followers of Islam.

It remains to be seen whether the peace of Lausanne has ended Europe's troubles with that historic troublemaker in Constantinople.

ANTHRACITE CLOSED SHOP.

Alleging that the closed shop would constitute a mondpoly, the operators have flatly refused the demand of the miners for a closed shop throughout the anthracite industry. The operators declared that they felt competently advised on the subject and were not willing to run the risk of federal prosecution on a monopoly charge. To this the delegates of the miners replied that labor is not a commodity and therefore not subject to monopoly. There may be, of course, labor monopolies in fact just as there are commodity monopolies.

The anthracite situation now is not unlike that of twenty years ago. May 12, 1902, the anthracite miners walked out, demanding, among other things, a closed shop. In October, 1902, President Roosevelt told them to go back to work or the government would seize the mines. They went back to work, agreeing to submit their grievances to a commission appointed by the president, and to abide by the commission's findings. Among the commission's decisions, published April 1, 1903, was a declaration that "no person shall be refused employment, or in any way discriminated against, on account of membership or nonmembership in any labor organization and there shall be no discrimination against or interference with any employe who is not a member of any labor organization by any members of such organization."

It will be recognised that the operators are obliged, under the law, to avoid anything resembling a conspiracy to join with the miners in a monopoly control of the supply of anthracite coal. It is the popular impression that the industry is out to extort money from the public, and doubtless a closed shop and control of 75 per cent of the output by eight companies would smack so much of the appearance of a monopoly that there would be a public demand for action looking to a plentiful supply of anthracite at a reasonable price. So far there has been no proof that the eight controlling companies are working in harmony to raise the price of coal but they are under suspicion and are in a position to make the most of a miners' monopoly of the privilege of delivering coal to the pit mouth. The public is in no mood to submit to another anthracite shortage and holdup this winter.

BIBLE AS MISSIONARY.

It is a suggestive and interesting point of view brought up by a reviewer of Papini's life of Christ, who speaks of the book's wonderful charm for the people of Latin countries, and its power over them. The reviewer concludes that this is due to the fact that Papini's book is little more than the New Testament and that the people of these countries are not familiar with the Bible as a whole. The book therefore comes with all the freshness of novelty and a new revelation. In countries where the Bible is more widely read and more of an old story, the reviewer finds the Papini book has less of an appeal. It may be said, however, that ignorance of the Bible on the part of many is appalling even in countries where the Bible is supposed to be read. Among these might we not expect to find the Papini book coming with the freshness of a new revelation?

All of which suggests an inquiry—what would be the effect of the gospel story of the life of Jesus Christ if it could be read by men and women for the first time, as something new, and just dug up out of the ruins of some long-buried city? Surely it would be profound. We know something of its appeal to peoples of pagan lands, and many must have longed to "recapture the first, fine careless rapture." It can not be, for the "rapture" is part of our inheritance, is in our very blood. There are compensations—many of them—but the loss resulting from familiarity with the record is real, and great. Things that once brought astonishment and joy are now accepted as a matter of course, and often conventionalized. Stock phrases have grown up about them, and there are certain "proper" feelings and emotions that one feels one must have.

Happily there is much in the New Testament that, to the thoughtful and reverent reader, seems new every time it is read. We have the great advantage of knowing how the life portrayed therein has fulfilled, and is still fulfilling itself, know much of its marvelous work in the world, and of its influence on the development of civilization. Its visible fruits abound on every side. So the Bible may still be a missionary even to those who think that they know it, to whom it is, as it were, an old friend. But what would one not give for the experience of reading the gospel history for the first time!

About this time of the year the annual summer vacation is either in prospect or retrospect.

In the impasse reached by the coal miners and the operators looms the shadow of another coal shortage.

At this distance, it appears as if some of the Filipino legislators have organized a pretty strong harm bloc.

WOMAN IN LIFE AND IN THE KITCHEN.

SUGGESTIONS FOR THE HOUSEWIFE

Ivory ornaments may be cleaned by rubbing with a soft cloth dampened in alcohol.

Nothing lengthens the life of upholstery like good brushing and careful dusting.

Go through your refrigerator each day and see that no stale food is allowed to stay there.

Borax sprinkled in all the cracks and crevices around the sink and the baseboards below the sink will keep roaches away.

Vinegars may be made from the juices of oranges, peaches and fruits—even from watermelon. They are fermented with yeast.

Have a wide roll made on which to wrap your doilies and table covers. Then you will not have any annoying creases or folds.

Save the wooden skewers that come in the meat and use them for cleaning the corners of window frames and other corners that collect dust.

Linoleum should be washed with soap and water and rinsed with clear water, then wiped dry. Only enough water should be used to remove the soil.

A sirup of granulated sugar and water will sweeten your iced tea more economically than just plain sugar.

When setting your table lay all flat silver in the order of its use, staring with the piece farthest from the plate on either side.

When you have left-over steak or chops, mince the meat and mix it with three good-sized mashed potatoes or the same amount of cold rice. Add three well beaten eggs, season and cook like an omelet.

If you hate to peel potatoes you can boil them until nearly done, then peel and continue the cooking. You save waste in this way and retain the best part of the potato — that near the skin.

Before putting milk into the saucepan, boil rapidly a few spoonfuls of water (enough just to cover the bottom of the pan) and it will never burn, however fierce the fire.

REMOVES IRON RUST.

To take out iron rust marks place the iron-rusted part over a small bowl three parts full of boiling water so that the steam can come through to the material. Dissolve a teaspoon of salt in a dessert-spoon of lemon juice, then dip the feather end of a quill in this mixture and rub over the iron mark till it disappears, dipping the material occasionally into the water in the bowl.

A HANDY CABINET.

Between the windows and the kitchen sink one could have a built-in closet. It could have two shelves and a few hooks. In this cabinet why not keep cleaning powders, hand and laundry soap, vegetable and sink brushes, hand lotion and salves for burns?

NET OF COARSE MESH.

For the country house there is a curtain net with a large coarse mesh. It comes in different shades to carry out the color scheme of the room.

HEALTH AND BEAUTY.

For an effervescent salt bath, crush and mix well together five ounces of tartaric acid, five ounces of carbonate of soda and three ounces of rice flour—or corn starch. Put a generous handful into the tub of hot water just as you are ready to step in. One girl told me "it felt like bathing in champagne."

A strong but quite harmless bleach for the skin is made by mixing plain starch and lemon juice into a thin paste and spreading it on the face to dry. If this irritates, use plain water with the starch, as is often advised in this column.

Warts can be treated with a paste made of one ounce of glycerine and four drachms of acetic acid. The druggist will mix this. Put it only on the wart, though it is quite harmless if any goes on the sound skin.

No astringent toilet water is better than this—enough tincture of benzoin added to clear water to make a milky fluid.

HOW TO DON SWEATERS.

Sweaters quickly lose their shape, becoming baggy and drawn, if not put on properly the first time worn. The worsted jacket coat or slip-on should be pulled well up on the neck in the back and the sleeves should be well pulled on over the shoulders and brought close to the armhole. This manner of putting on the sweater prevents the neck from pulling down in the back and the sleeves from getting unshapely and baggy.

MAKES A COZY PORCH.

Now that the porch has become the principal living room during the summer months—a place where one may read or sew, breakfast and dine and entertain one's friends—it is not surprising that year by year its furnishing and decoration is becoming a more and more important problem, or that the shops are showing an increasing variety of increasingly fascinating things designed especially for outdoor living.

Much can be done to add to the total effect by the use of cheerful fabrics in cushions and chair covers, and a plentiful supply of jars and vases of different sizes filled with fresh flowers or trailing green accomplishes quite as much toward making the porch inviting as a quantity of extravagant equipment.

PANSIES OR RIBBON.

Pansies made of shaded ombre ribbon in tones of yellow and tones of purple are a lovely trimming for the large leghorn hat. The edge of the brim may have two rows of pansies around it, one above and one below, while the crown may be completely covered with the purple and yellow pansies. These pansies are made be running a gathering thread, scallop fashion, along the ribbon, and thus drawing it into petals. The pansies for this use do not have to be attached to stems, as they are fastened directly to the hat.

TO POLISH SILVER.

If a quantity of silver is to be cleaned try this method: Mix sweet oil and whiting to a smooth, creamy paste. Apply with a flannel cloth. Allow it to stand until dry. Polish first with cotton flannel, then with chamois. This method will not eat or injure the silver plating.

DICTATES OF FASHION.

Little girls' frocks of dark green, dark henna and navy blue dotted Swiss are trimmed with Irish and filet lace.

A new version of the popular sleeveless sport frock is of cricket flannel, and is worn with a perfectly tailored blouse of white silk.

A gown of white satin, on very simple lines, is hemmed inside with cerise satin. The red appears also in the huge sash bow tied at the left side.

A dance frock that any young girl would enjoy wearing has a long bodice of pink taffeta and a skirt composed of narrow pleated chiffon ruffles, shading from pale pink to deepest rose.

In anticipation of early fall modes are new hats fashioned on the lines of a draped beret and either of blue taffeta or black velvet.

As attractive as it is easily copied is a hat covered with Indian squares. The corners are arranged to form a pattern on the brim.

New and exceedingly pretty is a hat with a brim of silver lace and a crown of black velvet. It is the fashionable shape, cloche at the sides and short in back.

Black and brown are colors seen more and more today in conjunction, though they would seem rather odd for hot weather except for the lightness of the material. A black chigon restaurant frock has a cape of brown tulle, closely plaited.

Silk mitts, in white and colors, are once more with us today. They are a charming addition to the sleeveless gown. Most of them have narrow frills of silk or organdie, often in white, but often also in a contrasting shade.

This is the moment for wide stripes of a romanesque sort. Clocks of light, soft woolen fabrics with very broad stripes in several colors, are seen at the country clubs. The ever-present fur collar of silver, blue or gray fox tops them.

WEAR WITH SWEATER.

Many women find that the most beautiful sweater does not look well worn over a skirt, because the waistline of the skirt breaks the attractive appearance of the sweater by beginning a space of another color from that showing through the upper part.

To overcome this unattractive feature, wear a slip the length of the sweater in place of the corset cover, brassier or shorter undergarment. The slip can be made loose or tight like a brassier, but it should be worn over the skirt, covering the waistline, and should reach to within half an inch of the bottom of the sweater. When sleeveless slip-ons are worn over blouses the blouse should be worn outside the skirt.

YARN TRIM POPULAR.

Worsted yarn embroidery that trims every kind of gown mothers wear is now a popular infant dress trimming, as well as for the little child. Handkerchief linen, dotted swiss and mull dresses are the thing. And little gingham and other wash-goods smocks are made bright and festive with gay-colored worsted yarn embroideries.

LACE GOWNS FAVORED.

At the present time lace frocks are very much in evidence wherever fashionables foregather. One of alternate flounces of pleated cream and black lace is of particular interest, while a youthful frock is made of wide cream lace joined together with narrow two-toned taffeta ribbon in shades of canary and green.

LAUNDRY HINTS.

Rag rugs may be washed like any other cotton material.

Before cleaning, every piece of lace or embroidery should be looked over for any necessary repairs.

Wool should always be washed in soft water. If only hard water is available, soften it with borax or ammonia.

You can iron table cloths better on a table than on an ironing board, since it is possible to expose more of the surface at one time and less handling is the result.

Lace requires extra care in laundering. Often it is advisable to soak lace in soapy water to which a little ammonia or borax has been added. This loosens the dirt so that less rubbing is required.

FOR NEW GAS MANTLE.

Before removing a new gas mantle from the box pass a thread through the loop of the top. Withdraw the mantle carefully and then immerse it entirely in a glass of vinegar for a minute or two, leaving outside only the thread, the two ends of which should be tied together. Lift out and hang to dry; place on the burner fork and burn off in the ordinary way. Gas mantles treated in this manner will not only last longer, but will give a more brilliant light.

FOR SUMMER TAN.

The best remedy for sunburn is to protect the skin as much as possible, as prevention in most cases is better than any cure for sunburn which we know anything about.

Preserve your skin and your complexion by taking a few precautions, you may acquire a summer coat of tan by adding a little each day instead of trying to do it all in one or two days, and in that way save yourself much suffering and unnecessary annoyance.

1923 COMBING JACKET

The vogue for yarn trimming has extended to that useful boudoir accessary—the combing jacket. An attractive model is made in one-piece of natural colored linen, unbleached muslin or other wash material in the natural shades. The edge is buttonholed, stitched with bright-colored worsted yarn of medium weight. Or the yarn may be crocheted on to the edge. A simple design is embroidered down the front of the jacket. A braided belt of the yarn, with small pompons at the end, ties about the waist.

CLEANS ENAMEL TUB.

To clean an enamel bath which has become discolored take a soft cloth, dip it in turpentine and rub the bath. Polish with a duster. Enamel baths may also be cleansed with kerosene. They should be well washed out afterwards with hot water and soda to remove the smell of the kerosene.

MOIRE VANITY BAG.

Nothing could be more chic than the summer vanity bag of moire silk. It is made in a very tailored style, cut like a envelope, beautifully stitched, and fitted with a wrist strap. All the fittings are mounted in moire, the colors usually being white, sand or navy.

CONCERNING WOMEN.

American canning art will be demonstrated in France by two Iowa girls.

The Amsterdam Stock Exchange has a woman member—the first in its history.

Swedish women now are admitted on the same footing as men to the public service.

Women are to be reinstated in the metropolitan police force in London and with increased authority.

Miss Elda Soller, Scandinavian music conductor, is said to be the only woman leader of a 100-piece band.

Miss Caroline Dormon of Louisiana is claimed to be the only woman actively engaged in forestry in the United States.

In England the women are no longer known as the "weaker sex," for statistics show that women now live longer than men.

SHOE SHELF.

It is much handier to keep your shoes on a shelf in the closet than to have them scattered on the floor; and such a shelf need take up only a very little room.

NEAT WOODWORK.

In keeping your woodwork neat, remember to remove spots as soon as they appear. If dirt and grease are allowed to remain it means that they will disappear only after severe measures.

RECIPES.

Raspberry Shrub.—Pick over four quarts of large, red raspberries. Put half the berries in a large earthen bowl and pour over two cups of pure cider vinegar; cover the bowl and set aside in a cool place until the next morning. Press and strain off the liquid. Put the remaining two quarts of berries into a clean earthen bowl and let stand until the next morning; press and strain off the liquid and heat to the boiling point; and sugar in the proportion of one pound to each pint of the liquid; bring again to the boiling point and let boil twenty minutes. Store in sterilized cans or bottles that can be tightly corked. This is a most refreshing beverage for use in hot weather, two or three tablespoons of the liquid being added to each glass of water. Chill the "shrub" before using.

Spinach Souffle.—Melt three tablespoons of butter in a small sauce pan, add three tablespoons of flour sifted with one-fourth teaspoon each of salt and pepper, and gradually, one cup of thin cream of rich milk, stirring briskly until sauce is smooth. Add one cup of cooked spinach that has been well drained and pressed through a puree strainer, the yolks of three eggs that have been beaten until thick and light; then fold in one-half cup of grated Parmesan cheese (American cheese may be used) and the whites of three eggs beaten until stiff and dry. Bake in a buttered baking dish, set in a pan of hot water twenty-five minutes. One-hlaf cup of soft bread crumbs, a tablespoon of grated cheese stirred into one-fourth cup of melted butter may be spread over the top before baking. Serve with veloute or cream sauce.

IN THE PUBLIC EYE

"No man should start to make his fortune until he is forty. I never saved any money before that age. Men and women should devote their lives until they are at least forty to one ideal—that of making themselves as efficient as possible in their business or profession. If they do that they will make so much money after they are forty that all the money they scrimped for and saved before they were forty won't matter." This is the advice of Henry Ford, the motor-car king. Until the age of forty Mr. Ford apparently had failed to "find his bent." But all the time he was exercising his mechanical genius in an endeavor to devise something that would benefit mankind. Finally he struck the right idea. He set out to build better automobiles than anyone else could build at the same price. Now he is turning out 7,000 cars a day to meet the demand. On his fortieth birthday he was in debt. Today is his sixtieth birthday, and he is reputed to be the richest man in the world.

Here's a youngster of 5 who intends to take things easy. He had just been told by his father that it was planned for him to go to school for 12 years and after that to college for four more. Then his father asked: "Did you learn a lot in school today?"

"Oh, I guess I learned enough, if I've got that many years to learn the rest of it," was the satisfied reply.—Boston Transcript.

The Meat of the Wheat

STARCH is the "meat" of the wheat berry. It is the great energy-producing element of the grain.

But, in order to do you any good, it must be thoroughly digested, and it is right here that such a food as Grape-Nuts renders special service.

Grape-Nuts, made from wheat and malted barley, supplies the meat of the wheat in most digestible form.

That is because in the making of Grape-Nuts a large proportion of the starch is converted into dextrins and maltose—forms into which all starch elements must be changed before they can be assimilated by the system.

Grape-Nuts not only digests easily, but also aids in the digestion of other foods.

Crisp, delicious Grape-Nuts with milk or cream is a complete food. It supplies the life-essential vitamin-B; also iron, phosphorus and other important mineral elements for nerve, tooth, bone and other body structure.

The daily use of Grape-Nuts is a form of health insurance which has demonstrated its value for more than 25 years.

ANNUAL ART EXHIBIT OPENS AT OLD LYME

(Special to The Bulletin.)

Old Lyme, July 29.—The twenty-second of the successive annual exhibitions of the Lyme Art association opened Saturday. The exhibition as a whole is impressive; the efforts of a group of workers living close to nature; conservative, but a conservatism of truth and sincerity. It has been written: "The study of mathematics involves the most accurate of thinking; the study of music, painting and sculpture, the deepest order of feeling." Mere cleverness in the handling of pigments never made a picture alone; the heart must go with it. In many of the canvases shown, the love of nature and of truthful interpretation of her moods is strongly felt.

One of the outstanding canvases, Winter Nocturne, by Gregory Smith, received a majority vote of the members, was acquired by the Museum Purchase fund, and allotted to the Museum of Arts of Grand Rapids, Michigan. The William S. Eaton Purchase Prize went to Clark G. Voorhees for his picture, A May Morning, very rightly named, for this is a picture which gives out the spirit of spring in New England. It is plain that Mr. Voorhees knows his subject and has lived close to nature in her quieter moods. Percival Rosseau in Summer Time never went further in his painting or knowledge of the dog then he has in this picture, for it is painted with a greater freedom and a finer conception than any of his previous efforts. These dogs take their place in a landscape quite subordinate to them, yet a part of them. It is difficult to remember when a picture of dogs has made a greater appeal.

Ivan Olinsky shows two pictures of graceful young figures, with more and more a feeling for color. These are also two of Mr. Olinsky's finest things. Charles Ebert paints Lyme Church, the favorite subject of so many painters in and about Old Lyme. Will Howe Foote's brilliant Interior, though small, attracts from across the room. With two pictures shown, Mr. Bruce Crane gives again the impression that simplicity is, after all, an outstanding quality in any work of art. His larger one, Awakening Day, is a poem in paint—delicate, luminous, refined. Hanging near is Guy Wiggins' Dover Valley, Vermont, different in treatment and subject from his Winter Solitude, shown in his exhibition in Hartford last winter. Robert Vonnoh sends his recently finished portrait of Lieutenant-Governor Hiram Bingham, a distinguished portrait of a distinguished gentleman. A new note from a new exhibitor is that of Lyme—Night, by Eugene Higgins. This picture, with a different conception, is a feature not to be overlooked. Clifford Grayson shows three pictures, one of which, painted in Grez, makes a distinct appeal. A charming example of child portraiture is seen in Robert Tolman's Howard, son of A. J. Fuller of Hartford. Striking winter scenes are shown by Ernest Albert, Henry R. Poore and Ann Crane—so realistic one shivers thinking of the poor painters when working on them.

Wilson Irvine loves the autumn, rock-strewn Connecticut woods, as Robinson and Chadwick love the season of laurels in June. George M. Bruestle the positive effects when the sun fights the clouds for mastery. Exceedingly good canvases are shown by Charles Vezin, Benjamin Eggleston, Henry Bill Selden, Bertrand Bruestle and Maxwell Albert, while still life subjects are shown by Harry L. Hoffman and Lucien Abrams, cattle pictures by William H. Howe and Matilda Browne. Sheep by Carleton Wiggins lend both variety and quality to the whole. Three small statuettes in bronze by Bessie Potter Vonnoh shown in the entrance hall represent the sculpture, and miniatures by Lydia Longacre complete the east and west rooms.

There are many other worthy paintings which will form the subjects for a second review.

With the beginning of this week families who have leased cottages during July, will start to return home, while others will take their places for August.

MAKES $500 GIFT TO FITCHVILLE CHURCH

Owing to the pleasant feelings that have always existed between the members of your church and the Palmer Brothers company in Fitchville, I desire to make this gift of $500 to be used in any manner you see fit in St. John's church, was the substance of a letter received last week by Rev. Phillip J. Mooney, pastor of St. Andrew's church of Colchester, of which St. John's church, Fitchville is a mission.

The donation of $500 was the gift of George S. Palmer of New London of the Palmer Brothers company and was greatly appreciated by Father Mooney who had worked diligently for many years with the mission church in Fitchville. The gift comes at a time when it can be used for the improvement of the church, the work of which has been underway for several weeks.

Although the gift was made a week ago Father Mooney refrained from making it public until Sunday during that the first public announcement be made from the sanctuary of St. John's church directly to the parish members, to whom the gift means most. The announcement was made Sunday morning by Father Mooney who said it was a pleasure to him to know that such a feeling prevailed in Fitchville between employe and employer, and that he hoped that such a spirit would continue to exist, and in thanking Mr. Palmer for his most generous gift requested that prayer be offered for the health of Mr. Palmer and family, also for the continuance of the feeling of friendship now existing.

In speaking of the work now being done at St. John's church Father Mooney said that it was most gratifying to him to note the cooperation of members of the parish and non-members, in aiding in the plan to make extensive alterations to the church, both inside and outside.

For some time past painters and carpenters have worked at the church and have finished the work on the exterior. The work of redecorating the interior of the edifice is in charge of a Boston firm of decorators and it is hoped this work can be completed before many weeks, making St. John's mission the equal to any in the state, in beauty.

With the coming of summer the automobile traffic has shown an increase and during the past few Sundays it has been a pleasure to Father Mooney to see many automobile parties stop in the village and attend the mass at the church.

In his Sunday morning sermon Father Mooney in co-operation with the clergy throughout the country preached on "Law, not War," with a purport of leading the minds of the parish to thoughts of a peaceable settlement of national and international affairs.

SANG FIRST SOLEMN HIGH MASS AT ST. MARY'S MEMORIAL CHURCH

Sunday was a memorable day in St. Mary's parish, when a boy of the parish, Rev. Alfred Francis Driscoll, elevated to the Roman Catholic priesthood on Sunday, July 8th by Cardinal Desire Mercier, in the historic cathedral at Louvaine, Belgium, sang his first solemn high mass in his native parish. The seating capacity of the Memorial church was taxed to capacity, over 1,000 relatives, friends and parishioners being present, a fine tribute to Fr. Driscoll and his family.

Shortly after 10 o'clock the church commenced to fill rapidly, for along with honoring the new priest the parishioners were to receive the papal blessing carried by him from Pius XI, to which was attached the plenary indulgence. The altar was dressed with choice cut flowers, while at the epistle side was a handsome floral basket, the gift of the Connecticut Council of Catholic Women.

The officers of the solemn high mass were: Celebrant, Rev. Alfred Francis Driscoll; deacon, Rev. John

REV. ALFRED FRANCIS DRISCOLL

P. Walsh, Bridgeport; sub-deacon, Rev. Rocco J. Guerriero, St. Patrick's church this city; master of ceremonies, Rev. Charles H. Corcoran; censes bearer, Rev. Raymond La Fontaine.

The last two being seminarians from St. Patrick's church, this city, now in the seminaries at Rochester, N. Y., and Baltimore, Md., preparing for the priesthood. Seated in the sanctuary were Revs. John J. McCabe, of Jewett City, and Rev. Richard P. Morrissey, Plainfield, also Thomas Semple, nephew of Fr. Driscoll, the celebrant, serving as an altar boy.

The sermon was preached by Rev. William A. Keefe, rector of the parish whose text dwelt on the dignity and power of the priesthood. After congratulating Fr. Driscoll and his family Father Keefe referred to the record of the new priest in the seminaries at Hartford, Rochester, N. Y., and to the final four years of his course at Louvaine, Belgium, ending with his elevation to the priesthood three weeks ago when he received his commission at the hands of Cardinal Mercier.

The preacher went on to relate the public life of a priest in his mission to bring peace and happiness, though misunderstood at times as to his purpose, as was the Saviour in His public life. He further went on to picture the monuments in this country as well as abroad which stand as a beacon light to illumine some priestly character.

In conclusion Fr. Keefe requested the prayers of the congregation that Fr. Driscoll may have a glorious and happy career in the priesthood of Jesus Christ. The discourse was ably presented, showing the value and the power of the priesthood to every community. The vast assemblage knelt to receive from Fr. Driscoll the papal blessing carried by him from His Holiness Pius XI. At the close of the mass the vast congregation went to the altar railing to receive from Fr. Driscoll his individual blessing.

The musical programme was of the usual high order. Preceding the mass Organist Henry La Fontaine gave a half hour organ programme. Millard's mass in G, was sung by the choir with fine artistry and effect, the ensemble singing being very harmonious. During the offertory Miss Sadie Driscoll, sister of the new priest, and well known soprano, rendered Ave Marie, by Chase, in excellent voice. At the close of the mass William Driscoll, violinist, of Jewett City, gave Bercuse, by Godard, and Ave Marie, Gounod, playing with much appeal.

The soloists were Misses Sadie Driscoll, soprano; Eleanor Donovan, soprano; Rose Malone, contralto; Nicholas Spellman, tenor; John Fontaine, tenor; Horace Corning, baritone.

Following the church services relatives and intimate friends from fourteen cities went to the former home of Father Driscoll where a dinner was served, the Wauregan house catering. The floral decorations were handsomely arranged at the tables. Special guests of Fr. Driscoll at the gathering were Rev. Fathers William A. Keefe, John P. Walsh, Rocco J. Guierriero, Charles H. Corcoran, Raymond La Fontaine, John J. McCabe, James C. Tyler of Jewett City, Charles Cavanaugh of Crescent Beach, John H. Fitzmaurice, Waterbury, William H. Kennedy, South Coventry and Richard P. Morrisey, Plainfield.

Following the dinner the home was thrown open to visitors for a reception to the priest between the hours of 3 to 5.

Rev. Alfred Francis Driscoll was born in Branford, Conn., on October 13, 1896, and is nearing his 27th birthday. He is the son of Cornelius J. and Margaret (Connor) Driscoll. In his childhood the family came to Norwich, some 22 years ago.

He was graduated from St. Patrick's school in this city in the class of 1910 and ranked well in his studies and the Norwich Free Academy, class of 1914. He entered St. Thomas' seminary, Hartford, for a three years' course, after which he went to St. Bernard's seminary, Rochester, N. Y., for two years. Bishop Nilan of the Hartford diocese finally ordered him to the American college at Louvain, Belgium, where he was ordained to the Roman Catholic priesthood by Cardinal Desire Mercier, a conspicuous figure in the late World war, on Sunday, July 8th. Fr. Driscoll's career in the Hartford diocese will be watched with interest. Within a few days Bishop Nilan will give him an assignment in this diocese.

Cornelius J. Driscoll of 215 North Main street, the father of the priest, is a moulder at the Richmond Radiator plant in this city. The happy family circle comprises the Misses Annie, Sadie, Marguerite and Catherine, at home, Thomas J., located in business at Fitchburg, Mass., and Jerome, a medical student at the University of Vermont, Burlington, Vt. A sister, Mrs. William Semple, died a few years ago.

TELLS OF VISIT MADE TO I. W. W. HEADQUARTERS

A report on the summer school in New York and stories of the undercurrents of the metropolis of America not known to the average citizen gave members of the Central Baptist church and Trinity Methodist Episcopal church "food for thought," Sunday night when the two congregations met in a union service at the Central church.

Rev. David A. Pitt, D. D., pastor of the Central church, explained the purpose of the union service; that the congregations might learn through their pastors of some of the things being done in Christian work in New York city. Rev. J. Harlow Graham of Trinity Methodist church spoke on the trip to the I. W. W. headquarters made during the first day of the school.

Before starting his report, Rev. Mr. Graham recommended, as Rev. Dr. Pitt had previously done, the reading of the message of ex-President Woodrow Wilson in the Atlantic Monthly, a message filled with the spirit faund prevailing in many places visited in New York.

Speaking of the trip to the I. W. W. headquarters, Rev. Mr. Graham said that he was impressed with the character of the people he met. Of course, he said, the I. W. W. wouldn't welcome the minister into its ranks as the minister is not a producer. He is not a fellow workman, thereby probably being classed as a "fellow loafer." He said that many of the men he met were widely read. Several of them were reading books of political theory, history, theology and others. When we think of the I. W. W. he said, we must think of what is going on in the lumber camps of the northwest, then in cities thoughout the country, for it shows the trend of thought.

We must ask, is capitalism wrong, or is the system used wrong? One or the other must be true. All I. W. W. members have a grievance against the capitalist. They as a class have turned their back on religion and the thought of brotherly love, feeling that the only solution can come through material things. They feel that if a man has enough of the material things his wants will be satisfied and he will be content. In this, I disagree, for human nature is not built that way. There is always the longing for just a little more.

These I. W. W. are members well trained and if I could accept their fundamental philosophy I could accept all the rest. But I cannot do this for they believe that the working class and employer class have nothing in common. Many of them are pacifists, most of them intelligent, and all believe that the producer should rule. They don't want to work for wages. They want shares, a joint partnership. They lay great stress on freedom of speech, the very thing that the founders of the constitution fought for, freedom of speech, press and right of assemblage.

In the cooperative scheme we have an old story, nothing new. It has been done in European countries for years. We in America have learned to produce but we haven't yet learned to market at a low overhead. There is too much middleman, and this is one of their arguments. Even our Methodist conference believes in this and urges farmers to band together and work and market their crops co-operatively.

There is one thing I. W. W. isms that should be learned and this is the remark of a brilliant women, a believer in the same principals, who said, "Really, if you want to keep the joy of enjoying your theories, don't put them into practice, just keep them for theories." This is good sound advice for everyone who has theories that run along radical lines or too high for actual life.

Rev. Mr. Pitt, the next speaker, told of the trips made during the second day of the meeting. Starting out from Madison Avenue Presbyterian church, he said, we went to the church named after John Huss and saw the work of the Madison Avenue church among the foreign people. It was noticeable that all were foreign women and children. The treatment of the men in religious learning while in Europe has turned them into atheists and non-church goers.

Next we went over to Harlam, the great negro headquarters, where over 200,000 negroes have settled in houses once occupied by whites. Here we saw the mammoth Baptist church erected by negroes at a cost of $250,000, by those who pledged one-tenth of their income for a year to build a church where they might receive spiritual guidance. We also learned that a Methodist church is soon to be built as large, if not larger than the Baptist church.

Nearby was a big hall with a seating capacity of 7,000, where followers of the "martyr" Garvey, meet each night and learn the ritual of their belief and dream of the days of negro supremacy. Here we saw things that made us wish the Christian church contained such strong convictions, people filled with determination to spread the gospel of brotherly love throughout the world. In this hall everyone was intent on their work, desperately in earnest, ready to die for the ideals of their belief. These people do not want to be the white man's equal. They say, "What, be the equal of a white man? That is not what we desire. We want to be something, we want to do something, be supreme, not just be the equal of the white doing the puny things he has done." They dream of the black man's world, and these people and 500 other groups just like them all over the world are determined that the day of the black man shall come, when the red, green and black flag shall be seen wherever negroes live, a national flag.

I would like to be pastor of a church where the members were so desperately in earnest. They made a Christian ashamed for his puny championship of the cause of Christ. I tell you that the danger in the world does not lie in the uprising of the sinners. But from the down-sitting of the saints.

These people are studying deep subjects discussed in this hall. Admission of 25 cents is asked, and the hall is crowded night after night. Just imagine how Norwich people would go to hear these talks. You couldn't fill half a church if you asked no admission. They tell us that the only difference between east New York and west New York is that the east side is reading books, while the west reads the newspapers, magazines and light fiction.

I am thankful that in the midst of these radical thinkers stand negro

BATTERY B STARTS RECRUITING CAMPAIGN

Battery B, 182nd Field Artillery started a campaign Saturday afternoon to recruit the unit to full strength before it leaves for Fort Eustis, Va., early in September for the annual 15 days tour of duty.

The big 155 mm gun was placed in position on railroad property Saturday and attracted considerable attention during the day. The tractor also came in for its share of interest.

Several recruits have already been signed up at the recruiting tent that has been erected just behind the big gun, and the show cards placed along the gun and on the tent attracted the attention of many young men.

The battery needs about 15 men to bring it up to full strength and it is hoped that by next week this can be done, as the campaign comes to a close at that time.

Next Saturday afternoon the battery will give an exhibition gun drill that will no doubt be interesting to watch. The Norwich battery has been selected by Major K. P. Lord of the regular army, instructor on guns, to train a model gun crew to be used in the instruction of the other batteries at Camp Eustic.

OVERTURNED CANOE PROVED TO BE FLOATING LOG

At Crescent Beach Saturday evening a national guardsman created considerable excitement when he spread the news that he had seen a canoe tip over a short distance from the shore. He told a sergeant that he could see someone clinging to the overturned canoe.

Several loud blasts from the three striper's whistle brought guardsmen scurrying down the beach. A speed boat was pressed into service and after a short hard run to the spot pointed out to them they discovered that the overturned canoe was but a large log floating serenely along the shore.
